Content of Cambridge English: Proficiency (CPE)

Cambridge English: Proficiency, also known as Certificate of Proficiency in English (CPE) consists of four papers. The Reading and Use of English paper carries 40% of the marks while the Writing, Listening and Speaking papers each carry 20% of the marks. It is not necessary to pass all four papers in order to pass the examination. If you achieve a grade A, B or C in the examination, you will receive the Cambridge English: Proficiency certificate at Level C2. If your performance is below Level C2, but falls within Level C1, then you will receive a Cambridge English certificate stating that you have demonstrated ability at C1 level.

As well as being told your grade, you will also be given a Statement of Results – a graphical profile of your performance, i.e. it will show whether you have done especially well or badly on some of the papers.

Paper 1 Reading and Use of English 1 hour 30 minutes

There are seven parts to this paper and they are always in the same order. For Parts 1 to 4, the test contains texts with accompanying grammar and vocabulary tasks, and separate items with a grammar and vocabulary focus. For Parts 5 to 7, the test contains a range of texts and accompanying reading comprehension tasks. The texts are from books (fiction and non-fiction), non-specialist articles from magazines, newspapers and the internet.

Part	Task Type	Number of Questions	Task Format	Objective Exam Folder
1	Multiple-choice cloze	8	You must choose which word from four answers completes each of the gaps in a text.	3 (48–49)
2	Open cloze	8	You must complete a text with eight gaps using only one word in each gap.	2 (30–31)
3	Word formation	8	You need to use the right form of a given word to fill each of eight gaps in a text.	1 (14–15)

Ring the changes

Speaking

1 Everyone goes through changes, whether by choice or because of something outside their control. Talk about changes that have happened to you or might happen in the future, relating them to these phrases.

- a change for the better
- the earliest change you can remember
- a new location
- a change of direction in your life
- a change of heart

Which two phrases above are examples of idioms?
Find a third idiom on this page.

Idiom spot

At C2 level, you need to understand and use phrases and idioms where the meaning is not transparent. You will probably know the individual words used, but this may not help! Some examples of common idioms are given below. Choose the correct option (a or b) to complete each definition. These idioms are used in the Listening section.

EXAMPLE: If something happens out of the blue, it is
a) unexpected b) creative. Answer a)

- 1 When things fall into place, events happen to a) change the order of a list b) produce the situation you want.
- 2 If something goes downhill, it a) gradually becomes worse b) picks up speed.
- 3 If something is on the cards, it is a) likely to fail b) likely to happen.
- 4 When you are talking about a change in your life and you say the rest is history, you mean that a) it happened a long time ago b) you are sure that people know what happened next.

Listening

2 1.02 You will hear five different people talking about a key change in their lives. Tick each speaker's life-changing moment. There is one extra that you will not need.

life-changing moment	1	2	3	4	5
being made redundant gaining media attention meeting 'Mr Right' heading the wrong way losing something special stepping in for someone

3 1.02 Listen again to check your answers. Then choose one of the speakers and describe what happened to him or her.

Vocabulary

Phrasal verbs

Exam spot

Phrasal verbs are tested in Parts 1 and 4 of Paper 1. Remember that their use is generally informal, so they should be used with care in Paper 2, where the tasks mostly require a more neutral or formal register.

You will already have come across many phrasal verbs, but now you need to add to this knowledge. If there are gaps in your learning, try to fill them in. How many phrasal verbs can you come up with from the recording in 2? Remember that some phrasal verbs contain two particles rather than one (an adverb and a preposition), as in the last example.

- 4 Match the verbs to the correct particle(s) to form phrasal verbs that were used by Speakers 1–5. Four of them are ‘three-part’ phrasal verbs.

EXAMPLE: break up (3)

verbs	particles
break	catch
cut	end
help	jump
settle	take cheer	come get	hang pay	run
track	turn around	at back	down
in	off
on	out
up	with

- 5 Now complete these sentences using a phrasal verb from 4 in a suitable tense. Sometimes the passive form will be needed.

EXAMPLE: The whole family moved to Switzerland last month and their two children are settling in well at school there.

- Their lives changed completely once the loan as it meant they could treat themselves to meals out and weekends away.
- An old school friend me on the Internet and we met up recently to compare our life stories.
- The company offered Maria a post in the New York branch and she the chance.
- During the last recession, local businesses recruitment and no graduate trainees as a result.
- Jeff explained that shortly after they bought the house together, he and his wife and she moved to another town.
- People often manage to advance their careers by the right people and telling them what they want to hear.
- Everything fell into place – she was offered the scholarship at Harvard, the flight was booked and her missing passport just in time!
- My brother has had a change of heart and is willing to me with decorating the flat after all.

- 6 Read the text below, which is from the introduction to a book on feng shui. Decide which answer (A, B, C or D) best fits each gap.

The ancient Chinese philosophers who considered feng (wind or air) and shui (water) to be the (1) of mankind also understood that these were not the only supportive elements flowing through the (2) They perceived a subtler (3) , calling it chi or ‘cosmic breath’. This life force is well-known to acupuncturists, who have (4) elaborate maps of the ‘meridians’ or channels it uses to flow through the body. Kung Fu masters believe that chi can be concentrated in the human body, allowing someone to (5) almost supernatural feats, such as the breaking of concrete blocks (6) by using the edge of their hand. A real feng shui master is able to (7) the flow of chi in a site, and may advise changes to the environment to (8) health, wealth and good fortune.

Exam spot

Part 1 of Paper 1 is a short text with eight gaps. Don't panic if you find unfamiliar words in options A–D. Try the other words in the gap first. If you're sure they don't fit, choose the word you don't know.

1.2 Grammar clinic

1 Read these short texts about alternative ways of approaching city life. The highlighted parts illustrate some of the grammar areas that C2 learners continue to have problems with. What are they?

2 Tick any grammar areas below that you feel you need to work on. Add your main grammar problem if it is not listed.

- Modal verbs
- Passives
- Conditionals
- Perfect tenses
- Relative clauses
- Reported speech
- Uncountable nouns

A LIFE LESS ORDINARY

« Knit the City

From knitted graffiti to guerrilla crocheting – needle crafts have exploded in ways entirely unforeseen by previous generations. Our grandmothers would no doubt approve of twenty-somethings knitting something similar to a tea cosy (which they used to cover their teapots), even when it is large enough to keep a London phonebox warm! This original item of knitwear has been made by Knit the City, a subversive group of knitters who also operate in other capital cities. In Berlin, for example, a woolly 'Currywurst' was created entirely out of yarn recently. For those not in the know, the Currywurst is a popular fast food item – over 800 million of the sausage treats are sold every year!

Pink Lady Flamingo »»

You may have come across the extravagantly dressed Pink Lady Flamingo, whose real name is Maryanne Kerr, busking on the underground in London. She auditioned for an official licence to perform her music, having experimented with many previous careers. "I've been busking since I broke a recording contract with a major record company," said Maryanne, "because I refused to be dictated to." She added that she became a busker more than forty years ago and announced that she is in her late seventies now and still busking.

3 Explain how tense choice alters the meaning in these sentences. In which two sentences is there no change in meaning?

- a Mirek has gone / went to Gdansk on business.
- b Our society has been suffering / was suffering from high unemployment for decades.
- c We were given / have been given more time to complete the task.
- d Top government ministers have been dealing / have dealt with the problem.

- f I've thought / been thinking about what you said.
- g Is there anything else we could have done / will have done?
- h Come October, we will have lived / will have been living here for eleven years.

4 Answer these questions so that they are true for you, using perfect tenses.

- a How long have you been learning English?
- b What have you never done that you would like to do?
- c What change has been made to your town or city recently that you don't approve of?
- d Which single change would most improve your quality of life at home?
- e What may have changed in your life by this time next year?

5 Complete the text below, using the words in brackets in such a way that they fit the space grammatically.

Innovation in our lives

Across the centuries, people's daily lives (1) (continually transform) by innovation. One of the most obvious characteristics of the 20th century was the rapid growth of technology, with individual quality of life (2) (improve) immeasurably as a result. Basic labour-saving appliances such as washing machines, refrigerators and freezers were commonplace in the home by the 1960s and the demand for these and other 'white goods' (3) (further stimulate) by the availability of cheap electricity and noticeable increases in personal wealth during that decade.

Personal computers first made their appearance in the home in the 1970s, but surely few people (4) (be able to) imagine then that the home computer could evolve into the super-fast, super-sleek machines of today. Nor could they (5) (even think) that handheld mobile gadgets would (6) (use constantly) by all of us, in our desperation to keep up with everything from office correspondence to world news.

So what lies ahead of us? By 2025, will we (7) (embrace) even more sophisticated technological aids – or will the world's resources (8) (deplete) by mankind to such an extent that there will be insufficient electricity to support these advances? Only time will tell.

Reading into Writing: Summarising ideas

1 What changes do you notice in the world around you? Identify the changes shown in the pictures and categorise them, choosing from the adjectives below. Then suggest other changes that could be classified under these categories.

commercial	environmental	physical political	social	technological

Vocabulary

Word formation

2 The adjectives above are formed from nouns. Generally, the suffix -al is added to the noun, as in environmental. Explain the formation rules for commercial and technological.

The suffixes -able and -ive frequently combine with verbs to form adjectives, as in favourable and supportive. Explain the formation rules for creative and variable.

The suffix -ous combines with nouns, as in courageous. Give two more examples.

Other common adjectival suffixes added to nouns are -ful and -less, as in meaningful and harmless. Give two more examples of each.

3 For sentences a–j, replace the words in italics with a single adjective formed from one of the verbs or nouns given. What adjectives are formed from the four remaining words?

adventure	alternate	disaster	dispose exhaust	experiment	flaw	hope identify	mass	notice	philosophy
predict	speech	understand

EXAMPLE: I've been given this very lengthy and complete list of all the repairs needed in the flat. Exhaustive

- a My boss's response to my plea for changes to my job description was exactly what I was expecting.
- b If the weather is unfavourable, do you have any other suggestions to replace our original plans?
- c Both sides in the conflict are expressing their optimism that the ceasefire will hold.
- d Jeremy seems to have calmly accepted the news about the break-in.
- e That play I went to see last night was trying something new in its use of dialect.
- f I was incapable of any reply when Ella told me she had quit her job.
- g It's really easy to see how much fitter Liam has become since he started swimming regularly.
- h Your last piece of writing was without any mistakes whatsoever.
- i Many of today's products are used only once and then thrown away, which is having an impact on the environment.
- j The updating of the university's computer system has had extremely bad and far-reaching consequences.

Exam spot

In the Paper 2, Part 1 compulsory task, you will read two short texts in order to summarise and evaluate them. You will need to reproduce different ideas concisely, using your own words wherever possible.

- 4 In extracts 1 and 2, important information has been underlined. Do the same in 3 and 4. Then answer questions 1–3 below the texts.

1 We pick up on health and social status from facial features, as shown by a recent research project where people were unconsciously attracted to healthy females and wealthy men, even when they only had a picture of a face (without make-up or jewellery) to judge them by.

2 It was in 1856, while working in his tiny laboratory at home, that William Perkin produced, quite by chance, the colour mauve, which not only revolutionised the dye industry but also led to important innovations in perfume, photography and, most significantly for modern medicine, to the development of aspirin.

3 Rather than burgers and fries being a product of the social changes seen over the last fifty years in America, the author suggests that fast food brands were to a large extent responsible for these changes, as they profoundly affected both lifestyle and diet.

4 Tiny holes found in human teeth estimated to be over 8000 years old are now believed to be the earliest evidence of dentistry, for when these holes were examined with an electron microscope, researchers found their sides were too perfectly rounded to be caused by bacteria and have therefore proposed that they were drilled by prehistoric dentists.

People form opinions of others by looking at their faces.
What has been omitted?
- 2 Which phrase in text 1 could be replaced by the verb assess or evaluate?
- 3 Which underlined words in text 2 could be replaced by others?

- a Mauve not only radically changed the dye industry but also led to new discoveries of anything from perfume to aspirin.
- b By cooking up mauve in his lab, Perkin pushed the dye industry forward and set the ball rolling in other industries too, such as perfume and photography and aspirin.
- c In accidentally discovering mauve, Perkin transformed dyeing and many other areas, notably medicine.
- d Perkin discovered a special pale purple colour and this discovery was revolutionary for the dye industry and also for the pharmaceutical industry, since it led to the innovation of aspirin.
- e Aspirin owes its development to Perkin, who found mauve by chance in his laboratory at home.
- f Commercially-speaking, Perkin's chance discovery was very important, as other innovations followed, for example the development of aspirin.

- 6 Now write summary sentences for texts 3 and 4, referring to the parts you have underlined and using between 12 and 20 words for each. Use your own words wherever possible.

Exam folder 1

Paper 1 Part 3 Word formation cloze

In Part 3 of the Reading and Use of English paper, you will be asked to read a text and complete the eight numbered gaps with a form of the word in capitals at the end of the line. There is an example at the beginning of the text.

There are three main categories of changes that are tested. These are affixation (suffixes and prefixes), compound and grammatical changes. Unlike lower level examinations, at Proficiency level there is no limit to the number of changes which might be required to the root word.

Below are some examples of the changes you might need to make.

Affixes

noun to adjective flaw to flawless noun to negative adverb effect to ineffectively adjective to negative adverb definite to indefinitely verb to noun act to interaction verb to plural noun apply to applicants adjective to verb deep to deepened

1 Do the following for practice. Make sure you check the following:

- do you need to make the word plural?
- is a prefix needed?
- does any prefix need to be negative?

- a There are a number of activities now CURRICULUM being offered at the school.
- b People have always enjoyed the effects of sea air. BENEFIT
- c Tony is a really OPINION

Compounds

Compounds are often tested at this level.

EXAMPLE:

- a The of the meeting COME
was rather inconclusive.
Answer: outcome
- b His brother had a second-hand car which was barely ROAD
Answer: roadworthy

2 Match a word from A with one from B to form a compound noun or adjective. The words in B can be used more than once.

- | | |
|----------|----------|
| A | B |
| frame | worthy |
| up | fall |
| out | date |
| wind | work |
| rain | break |
| credit | turn |
| down | proof |

3 Read the Exam advice and then do the task below.

EXAM ADVICE

- Read through the text carefully and decide which form of the given word you need to use.
- Be careful as you will need to use a negative prefix or another form of prefix at least once.
- Check to see if a noun needs to be plural.
- All the words must be correctly spelled. American spelling is acceptable.
- Write your answers in CAPITAL LETTERS on your answer sheet.

Use the word given in capitals at the end of some of the lines to form a word that fits in the gap in the same line. There is an example at the beginning (0). Write your answers IN CAPITAL LETTERS.

Example: 0

W	I	L	F	U	L	L	Y

IT'S ONLY SKIN DEEP

We are the only animal that chooses what it will look like. True, the chameleon changes colour – but not (0) WILFULLY. Unlike us, it doesn't get up in the morning and ask itself, 'What shall I look like today?', but we can and do. Indeed, the (1) of body decoration points to the conclusion that it is a key factor in our development as the (2) life-form on our planet.

By (3) their physical appearance our ancestors distanced themselves from the rest of the animal kingdom. Within each tribe this helped them to mark out differences of role, status, and (4) Our ancestors (5) developed extraordinary techniques of body decoration for practical reasons. How to show where one tribe ends and another begins? How to (6) in a lasting way the significance of an individual becoming an adult member of society? (7), without the expressive capabilities of such 'body language' we would have been (8) less successful as a species.

Speaking

- 1 Work with a partner. Look at the photos. What expectations would you have of a holiday in each of the places?

On which holiday might you

- get off the beaten track?
- be able to chill out?
- possibly have to rough it?
- end up spending a fortune?
- get by on a shoestring budget?
- enjoy being a culture vulture?
- get back to nature?
- be in the lap of luxury?

If you have had such a holiday, did it live up to your expectations? Have you ever had a holiday which exceeded/didn't live up to your expectations?

Exam spot

In Part 7 of Paper 1 there are a number of short texts or one long text divided into sections. You need to read the sections carefully and then look at the questions. Underline your answer when you have found it. Make sure that your underlined text fully answers the question.

Reading

- 2 You are going to read an article about holidays and what we expect of them. Read through the article quickly to get a general idea of what it is about, ignoring the highlights for now. What does the writer think about holidays?

The way we travel now

A

The prospect of a holiday is liable to persuade even the most downcast that life is worth living. Few events are anticipated more eagerly, nor form the subject of more complex and enriching daydreams. They offer us perhaps our finest chance to achieve happiness – outside of the constraints of work, of our struggle for survival and for status. The way we choose to spend them embodies, if only unknowingly, an understanding of what life might ideally be about. However, holidays almost always go wrong. The tragicomic disappointments of travel are a staple of office chat; the half-built hotel, the sense of disorientation, the mid-afternoon despair, the dreary fellow travellers, the lethargy before ancient ruins.

B

I remember a trip to Barbados a few years ago. I looked forward to it for months. But on my first morning on the island, I realised something at once obvious and surprising; that my body proved a temperamental partner. Asked to sit on a deckchair so that the mind could savour the beach, the trees and the sun, it collapsed into difficulties; the ears complained of an enervating wind, the skin of stickiness and the toes of sand lodged between them. Unfortunately, I had brought something else that risked clouding my appreciation of my surroundings; my entire mind – not only the part that had planned the journey and agreed to pay for it, but also the part committed to anxiety, boredom, self-disgust and financial alarm. At home, as I had pored over the photographs of Barbados, I had felt oblivious to anything besides their contents. I had simply been in the pictures; alone with their elements. But melancholy and regrets were my bedfellows on that Caribbean isle, acting like panes of distorting glass between myself and the world.

C

There was a trip to a hotel in France a friend took with his wife. The setting was sublime, the room flawless – and yet they managed to have a row which, for all the good the room and setting did them, meant that they might as well have stayed at home. The row (it started with who had forgotten the key in the room and extended to cover the whole of the relationship) was a reminder of the rigid, unforgiving logic to which human moods seem subject – and which we ignore at our peril. Our capacity to draw happiness from aesthetic or material goods seems critically dependent on first satisfying a more important range of emotional or psychological needs, among them the need for understanding, for love, expression and respect.

It may be necessary to accept that the anticipation of travel is perhaps the best part about it. Our holidays are never as satisfying as they are when they exist in an as-yet-unrealised form; in the shape of an airline ticket and a brochure. In the great 19th-century novel, Against Nature, by JK Huysmans, the narrator goes on a few holidays which go wrong and then decides never to leave home again. He has the itineraries of the major shipping companies framed and lines his bedroom with them. He fills an aquarium with seaweed, buys a sail, some rigging and a pot of tar and, with these aids is able to experience the most pleasant sides of a long sea voyage without the inconveniences such as sea-sickness, storms or uncongenial fellow passengers. I continue to travel myself but there are times when I too feel there might be no finer journeys than those provoked in the imagination by remaining at home slowly turning the pages of an airline timetable.

- 3 You need to decide in which part of the text you will find the answer to the questions. Do the following question for practice.

Which section mentions a number of unanticipated problems faced by the writer?

You will see that there are problems mentioned in sections A, B, C and D (highlighted). However, which section mentions problems which are 'unanticipated' and 'faced by the writer'?

Now do questions 2–8.

Which section mentions the possibility of the writer altering a previous pattern of behaviour?

negative emotions being ever present?

the fact the some conditions must be met for other aims to be achieved?

the frequency of a certain topic being raised?

the possibility that an unfulfilled objective may be more desirable?

the writer finding it impossible to achieve his goal?

the belief that the selection of a holiday is a product of an unconscious desire?

Vocabulary

- c Seasoned / Practised travellers know exactly how to get an upgrade on their bookings.

- 1 When we want to talk about the future in English we have to use a variety of tenses, modals and expressions, not just will do. The context of the sentence is what tells us which aspect of the future to use.

For example, there are many different variations possible for the verb in brackets here: What you (do) tonight?

Answers

- a What are you doing tonight?
- b What will you do tonight?
- c What are you going to do tonight?
- d What will you be doing tonight?
- e What will you have done tonight?
- f What were you going to do tonight?

Before you can decide which aspect of the future to use, you need to know the context. With a partner, discuss when each of the forms above would be used.

→ pages 178–179

Note – the present simple is also used to express the future when talking about travel arrangements, e.g. The ship leaves on Saturdays, and also about facts that can't be changed, e.g. Tomorrow is Wednesday.

- 2 Choose the best alternative in sentences a–s.

EXAMPLE: I think I will / 'm going to faint – let me get some air!

- a He never does any work, I'm sure he's going to get / he's getting the sack.
- b That will be / is going to be the postman – he usually comes round at this time.

- l This time next year we will have finished / will finish our exams.
- m Don't let him read in the coach – he'll feel / he's going to feel sick.
- n What will you be doing / will you do if the flight is delayed tomorrow?
- o Tomorrow is / will be Tuesday.
- p I will have / am having caviar tonight – it's already in my fridge!
- q I'll ring you on my mobile when I will arrive / arrive.
- r Stop worrying – the train is arriving / will be arriving soon.
- s Will / Shall I help you?

- 3 With a partner, decide what you would say in the following situations.

EXAMPLE: Your birthday tomorrow. I'm 22 tomorrow. / I'll be 22 tomorrow. (fact/neutral future)

- a Your intention to clean your car tomorrow.
- b You see dark clouds in the sky.

If you 'thumb a lift', you signal with your thumb for a vehicle to stop and give you a free lift. Many nouns for parts of the body have related verbs that are used in phrases or idioms.

Match the verbs 1–6 with a–f to form phrases or idioms. Which verb can be used twice?

1 elbow	a the burden

Writing folder 1

Part 1 Essay

Part 1 is the compulsory question on Paper 2. You have to write an essay based on two short texts, which either present opposing or complementary viewpoints. There will be two main points in each text. You must summarise and evaluate the ideas expressed, using your own words as far as possible and adding your own ideas on the topic where relevant.

The essay should be between 240 and 280 words in length. Remember that you will only have 90 minutes to complete the whole of Paper 2, so use your time wisely. It is better to spend some time planning what you are going to write, rather than attempting to do a rough copy of a whole answer.

- 1 Read the two texts below and say whether they contain opposing or complementary ideas about museums today.

Even in our information-rich digital age, when there are diverse ways of occupying our leisure time, museums continue to play a fundamental role in society. Over the last decade in particular, museums have become more community-orientated, and the majority seek to be inclusive rather than elitist, reaching out to everyone. This change of heart has necessitated a degree of creativity in the presentation of information. Objects rarely 'speak for themselves' and, where a low reading age must often be assumed, museum curators have looked to modern technology to breathe more life into exhibits, whether through interactive techniques, or accompanying audio-visual effects.

Text 2

The purpose of a museum is to stimulate learning and broaden the horizons of its visitors, yet many museums nowadays appear to neglect this responsibility in an attempt to entertain rather than educate. The dumbing down of exhibitions is widespread – in short, the medium has become more important than the message. Learning is all too often compromised by technological wizardry, which may impress on a superficial level but essentially trivialises, and provides a content-lite 'experience'. Whether this is in response to government cuts or merely reflects a trend among museum directors, it is undoubtedly a change for the worse.

- 2 Decide on the four main points that are covered in the texts, choosing from a–f. Underline the parts of each text that confirm your choices.
 - a Given the wealth of information online, museums are no longer relevant.
 - b Judicious use of technology has made museums more accessible to the public.
 - c Many museums create innovative displays but this is at the expense of substance.
 - d Museums have had to reduce the number of objects displayed due to a lack of funds.
 - e In contrast to their former position in society, museums now seek to engage a wider audience.
 - f The recent shift in policy is undesirable as museums have lost sight of their core role in society.

- 3 Using the sentence openers below, rewrite your four choices from a–f in 2, in your own words.

The first text suggests that ...

The second text raises the issue of ...

The writer is of the opinion that ...

Additionally, it is argued that ...

- 4 Read the sample answer below, thinking about these questions.

Does the writer

- summarise all four points from the texts?
- evaluate each of the four points?
- use their own words throughout?
- add relevant ideas of their own?

EXAM ADVICE

- Read the texts carefully.
- Underline the four key points.
- Decide how far you agree with these points.
- List some relevant ideas of your own.
- Plan your answer in four or five paragraphs.
- Select one or two important phrases to quote from the texts.
- Remember to use your own words where possible.

The texts consider the role of museums in our modern world. Both texts identify a shift in museum policy, which has had an impact on how museums are seen by the general public.

The first text views museums positively and the writer suggests that a real attempt has been made to attract a more diverse audience. In order to support this, museum curators have had to come up with alternative ways of displaying the objects in their possession and have relied on new technology to “breathe more life” into them. This is an interesting point of view that justifies the use of innovative technology as a way of engaging people’s interest in museum exhibits, especially those who are less literate.

In contrast, the second text raises the issue of “dumbing down” and its writer claims that those in charge of museums have lost their way. They have forgotten that the purpose of a museum is to stimulate learning and broaden the horizons of its visitors and the writer is of the opinion that this is a change for the worse, because the medium has become more important than the message.

The first text outlines how museums have taken steps to maintain their role in our “information-rich digital age”, while the second text complains about the use of technology in museums nowadays.

- 5 Rewrite the second sentence of Paragraph 3 in your own words. You may find some of this alternative vocabulary useful.

purpose – aim, function, objective stimulate – encourage, promote a change for the worse – less desirable, an unfortunate outcome the medium – the method of delivery

the message – the subject matter, the content

- 6 Write a final paragraph of about 60 words, including your own ideas about the points made in the texts.

Speaking

- 1 Look at the following sayings about the weather and discuss them with a partner. Do you think they are true? Do you have similar sayings in your country? Do sayings such as these have any place in our modern world?
- Red sky at night, shepherd's delight, Red sky in the morning, shepherd's warning.
 - Cows lying in the field means rain is on its way.

Listening

- 2 1.04 You are going to hear a writer called Peter Watkins being interviewed by the programme presenter, Sue Manchester. He is talking about his book, which discusses the behaviour of animals and birds in relation to the weather.

For questions a–j decide whether these statements are true or false.

- Sue has little faith in the accuracy of sayings about the weather.
- Peter says that nowadays people are less interested in sayings than in previous times.
- Peter says that low-flying birds suffer badly in storms.
- Peter believes that there is a logical explanation for why certain birds change their habits.
- According to Peter, insects have difficulty in sensing changes in the atmosphere.
- Sue concludes that the rain goose's behaviour is surprising.
- Peter says that weather sayings used to be confined to the farming community.
- Peter says that the sayings fulfilled a basic human need for control.
- Sue agrees with Peter about the contradictory nature of some of the sayings.
- Peter says that in the past people relied on animal and bird behaviour to predict the weather.

Phrase spot

In the recording, Peter Watkins uses the phrase: life and death.

Pairs of words used like this are fixed – you cannot say death and life.

Using a dictionary to help you, decide whether these pairs are in the right order and explain how you would use these phrases.

give and take	black and white again and time	thick and thin
high and dry	go and touch
fortune and fame	blood and flesh
first and foremost	soul and life

Complete the sentences below with the correct phrase.

- Jenny promised to live with Nigel through

Review of conditional clauses

- 1 How does the weather affect your mood? Do you think people's characters are influenced by where they live and the weather they are used to? Give some examples.
- 2 Read this article about the effect of the wind on mood.

There's an old English saying: When the wind is in the east, 'tis good for neither man nor beast. Whether you believe in folklore or not, this one's got a grain of truth in it. Winds have been associated with a rise in the levels of serotonin, a compound which occurs in the brain and which controls mood, sleep and blood circulation. This rise in serotonin has been found to occur in the Swiss population during a Föhn wind. The Föhn is said to be responsible for traffic accidents rising by fifty per cent and a rise in industrial injuries by twenty per cent.

It's not only the Swiss who suffer. Los Angeles is occasionally buffeted by the Santa Ana, a hot dry wind named after the canyon it sometimes blows through. One study found that murders rose by up to a half during a Santa Ana, no matter if it blew during winter or summer. In California's early days, defendants in crimes of passion were able to plead for leniency, citing the wind as an extenuating circumstance.

The quality of the air can be a force for good, however. The Victorians especially prized sea air for its health-giving properties. Sea air is charged with negative ions which makes it feel invigorating. To get a similar effect you can stand next to a waterfall, or even under a domestic shower.

Now, with a partner, complete the sentences using information from the article.

- a When the Föhn blows, ...
- b If you go to the seaside, ...
- c Even if the Santa Ana blew at a different time to normal, ...
- d I wouldn't have murdered my wife ...
- e You are less likely to have an accident if ...
- f If I were you, ...

- 3 What kind of conditional is used in each sentence in 2? When do we use these forms?

EXAMPLE: People can be adversely affected if a certain wind is blowing. Zero conditional (present tense + present tense). This is used to express a universal truth or habitual action.

Corpus spot

The Cambridge Learner Corpus shows that even at C2 level, learners still make mistakes with basic conditional clauses. Be careful to use the right tense and check whether a negative or positive verb form is needed. The learner example below contains a common mistake – what is it?

EXAMPLE: If someone treats these two things equally, he can easily succeed in both, unless he does not succumb to the temptation of laziness.

4 There are other forms of the conditional besides the four basic patterns. Look at the following examples and discuss how they are formed and what they express.

EXAMPLE: But for my father's help, I wouldn't have been able to complete my course.

'But for' is used in third conditional sentences and has the meaning of 'If it hadn't been for'.

- a Should you happen to see Lucy, tell her to ring me.
- b If you would sit down, I'm sure Mr Peterson will see you soon.
- c I'll diet if you will.
- d You can borrow the money from me as long as you pay me back.

- f Provided that you tell the truth, nothing will happen to you.
- g You could be a lot thinner now, if you hadn't given up your diet so easily.
- h Were the Prime Minister to announce lower tax increases, the country would be delighted.

- 3 Read through the article below on anger and answer the questions that follow.

New psychological research suggests that air rage, road rage and other seemingly irrational outbursts of wild-eyed, foaming-at-the-mouth fury could be extreme responses to the violation of a set of unwritten rules that choreographs our every waking moment without our even realising it. Apparently, we walk around in a sort of invisible bubble which is egg-shaped – this is because we allow people to come closer from in front than from behind – an entire language is expressed via the amount of distance we choose to keep between each other. In northern Europe and North America (lovers, close friends and wrestling partners aside) the average depth of the bubble is about a metre. When it's intruded upon the physiological responses can range from feelings of mild annoyance and tension to a pounding heart, raised blood pressure, sweating and severe anxiety. Tension levels increase hugely when someone comes too close and you get a feeling of being invaded, and responses fall into two categories. The first kind are blocking tactics when you avert your gaze, put your hand up at the side of your head or just make yourself immobile; then there are the tension and anxiety-reduction responses, hair-pulling, foot-tapping, getting red in the face and ultimately leaving the scene.

- 1 Where do you think you would read this article? What evidence is there to support your decision?
 - A in a magazine or newspaper
 - B in a psychology textbook
 - C in an advertisement
 - D in a health awareness leaflet
- 2 Why does the writer describe air and road rage as 'seemingly irrational'?
- 3 List both the inward and the outward signs which may occur when one's space is invaded.

Exam spot

In Part 1 of Paper 2, you will need to summarise some information. Summarising will use new language and not incorporate large amounts of the original. It is important to manipulate words, especially as you have to write a summary within a set word limit. One way of doing this is to use a negative adjective.

- 5 Read through the text in 3 again and then write a summary sentence using no more than 18 words. Where possible, try to use different words from the ones in the text and try to use some of the vocabulary from 2 and 4.

Paper 1 Part 2 Open cloze

In this part of Paper 1, you will be asked to complete a text which has eight numbered gaps. The missing words will have a mainly grammatical focus, although there might be a few vocabulary items. Each gap must be filled with one word only and must be correctly spelled.

It is very important to read through the whole text carefully before you decide to write anything down. Some answers may be dependent on a sentence which comes later in the text. Awareness of the writer's train of thought and logical argument is often tested at Proficiency level.

The areas which are often tested are:

- fixed phrases, e.g. as a rule, to all extent and purposes
- relative pronouns, e.g. who, which
- linkers, e.g. moreover, let alone
- prepositional phrases, e.g. out of order
- phrasal verbs, e.g. to turn up, to take over
- prepositions, e.g. result in, regardless of
- collocations, e.g. seriously interesting, widely read
- reflexive pronouns, e.g. myself, himself
- articles, e.g. the, a
- comparison, e.g. fewer, many

EXAM ADVICE

- First of all read through the whole article carefully and go back and decide which type of word is missing from each gap, e.g. a verb, a noun or a preposition, etc.
- Make sure that your word makes sense in the text and fits grammatically.
- Use only one word in each gap.
- Write your answers in CAPITAL LETTERS on your answer sheet.

Example: 0 AS

Read the Exam advice and then do the task.

Read the text below about French photographer Henri Cartier-Bresson and think of the word which best fits each gap. Use only one word in each gap. There is an example at the beginning (0). Write your answers IN CAPITAL LETTERS.

Example: 0

HENRI CARTIER-BRESSON

Henri Cartier-Bresson helped establish photojournalism (0) AS an art form.

He believed that photography (1) capture the meaning of outward appearance and so his camera accompanied him (2) he went in the world.

In his twenties, he travelled in Africa, recording his experiences with a 35-millimetre Leica. Its portability and the ease with (3) one could record instantaneous impressions were hugely advantageous. This type of camera was particularly relevant to Cartier-Bresson. It lent (4) not only to spontaneity but to anonymity as well. To such an extent (5) Cartier-Bresson wish to remain a silent, and even unseen, witness, that he covered the bright chromium parts of his camera with black tape to render it less visible.

Cartier-Bresson travelled unceasingly, but there was (6) compulsive or hurried about his travels or his photography. One story tells of how Cartier-Bresson was present during the student riots in Paris in 1968. Undeterred (7) the explosive nature of the riots, he continued to take photographs at the (8) of about four per hour.

Paper 1 Part 4 Key word transformations

There are six key word transformations in Paper 1, Part 4. Read the Exam advice and then complete the exam task.

Reading

- 3 This extract is from the novel Reef by Romesh Gunsekera, a Sri Lankan author. Read it once to form an overall impression. What is the relationship between the narrator and Mister Salgado?

Before Miss Nili first came to our house on the poya-holiday of April 1969, Mister Salgado only said to me, 'A lady is coming to tea.' As if a lady came to tea every week. It had never happened before in his life, or mine, and yet he acted as if it were the most natural thing in the world. Luckily he gave me some warning. He was concerned to make sure there was plenty of time to prepare, even though he acted so nonchalant. I made everything – little coconut cakes, patties, egg sandwiches, ham sandwiches, cucumber sandwiches, even love-cake ... I made enough for a horse. It was just as well: she ate like a horse. I don't know where she put it; she was so skinny then. So hungry-looking. I expected her to bulge out as she ate, like a snake swallowing a bird. But she just sat there on the cane chair, one leg coiled under her, her back straight and her face floating happily in the warm afternoon haze while huge chunks of the richest, juiciest love-cake disappeared into her as into a cavern.

'You like cake?' he asked her stupidly.

She made a lowing sound between bites. It made him happy, and although I didn't approve of her being quite so uninhibited so soon in our house, I was touched too.

'Where did you get this, this cake?' Her lips glistened with my butter, and one corner of her mouth had a line of golden semolina crumbs which smudged into a dimple as she spoke.

'Triton made it,' my Mister Salgado said. Triton made it. It was the one phrase he would say with my name again and again like a refrain through those months, giving me such happiness. Triton made it. Clear, pure and unstinting. His voice at those moments would be a channel cut from heaven to earth right through the petrified morass of all our lives, releasing a blessing like water springing from a river-head, from a god's head. It was bliss. My coming of age.

'Your cook? He makes a lovely cake,' she said, endearing herself to me for the rest of my life.

After tea she said she had to go. I went to get a taxi for her. She stayed with him alone in the house while I went up to the main road. It didn't take long. A black tortoise of a taxi with a butter-coloured top came along, and I rode in it like a prince back to the house.

The driver croaked the old horn warning them of our approach. We rolled in right up to the porch. I got out and held the door open while Mister Salgado helped her in. 'Bye-bye,' she said to him and then turned to me. 'That cake was really good.'

The taxi rolled down to the gate and veered to the left. The wheels wobbled, making the whitewalls around the rim go fuzzy. Mister Salgado watched the vehicle slowly disappear.

'The lady ate well,' I said brightly.

'Yes.'

'Sir, the love-cake was good? Really good?'

'Yes.'

'And the patties also she liked?'

'They were good.'

They were more than good. I knew, because I can feel it inside me when I get it right. It's a kind of energy that revitalises every cell in my body. Suddenly everything becomes possible and the whole world, that before seemed slowly to be coming apart at the seams, pulls together. But however confident I was about the perfection of what I produced, like everybody else, I needed praise. I needed his praise and I needed her praise. I felt stupid to need it, but I did.

She came again the following poya-day and then regularly almost every weekend after that for months. I made mutton patties and a small cake every time, and she always said how wonderful they were. Mister Salgado ate nothing: he watched her eat as if he were feeding an exotic bird. He drank tea. He always drank lots of tea: estate-fresh, up-country broken orange pekoe tip-top tea. He looked completely content when she was there. His face would be bright, his mouth slightly open with the tips of his teeth just showing. It was as if he couldn't believe his eyes, seeing Nili sitting there in front of him. I would bring the patties in four at a time, fried only after she arrived to ensure they came fresh and hot-hot, straight from the pan. When she finished the last of the first batch, I would wait a minute before bringing in a second plate. 'Nice and hot-hot, Missy,' I would say, and she would murmur her approval. After she finished a couple of the new patties, I would come again with fresh tea. 'More patties?' She would shake her head – I would always ask when her mouth was full. This allowed Mister Salgado to speak on her behalf. 'No, bring the cake now.' It was our little ritual. I would nod, she would smile and he would look longingly. I would give her enough time to savour the aftertaste of the patties and feel the glow of coriander inside her. Let the tea slip down to cleanse her palate and subdue the nerves that had been excited by the spice and fattened by the meat, and only then bring out the cake on a small salver for Mister Salgado to cut.

Review of past tenses

- 1 What implements would people have been using 2,000 years ago when eating their food? How long ago was the first metal cutlery made, do you think? Why has the recent design of the Swedish 'spork' proved so successful (see picture below)?
- 2 Read the text, ignoring any underlining. Then explain briefly how the appearance and use of the fork has changed over the past 400 years.

Fork-like implements for spearing food have been used for over 2000 years. For example, the Ancient Romans used to use special spoons with one prong or two at the end of the handle for winking out shellfish.

- 5 The first 'modern' fork is thought to have been used in the eleventh century by the wife of the Venetian Doge. Forks are mentioned again three centuries later, in 1361, in an inventory of the plate owned by the Florentine Commune. However, the first real evidence
- 10 that forks had spread as eating tools came some two hundred years later, in a 1570 engraving of a knife, fork and spoon. In 1605, King Henri III of France and his companions were satirised for their fork-wielding effeminacy. 'They would rather touch their mouths
- 15 with their little forked instruments than with their fingers,' wrote Thomas Artus, who claimed that they looked especially silly as they strove to capture the peas and broad beans on their plates – as well they might have done, since early forks had long, widely
- 20 separate prongs and scooping with them must have been impossible.

- 25 On returning home from Italy in 1611, the Englishman Thomas Coryat bore the news that he had seen forks in Italy and had decided to adopt them. The reason
- 30 for the Italian custom was, he explained, that these extremely fastidious, ultra-modern people considered that any fingering of the meat that was being carved at table was a transgression against the laws of good manners, 'seeing all men's fingers are not alike cleane'.

However, even Coryat did not regard forks as being for eating with, but for holding the meat in place while carving.

Although in the course of the seventeenth century there was some use of individual forks, people would 35 more often share forks with others, wiping them carefully on their napkins as they would spoons. It was only in the nineteenth century that eating with a fork truly began to proliferate, and at this time there were important modifications to its basic design. Craftsmen had been making forks with three prongs, but these were now shortened, moved closer together, and a fourth 'tine' commonly added. With the fork's design in transition, one-handed eating was increasingly in vogue: the knife was put down once 45 the food had been cut up and the fork was then used to take the food to the mouth. Diners with yet more elaborate manners sought to perform this manoeuvre for every mouthful consumed. This form of 'zig-zag' eating was still customary among the French bourgeoisie in the 1880s, though the English were successfully introducing a new fashion, where the knife was kept in the right hand and the fork held in the left, much as we have been doing ever since. 50

Part 2 Review

In Part 2 of Paper 2, you may be asked to write a review of a book, film, TV programme, concert, or other media event. In addition to reviewing your particular choice, you are likely to have to comment in a more general way, as in the sample task below. Read the question carefully, so you know exactly what is required.

- 1 Look at the photograph and write three descriptive sentences about the sea.
- 2 Read this exam task and look at the paragraph plan.

Your college magazine has invited students to contribute a film review to a special feature entitled Special effects: essential nowadays – or distracting? Write a review of a film you have seen that uses special effects and say whether you think they are an important aspect of today's films.

- Lead in to review
- Introduce film - 'The Perfect Storm'
- Describe its special effects
- Evaluate importance of special effects in general

- 3 Decide how well the sample answer on page 39 follows the plan. What improvements would you make in terms of content and organisation?

EXAM ADVICE

- When writing a review, provide a balance of information and opinion.
- Do NOT describe the whole plot, as this is inappropriate.
- Introduce your opinions with a variety of linkers.
- Use rhetorical questions to preface opinions and ideas.
- Show your range of vocabulary, including specialist terms.
- Name the film (book, play, etc.) early in the review.

This is a very good example to consider. In one way, it is not a typical Hollywood film, as there is no happy ending, but in other ways - the actors used, the money spent, the special effects - it is.

Why is it 'perfect'? It is actually a weatherman who uses this word. As he tracks the worsening weather out at sea, we see him getting genuinely excited about the unique set of weather conditions. This was an interesting part for me.

The captain of the fishing boat, acted by George Clooney, does not care about the safety of his men. He only wants to find more fish and make lots of money. So he goes to sea, turning off the weather forecasts and ignoring the sensible advice of another captain (a very attractive woman), who is in love with him and doesn't want him to risk his life. And yes, they catch lots of fish, but then the ice-machine on board breaks down, which means that he needs to return to harbour quickly before the fish go bad, so he decides to go back right through the worst weather.

This is where the special effects start. They are really very good, and include some clever use of computers. You feel as though you are in the boat with them, facing those big waves. * At the end, the ship goes down and we see one of the sailors - the film also has Mark Wahlberg - drifting on an empty sea, thinking beautiful thoughts about his girlfriend. Then the film shows the girlfriend, looking out to sea with an anxious look on her face.

Are special effects an essential part of all films today? **
In this film, the special effects were probably its best thing.

Based on the sentences you wrote earlier about the sea, write a phrase or a sentence to follow the (*), describing the waves.

- 4 In Part 2, it is important to demonstrate your range of language. Use these words and phrases as replacements in the text. They are in text order.

a blockbuster	i outstanding
b budget	j digital imaging
c sub-plot	k gigantic
d portrayed (by)	l stars
e heads out	m cuts to
f crew	n scanning the horizon
g eye of the storm	o prerequisite
h kick in	p feature

- 5 The final paragraph contains an example of a rhetorical question. This is a useful stylistic device for introducing opinions and works particularly well in essays and articles - and, as here, in the general comment in reviews.

The writer should have followed up the rhetorical question with some relevant opinions on the use of special effects. For example:

Speak to most Hollywood producers and they would probably argue the case. Yet they are no substitute for an original storyline or engaging dialogue. Used wisely, special effects blend into a film seamlessly, as demonstrated in Peter Jackson's Oscar-winning 'The Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring'. If not, they will only irritate.

Write about 50 words of your own to follow the rhetorical question ().

- 6 Now answer this exam task in 280-320 words, following the advice on page 38. Make a paragraph plan and check useful vocabulary in a dictionary before you start writing.

An international film magazine wants readers around the world to contribute a review to a special edition entitled The Art of Advertising: Selling Products through Film. You decide to write a review of a particularly memorable advertisement. In your review, you should evaluate the visual impact of the advertisement, outline its other features, and assess how much influence such advertisements have on us.

You might ask why anyone in their right mind would build a settlement in so (4) a location. In fact, the reason was fear. In the days of (5), Venice did not exist; but then, in the fifth and sixth centuries, the Barbarians swept into Italy, and the panic-stricken (6) of the great mainland cities fled to the lagoon. And the lagoon continued to protect Venice throughout her history, separating her from the (7) feuding cities of the mainland. Today, more than ever, we have cause for (8): it is thanks only to the lagoon that Venice has been spared the motor car.

Too much on your plate? Waste not, want not!

A campaign has been launched as a result, calling for the food-service industry to join (1) with chefs and consumers to address the issue of food waste.

Without consumers shifting their mindset, restaurants will struggle to reduce food waste significantly."

Tackling this problem as a consumer is straightforward. Ultimately, it (8) smart shopping, clever cooking and shrewd storage.

Writing

4 Add punctuation and capital letters to the following book review where necessary. Then divide the review into suitable paragraphs. The first sentence is done for you.

No one has yet written 'Froth: the Trend that Changed History', but Universal Foam comes pretty close to being the definitive example of publishing froth. The book blends two recent publishing trends the newer of which is the wacky science subject. If there is a market for books on cryptography chronometry or cod and books on all these subjects have sold well in the last decade then there is no reason why any subject should seem boring. Once you have discovered a subject so obscure that no other publisher has come across it before all that remains is to prove that it holds the key to universal understanding. Cod a biography of the fish that changed the world is a pretty good example but universal foam the story of bubbles from cappuccino to the cosmos outdoes it since it permeates the universe from the smallest to the largest scale. After all there arent any galaxies stretched on the skin of unimaginably vast cod nor do physicists speak of the world arising from fluctuations in the quantum codfish. So the boys bumper book of froth might contain as every best-seller should everything you need to know about the universe. Then again it might contain everything else.

Thats pretty frothy too. In fact universal foam runs into another current publishing style the book of lists. Among the subjects covered here are volcanoes shaving foam champagne fire fighting equipment and meringues. Then you list everything you know about everything in the first list 101 important facts about galaxies 20 things you never knew about the cappuccino and so on. Finally all this is wrapped up in the academic style as old as exams where you simply cram in all the knowledge that you can possibly get hold of and regurgitate it with the echoing solemnity of a tv anchorman on the simpsons suggesting a rhetorical question can everyday foams like milk foam ever be fully understood and controlled. At which point there is foam flecking this reviewers lips. You cant really blame the author sidney perkowitz who has worked hard and writes clearly. It is not his fault that he has nothing particular to say after he has got through the bits that particularly interest him the fairly technical discussions of how to measure foams and describe them mathematically. However the fact is there is no sound reason for this book to have been written in the first place.

Advertising and young people

It's been estimated that young people today shell out nearly £50 a week on clothing, entertainment, and fast food. And that's not all. It's now beginning to dawn on advertisers that, through nagging power, young people not only influence the purchases of the goods and services that appeal to them, but they also influence many of the purchases in the entire household, even down to the family car. This is an advertiser's dream. People, especially in the 13–19 age group, buy on impulse. They are less likely than others to weigh up price differences or get recommendations. They buy based on what their friends are buying, what will make them more popular with their peer group, or what a celebrity they are into says they need.

Advertising: exploiting the vulnerable?

Concern about young people's lack of life skills and cognitive ability to evaluate advertisements has provided much scope for research and heated debate. Embedded within the discussion is the contention that advertising to this group is inherently 'unfair'. However, many now believe that the vulnerabilities of young people are often overstated and that, having grown up with the constant barrage of advertising, they are able to pay it little or no attention. There is also the argument that, by providing product information, advertising helps young people make more informed choices.

EXAM ADVICE

- Read the whole text carefully before looking at the options.
- Think carefully about your choice of answer. Remember that you are often being tested not just on choosing a word which is grammatically correct, but also one which best fits the sense or tone of the text.
- Always choose an answer, even if you are not sure you are right. You are not penalised for wrong answers. You have a 25% chance of getting an answer right, even if you really have no idea what the answer is!

Speaking

1 Give your opinion on the following statements.

- Listening to music helps me to concentrate, especially when studying.
- Every child should have the opportunity to learn an instrument.
- Some instruments are easier to learn than others.
- Listening to pop music improves my mood.
- Classical music is far superior to pop music.

Reading

2 You are going to read an extract from an article. Seven paragraphs have been removed from the extract. Choose from the paragraphs A–H the one which fits each gap (1–7). There is one extra paragraph which you do not need to use.

To help you, the first two answers have the links highlighted. Underline the links which give you the answers to the other gaps.

The enduring myth of music and maths

As a mathematician with strong musical interests who grew up in a family of musicians, I have been asked about the connection between music and maths many times. And I have bad news: although there are some obvious similarities between mathematical and musical activity, there is (as yet) no compelling evidence for the kind of mysterious, almost magical connection that many people seem to believe in. I'm partly referring here to the 'Mozart Effect', the hypothesis that children who have heard music by Mozart are supposedly more intelligent, including at mathematics, than children from a control group.

Of course, this conclusion does not show that there is no interesting connection between mathematics and music. It was always a little implausible that lazily listening to a concerto would earn you extra marks on that maths test you are taking tomorrow, but what about learning to read music or spending hours practising the piano? That takes genuine effort.

Demonstrating a connection of this kind is not as easy as one might think. To begin with, there are plenty of innumerate musicians and tone-deaf mathematicians, so the best one could hope to demonstrate would be a significant positive correlation between aptitudes at the two disciplines. And then one would face all the usual challenges of establishing a statistical connection.

And yet, the belief that the two are interestingly related won't go away without a fight. I cannot help observing that among the mathematicians I know, there do seem to be a surprising number who are very good indeed at the piano.

Indeed, yes, we can. For a start, both mathematics and music deal with abstract structures, so if you become good at one, then it is plausible that you become good at something more general – handling abstract structures – that helps you with the other. If this is correct, then it would show a connection between mathematical and musical ability, but not the kind of obscure connection that people hope for.

Of course, abstract structures are not confined to mathematics and music. If you are learning a foreign language then you need to understand its grammar and syntax, which are prime examples of abstract structures. And yet we don't hear people asking about a mysterious connection between mathematical ability and linguistic ability.

In an effort to dispel this air of contradiction, let me give one example of a general aptitude that is useful in both mathematics and music: the ability to solve problems of the "A is to B as C is to D" kind. These appear in intelligence tests (car is to garage as aircraft is to what?) but they are also absolutely central to both music and mathematics.

I take the view that the general question of whether mathematical ability and musical ability are related is much less interesting than some similar but more specific questions. Are musicians more drawn to certain composers (Bach, for instance)? Are musical mathematicians more drawn to certain areas of mathematics? One can imagine many interesting surveys and experiments that could be done, but for now this is uncharted territory and all we can do is speculate.

Exam spot

Read the introduction to get an idea of what the text is going to be about. Then read the text and the missing paragraphs.

Read through the paragraphs on either side of the gap very carefully. Don't just read the paragraph before the gap as this might not give you any clues to the missing text. This part of the exam is testing understanding of content as well as reference devices.

- A I feel that it would be more like the straightforward link between ability at football and ability at cricket. To become better at one of those then you need to improve your fitness and co-ordination. That makes you better at sport in general.
- B For example, identifying and controlling for other potentially influential factors is difficult, and as far as I know, there has been no truly convincing study of that type that has shown that musical ability enhances mathematical ability or vice versa.
- C The second phrase is a clear answer to the first. But one can be more precise about what this means. If you try to imagine any other second phrase, nothing seems 'right' in the way that Mozart's chosen phrase does.
- D Could it be that the rewards for that time-consuming dedication spill over into other areas of intellectual life, and in particular into mathematics? Is there any evidence that people who have worked hard to become good at music are better at mathematics than people who are completely unmusical? And in the other direction, are mathematicians better than average at music?
- E My guess is that that is because the link exists but not the uncertainty: grammar feels mathematical. Music, by contrast, is strongly tied up with one's emotions and can be enjoyed even by people who know very little about it. As such, it seems very different from mathematics, so any connection between the two is appealingly paradoxical.
- F It is not hard to see why such a theory would be taken seriously: we would all like to become better at mathematics without putting in any effort. But the conclusions of the original experiment have been grossly exaggerated. If you want your brain to work better, then not surprisingly, you have to put in some hard graft; there is no such thing as an intellectual perpetual-motion machine. Mozart CDs for babies and toys that combine maths and music might help, but not much, and the effects are temporary.
- G I believe that there is a study waiting to be done on this: are mathematicians more drawn to this rather than to other instruments? Of the mathematicians I can think of who are superb instrumentalists, all but one are pianists. While we wait for scientific evidence to back up the anecdotal evidence, can we at least argue that it is plausible that there should be a connection?
- H Music is full of little puzzles like this. If you are good at them, then when you listen to a piece, expectations will constantly be set up in your mind. Of course, some of the best moments in music come when one's expectations are confounded, but if you don't have the expectations in the first place then you will miss out on the pleasure.

- 3 What do you think about the idea that people who are good at music are also good at maths? Do you think listening to music or learning an instrument can improve your overall intelligence?

Band Manufacture

The fate of any pop band is a question that (0) NO longer is of interest to its fans alone. (1) only have economists recognised pop music's importance (2) a business, pointing (3) that it contributes more (4) export earnings than the steel industry, but strange as it (5) seem, people in some countries spend more on pop than they do on fruit and vegetables. (6) such serious money washing around, the question of (7) will be the next big thing is (8) too important to be left to random factors such as chance and talent. (9) the great names of rock in the 60s and 70s formed bands spontaneously (10) they were discovered and then marketed, their successors are increasingly (11) to be brought (12) by marketing men. Many groups, often sold as four young men or women in (13) of their own destiny, were in (14) dreamed up and promoted by middle-aged men. Designing a band is much the same as designing (15) other product: take a basic, successful model and adapt it. The challenge, when everything has been tried already, is to persuade consumers that what you are doing is in some way innovative.

Part 1 Essay

Look back at Writing folder 1 on pages 22–23 for basic facts about this compulsory question. An essay is a discursive task that expresses an argument. Clear organisation is required, together with a logical sequence of ideas. The register used should be ‘unmarked’ – that is, neither formal nor informal – and impersonal in tone, as there is usually no reference to personal experience.

- 1 Read the two texts below, which contain complementary ideas on the status of music in society. Express these ideas in sentences, using your own words.

Music is something that we perhaps take for granted in our daily lives, particularly when it exists in the form of background music in public places or advertising jingles, and with the huge availability of downloadable music, we now have ready access to whatever we desire. However, do we as a society take music as seriously as we should? Professional musicians are highly-skilled individuals, yet many of them struggle to find regular work and their talent is seldom recognised. In most countries, they receive no state support and many are forced to abandon a career in music altogether. What a waste!

Text 2

Music has been downgraded in importance in our schools and is often the first subject to be withdrawn from the curriculum, with more and more emphasis placed on core subjects. Yet research has shown that those who learn music from a young age benefit in different ways. Music lessons are creative and engage children in a collaborative activity that has a real outcome. Even if parents are reluctant to contribute additional funding for instruments, they will usually come to see their offspring perform in the school concert. Let's give music back the status it deserves in education.

- 2 Choose sentences from a–f that are closest to your own wording. Decide whether the remaining sentences represent ideas in the texts.
 - a Music should have a special place in the school curriculum because it allows children to participate in something productive.
 - b The best-known performers earn a great deal, so state support cannot be justified.
 - c It is short-sighted to cut the study of music in schools, given its proven positive effects.
 - d Despite the widespread presence of music in the modern world, it tends to be under-valued.
 - e Parents should pay for their children's music tuition throughout their schooling.
 - f It is scandalous that promising young musicians are often unable to develop in their field.
- 3 Read these exam instructions, paying attention to the highlighted parts. Note down additional ideas of your own that are relevant to the topic.

Write an essay summarising and evaluating the key points from both texts. Use your own words throughout as far as possible, and include your own ideas in your answer.

- 4 When writing an essay, there are various ways of introducing an argument. Read these sentence openers and choose one from each section to preface your different ideas.

EXAM ADVICE

- Refer to the four key points clearly in your answer.
- Introduce the main argument at the outset.
- Include ideas of your own that are relevant.
- Organise your ideas in logical paragraphs.
- Make sure your argument is coherent.
- Include an effective conclusion.
- Use a variety of sentence openers and linkers.
- Write in an unmarked register, using an impersonal tone.
- Use your own words wherever possible.

- 6 Now write your essay, following the Exam advice and the instructions in 3. You should write 240–280 words.

Listening

- 1 Identify each of the pictures opposite. What do they have in common with the unit title?

Exam spot

Part 1 of Paper 3 contains three short extracts, each with two multiple-choice questions. Read through the questions before you listen, to predict what to listen out for.

- 2 1-12 You will hear three different extracts. First, read the questions and check any difficult words in your dictionary.

For questions 1–6, choose the answer (A, B or C) which fits best according to what you hear. There are two questions for each extract.

Extract One

You hear a woman being interviewed on the radio about the eye.

- 1 What is the woman's profession?
A zoologist B psychologist C journalist
- 2 What point does she make about staring?
A Humans have to resort to less direct forms of intimidation.
B False eye spots on animals prove that the eye is irreplaceable.
C Animals make eye contact to signal they are about to attack.

Extract Two

You hear a woman talking about when her son was very young.

- 3 Why did the woman choose not to tell her son off when he drew on the wall?
A She felt guilty as she had not been keeping an eye on him.
B She thought his pictures added some much-needed colour.
C She believed it was wrong to put a stop to his creativity.
- 4 Now that he is grown up, how does she feel about the action she took?
A sceptical B justified C regretful

Extract Three

You hear a man talking on the radio about Percy Shaw, an inventor.

- 5 What prompted Percy Shaw to work on his invention?
A He was involved in a serious car accident.
B Something on which he had relied disappeared.
C His eyesight was no longer as keen as it once was.
- 6 Which part of his invention is likened to an eyelid?
A the pad B the base C the assembly
- 3 Explain the meaning of the phrases in bold in the recording scripts for Extracts Two and Three in your own words.

Extract Two

'It was always the same wall and he appeared to be attempting pictures, as well as showing a definite sense of colour ... As soon as Sam completed one magnum opus I would take it down and replace it with a fresh canvas, so to speak ... You see, he has absolutely no leanings towards art, being heavily into information technology!'

Extract Three

'Driving home through the unlit outskirts of Halifax at night, he found the perfect substitute for night vision, following the glint of his headlights in the metal tramlines. But he ran into a problem: no longer in use, these rails were soon taken up for good. With this serious setback, Shaw decided it was time to come up with something that would help him – and others – to steer in the dark. His now ubiquitous invention, modelled on the eye of a cat, consists of a mirror and a spherical lens mounted on a rubber pad.'

catch someone's eye	turn a blind eye (to)

The Pointillist Georges Seurat

(1859–1891)

Few artists discover a (0) MEANINGFUL direction so young in life. Barely into his twenties, Georges Seurat did just this, developing one of the most lucid classical styles since the fifteenth century, the (1) of which was the dot.

This was a radical departure from the style of Impressionist artists such as Pissarro and Renoir. (2), the unit of Impressionism had been the brush-stroke, always (3) in form – fat or thin, clean or smeared, streaky, squidgy or transparent – and (4) mixed to conform with the facts of sight.

Seurat wanted something with greater (5) than that. A child of late nineteenth-century positivism and scientific optimism, Seurat drew on studies of visual colour analysis to generate his own (6) style. The most (7) work of this nature was 'The Law of Simultaneous Colour Contrast', written by Eugène Chevreul. According to Chevreul, colour recognition was a matter of (8) – a web of connected events – rather than the simple presentation of one hue after another to the eye. Seurat resolved to make this process explicit on canvas by making his colour patches tiny, reducing them to dots: hence the name, 'Pointillism'.

The use of an extended noun phrase to preface a sentence like this is common in biographical and other academic writing.

Complete the sentences a–d, which start with noun phrases, writing about people of your choice.

EXAMPLE: One of the most creative artists of the 20th century, Picasso produced many different styles in the course of his working life.

- A highly-regarded and ground-breaking film-maker,
- Best-known for their awe-inspiring poetry,
- The most significant political thinker of his generation,
- A leading innovator in her field of expertise,

Write two more complete sentences on subjects of your choice.

- 1 a Identify the part of speech of each underlined word in the following sentence, which is from one of the recordings in 7.1.

You may see a pair of dazzling headlights eyeballing you.

Exam spot

You can use participles in clauses, to give more information about a noun. Including these clauses in Paper 2 answers will impress the examiner, as your writing will be more complex and sophisticated.

- b Identify the participle and say what it refers to in these examples, also taken from 7.1.
- Driving home through the unlit outskirts of Halifax at night, Percy Shaw would follow the glint of ...
 - His invention, modelled on the eye of a cat, consists of ...
- c Sometimes the position of the participle clause in the sentence alters the meaning. Explain the difference in meaning of these two sentences.
- I saw our cat sitting precariously on the roof.
 - Sitting precariously on the roof, I saw our cat.
- 2 Compare the two pictures. One is by the 19th-century British artist J.M.W. Turner and the other was taken by the Hubble Space Telescope.
Would you describe each as beautiful? Why? / Why not?
How else might you describe these pictures? Would you use any of these words?

awe-inspiring	dazzling	flamboyant
indistinct	natural	spectacular unimaginable

- 3 Now read the article, ignoring the use of italics. Why does the writer draw a parallel between the Hubble image and Turner's work? What idea is expressed about art and beauty?
- 4 Say whether the italicised participles in the article are used actively or passively. Does each one refer to simultaneous action or to previous action? For example, Gazing is an active use, referring to the same time as the action in the main clause of the sentence (we are savouring).

Beauty written in the stars

Gazing at the smoky, glowing gas clouds of the 'starburst' galaxy shown here, we are savouring a beauty that is the accidental product of events that happened in a distant time and part of the universe. The result looks like a great painting. To be precise, it is reminiscent of the work of Turner, that masterly nineteenth-century British artist. For John Ruskin, Turner's champion and near-contemporary, the object of art was to reveal the divine hand in nature. That was what he meant by beauty. What might he have said today, having viewed the pictures taken by the Hubble Space Telescope?

Having been launched in 1990 with an inaccurately ground lens, Hubble was initially a huge embarrassment, sending back indistinct images that impressed no one. However, the picture changed, quite literally, in 1993. On being successfully repaired by shuttle astronauts, the telescope proceeded to relay the most spectacular images to us. Hubble is now like an eye with a cataract removed, seeing into deep space with a hard, bright precision that is almost uncomfortable.

There has never been a more gratuitous addition to our store of beauty. Ultimately, when we call a work of art beautiful we are comparing it to nature. The underlying structures of nature imitated by artists from ancient Greece until the middle of the twentieth century were chosen because nature was perceived as beautiful. If we don't talk much about 'beauty' in contemporary art, it is due to the fact that art is no longer concerned with the representation of nature. Arguably, the photographs taken by Hubble are the most flamboyantly beautiful artworks of our time.

Reading into Writing: Exemplifying your ideas

- 1 What is a visual cliché? Decide which of the images shown are the most clichéd, giving your reasons. Then describe something that is a cliché for you.

- 2 Read the two texts about clichéd images. Do they give complementary or opposing arguments? How far do you agree with the points made?

Text 1

When does a photographic style become a cliché? There can be little doubt that those images now deemed clichés were once powerful and stimulating photographs when they first appeared in the clubs, salons and magazines. Clearly, they merited the awards, and influenced many other photographers, and so photography could be seen to be moving forward. Such is the way of progress. But when an innovative winning image is copied by numerous others, hell-bent on walking off with the annual club trophy, a cliché is born. While the slavish copying of any image or existing style is the road to ultimate ruin, we should actively look at those images to find seeds of stimulation.

Text 2

When is a picture worth a thousand words? Some of nature's most remarkable images become clichés through familiarity, thanks to the commercial world we live in. Transferred to a squat greetings card or popular poster, the once exceptional representation of a radiant sunset over tranquil sea is rendered mundane. For consumer-driven websites, it is visual rather than verbal impact that counts, at least at the outset. The use of original, intriguing photos suggests creativity and innovation, while certain stock photos have become overused clichés, a disincentive to would-be customers. Images are more influential than ever in our digital age.

- 3 Which text gives specific examples of clichéd images? Why is this done, do you think? The comments in Style extra may help you.

Exam spot

In Part 1 of Paper 2, the texts are a starting point for your own ideas. Although you need to summarise and evaluate the points made, you should move beyond any specific examples given in the texts, to include different examples of your own. Spend five minutes before you start writing, listing other things you can mention to support your evaluation.

Style extra

Many adjectives carry disapproval, as in these examples from the two texts:

- slavish copying – the idea of copying is reinforced by the adjective and a lack of originality suggested
- squat greetings card – the adjective describes something that is small and ugly, so a contrast is emphasised between the exceptional and the mundane.

Here are other adjectives used to show disapproval, some of which occurred in earlier units.

- | | |
|-------------------------------|------------------------------|
| childish behaviour | a fatuous remark |
| florid poetry/speeches | glaring errors/faults |

- 4 Read these paragraphs, ignoring spaces 1–8 for the moment. Where does the writer make reference to specific examples? Underline the phrases used to introduce these.

Both texts consider the negative effect of clichéd images. The first text is concerned with photography as an art form and the important point made is that (1)..... remains vital, in the search for truly original photographic images. (2)..... portrait shots, such as those by Irving Penn and Diane Arbus among others, should be viewed by others in the profession as (3)..... triggers for new developments and techniques, rather than merely being replicated – the “slavish copying” that is referred to so (4)..... by the writer.

The second text outlines the pivotal position of imagery in our modern world, especially in relation to the use of photographs to sell goods and services on the Internet. Take for instance the cliché-ridden use of visuals like the business handshake or the world as a globe that appear on (5)..... marketing websites. Given that these images are ubiquitous, how can they be sufficiently (6).....? As the saying goes, “familiarity breeds contempt” – such a degree of overuse totally (7)..... what was initially a powerful image, making it banal and (8).....

- 5 Use the words given in capitals below to form suitable words to fit in spaces 1–8 in the text in 4. Questions 2 and 8 require a compound.

- | | |
|--------------|------------|
| 1 EXPERIMENT | 5 COUNT |
| 2 LAND | 6 PERSUADE |
| 3 INSPIRE | 7 VALUE |
| 4 DISMISS | 8 PLACE |

- 6 Select suitable phrases from a–d to insert in the final paragraph opposite, to produce an answer of the target exam length (240–280 words).

- a one of the most crucial aspects
- b innovative visual material
- c genuinely creative excellence
- d photography in its own right

Central to both these texts is a consideration of the role of (1)..... in the 21st century. The first text is quite specialist in its subject matter, focusing solely on (2)..... The second text is far more relevant to contemporary life. It rightly argues that “visual impact” is (3)..... to achieve – any company seeking to engage new customers via its website has no alternative but to invest in (4)..... and cannot afford to be satisfied with second-best.

Paper 1 Part 7 Multiple matching

This part of the Reading and Use of English paper focuses on your ability to retrieve specific information from a text. You are given 10 questions and you must find the answers either in a group of texts or in one which has been divided into sections.

Read the Exam advice and then do the task below.

You are going to read an extract from an article about paintings. For questions 1–10, choose from the sections (A–E). The sections may be chosen more than once.

In which section are the following mentioned?

the inscrutable nature of the subjects	1	<input type="checkbox"/> the artist's ability to give an insight into temperament	2	<input type="checkbox"/> the integrity of the image portrayed	3	<input type="checkbox"/> the view that the artist was an innovator	4	<input type="checkbox"/> delight in a painting's ability to endure	5	<input type="checkbox"/> the background to a painting being well documented	6	<input type="checkbox"/> the view that a painting's impact depends on its surroundings	7	<input type="checkbox"/> a painting which gives an image of a lost world	8	<input type="checkbox"/> admiration for an artist who dared to challenge conventional ideas	9	<input type="checkbox"/> conflicting opinions about the subject of a painting	10	<input type="checkbox"/>

Mr and Mrs Andrews, by Gainsborough

EXAM ADVICE

- Read the title and, if there is one, the subtitle carefully.
- Skim the sections quickly to get an idea of the subject matter. Don't worry about vocabulary that you aren't familiar with.
- Read through the questions carefully.
- Scan the text to find the specific information that answers the questions. When you find an answer in the text, underline it and put the question number next to it.
- Don't spend too much time looking for an answer to a question. Leave it until the end and go on to the next question.
- At the end, go back to the questions you have no answer to or the ones which you are unsure of. Never leave a blank on your answer sheet.
- The questions ask you to locate words/phrases/sentences that mean the same as the ones used in the questions – a paraphrase. Often, an idea will be repeated in more than one section, but only one section really answers the question.
- Don't just look for a word in the question being repeated in the text. This will not be the answer, just a distractor.
- Check to make sure that the part of the text where you think the answer is fully answers the question. Sometimes the question comes in two parts, for example, a surprising view held on the integrity of a subject.

Paintings which inspire

Art experts give their opinions

A Luisa Sutton

A Bar at the Folies-Bergère, by Edouard Manet

Manet was inviting some kind of response in the way in which he presented women in his work and he succeeded in bridging the gap between classical traditions and painting modern life. Above all, I have tremendous respect for the fact that he was a breakthrough artist: a champion of realist modernism who was censured for breaking the mould. Through the medium of painting, Manet constantly reassessed the prevailing attitudes of the world he was living in. Today we are used to multiple perspective – seeing the same image from different angles. This was not so in Manet's time, and in this painting we see him crossing boundaries as he switches reality by employing a mirror to reflect his subjects.

B Paul Harris

Henry VII, 29 October 1505, by unknown artist

Visually, this is a stunning portrait; Henry moves towards the viewer from the parapet wearing the red robes of Lancaster, his hands on the ledge. It is immediately exciting and emotive. Henry VII was on the lookout for a new bride and this was painted to be sent to the court of Maximilian, much as we would send a photo today. So the provenance is clear. Portraits of other English monarchs, Richard III in particular, are, in comparison, stiff and remote. Henry VII's portrait speaks in a very particular way. His eyes look at one. He is Renaissance Man but, at the same time one sees a shrewd, wise and wily man who, throughout his reign, managed to amass the fortune of the Tudor dynasty.

C Tom Newman

James VI and I, 1618, by Paul Van Somer

I used to work for an art handling company in New York, and I came to realise how wonderful paintings are as entities. Old paintings last for so long because of the materials used – the oil is so robust, it expands or contracts depending on the heat. They can be rolled up and taken around the world, they'll never die. This portrait, in particular, made a huge impression on me. Works of art often lose their power as soon as they're placed in a museum. This painting is where it belongs – in a palace. Subject to who you speak to, James is either a buffoon or a tactical genius, but in this work he looks so stately. The painting was clearly commissioned to convey regality – and it worked on me, 400 years later.

D Paula Smith

Mr and Mrs Andrews, by Gainsborough

I chose this painting as it has personal relevance for me. I grew up in my grandmother's house in London. She was an excellent copyist of Gainsborough. We had copies of all of his paintings, except for this one, which my grandmother didn't approve of. I've always found it incredibly beautiful though. The two figures in this wonderful painting have very enigmatic expressions. What are they up to? What are they thinking? And then what are we to make of the landscape? It's an agricultural scene, in the middle of the day, but there are no agricultural workers anywhere to be seen. Where on earth is everybody? What a strange atmosphere the place has, a long ago era that will never be recaptured.

E Lynn D'Anton

An Old Woman Cooking Eggs, 1618, by Velázquez

What is most striking about this painting is surely its veracity. One gets the feeling that one is looking into a room in which there are no obstacles to understanding. Nothing comes between the subject and the observer. The artist here is the perfect observer. When I saw it a few years ago in the National Gallery of Scotland, set alongside many other works from Velázquez's youth, there was no doubt in my mind that it was a masterpiece. I think that it is easy for many people to empathise with this painting in one way or another.

Compound adjectives and their collocations

Several compound adjectives are used in the article, such as mixed-use, car-dependent. Compound adjectives are often formed from a present or past participle with a preposition, as in boarded-up, an adjective, as in slow-paced, or an adverb, as in forward-thinking.

- 4 Make compound adjectives using these lists and suggest noun collocations for each one. For example, well-constructed (house); smashed-up (car); quick-thinking (politician).

The New Urbanism architectural movement

A The Congress for the New Urbanism (CNU) was founded two decades ago by a group of talented architects in the USA, who were looking to create sustainable, walkable, mixed-use neighbourhoods. One of their most ambitious projects, by founder member Peter Calthorpe, was Laguna West, south of Sacramento. However, during the grim California recession of the 1990s, the original developer for this scheme went bankrupt and the entire project was taken over by a less sympathetic developer, who contravened virtually all of CNU's principles. Had Laguna West been completed as Calthorpe planned it, it would have been one of the great visionary new towns of the late 20th century. As things have turned out, it is just another conventional, car-dependent suburb. And the current extent of New Urbanist communities in terms of population absorption implies that if they are regarded as a solution to metropolitan problems, all the usual clichés – shuffling the deckchairs on the Titanic, fiddling while Rome burns, etc. – must apply.

B The key principles of the CNU remain unchanged. They seek to promote neighbourhoods that are diverse in terms of use and have mixed populations in terms of age, race and income. They believe in giving communities transportation alternatives – especially walking, cycling and public transit. They have a strong preference for 'infill' development – that is, the use of land within a built-up area, especially as part of a community redevelopment project – rather than the endless expansion of cities sometimes referred to as 'urban sprawl'. They give some priority to accessible public spaces, community institutions and a variety of parks and other green spaces, in order to foster exemplary civic behaviour.

C New Urbanist communities are intended to be more than residential subdivisions, with shops, a wide range of personal and consumer services, and workplace sites all conveniently accessible on foot. This is one of the plans for Kentlands, perhaps the most successful of the NU communities to date, and yet commercial development in terms of employment opportunities is lagging far behind. The same idea of 'self-containment' was one of the principles behind the creation of the British new towns of the 1960s, such as Milton Keynes and Telford. Job prospects were certainly good in these towns, though unfortunately the vacancies did not cater to the resident population, due to skill mismatch and other reasons. The overwhelming tendency was for residents to work elsewhere, with the jobs available in the new towns filled by commuters from outside, with the net result being more use of fossil fuels rather than less.

D Critics of the CNU say that it embraces pie-in-the-sky social engineering based on a false diagnosis of society's urban problems, an excessive faith in the ability to change the world, and the prescription of policies that are implementable only under very special circumstances. Urban capital stock is already largely in place and remains a constant, while much of the residential housing in the US has been built in the last 40 years, so innovation through renewal is off the agenda for the time being. Hence, the practical consequences of New Urbanism continue to be a small number of relatively small communities accommodating a miniscule proportion of metropolitan population growth. The US government-sponsored company Fannie Mae's research into housing preferences shows that up to 80% of US households would hope to live in a single-family dwelling with a garden, regardless of income, race or current tenure status. It is only possible to meet these preferences through high-density developments in the suburbs.

E As for the idea that somehow New Urbanism can contribute to the stability, if not revival, of city centers, it remains just that – an idea. Most NU communities are being built on green field sites some distance away from the central city, and infill development has been limited – probably of necessity because of land scarcity – to tiny pockets. Hence, there is no identifiable relationship between NU communities and the fate of central cities and those who live there. If there is some consensus for tackling the social problems found in the central cities (and it is by no means clear that this consensus exists), it would be far better to deal with these problems via direct, tightly-targeted measures rather than via land use controls and social experiments on the metropolitan fringe. The real issue for the city of today is how to counter or accommodate the obvious loss of commercial investment from its heart to its suburbs, which has created run-down central neighbourhoods supported by few amenities. The New Urbanists are largely silent on this.

1 This sentence from the article in 8.1 is an example of inversion.

..... Had
Laguna West been completed as Calthorpe planned it, it would have been one of the great visionary new towns of the late 20th century.

Inversion is often used in formal English, but in fact also appears in less formal writing and spoken English, to emphasise or contrast something.

The example above shows inversion in a conditional sentence with the past perfect. The fixed expression Had it not been for... also uses the past perfect, to talk about the reasons for changed results:
Had it not been for Ben, we would have got totally lost in Madrid.

Inversion is also commonly used after a time adverbial, like the next two examples.

No sooner had we left the building than it started to pour with rain.
Barely had Janie recovered from her operation when she was promoted.

Sometimes a full time clause precedes the inversion.

Only after a rigorous security check were we allowed to enter the building.

2 Finish the sentences using your own ideas and the tenses specified.

- Never before ... (present perfect)
- Only once in my life ... (present perfect)
- Scarcely ... (past perfect) when ... (past simple)
- No sooner ... (past perfect) than ... (past simple)
- Hardly ... (past perfect) when ... (past simple)
- Not until last month ... (past simple)
- Seldom ... (present simple)
- Rarely ... (future simple)
- Had it not been for the fact that ... (past perfect / past simple and would have + past participle)

Inversion also occurs in written description after adverbials of place (usually prepositional phrases).

Opposite the gallery entrance stands an imposing bronze statue.
Under the table sat a tiny mouse with bright, beady eyes.

Notice how the verbs used in these examples are to do with location. Verbs of movement, for example, come, go, run, are also used in this way.

Up the hill crawled the number 77 bus.
Alongside the road runs the River Avon.

3 Complete the short description in the grey panel using these verbs in a suitable past tense. Use each verb once only.

Exam spot

In Paper 4 Part 3, each candidate has an individual long turn of two minutes. You will be given a prompt card containing the question you have to speak about. Below the question are three ideas, which you can include or not, as you wish. The emphasis is on your ability to speak fluently and to organise your ideas into a coherent whole. Before you start speaking, use the ten seconds allowed to order your thoughts.

- 6 Look at the prompt card below. In groups of four, brainstorm and note down possible ideas, starting with the three areas listed but also including other aspects. Remember to think of both positive and negative points.

Are there more benefits or drawbacks to living in a city nowadays?

- employment
- amenities
- housing

- 7 Now form two pairs. Each pair should select three of the group's ideas and then decide how to organise these ideas into a short talk.

Things to consider are:

Balance

Both benefits and drawbacks need to be mentioned.

Discourse management

What is the clearest order of ideas?

How will you introduce the topic?

How can you signal a new point?

How will you round off?

Exemplification

Can you give examples to underline your point of view, either personal or general?

- 8 One person in each pair should now run through their long turn, with the second person time-keeping and taking notes as to where an idea could be developed or should be cut down. Aim for 30 seconds on each of three ideas, with a short introduction and conclusion.

Exam spot

Following each long turn in Paper 4 Part 3, the second candidate is asked a question by the interlocutor that relates to what they have been listening to, so you must pay attention during the two minutes when your partner is speaking, and listen carefully to what is said. One minute is allowed for your response to the interlocutor's question and further discussion with the other candidate.

- 9 Give your long turn to the rest of the group. One student in the second pair should take on the role of the interlocutor, asking Student B one of the questions below after Student A's long turn. The fourth student in the group should time the performance and indicate when the time allowed has elapsed (see Exam spot for details).

Choice of questions for Student B:

- What is the main drawback to city living, in your opinion?
- Do / Would you enjoy living in a big city, on the whole? (Why? / Why not?)
- If you could make one improvement to your neighbourhood, what would it be and why?

The Secret Life of Bees

It is the summer of 1964 in South Carolina, USA. Living on a peach farm with her harsh, unyielding father, 14-year-old Lily Owens has shaped her entire life around one devastating, blurred memory – the afternoon her mother was killed, when Lily was four. Since then, her only real companion has been the fierce-hearted, and sometimes just fierce, black woman Rosaleen, who acts as her 'stand-in mother'.

When Rosaleen insults three of the deepest racists in town, Lily knows it's time for them both to leave. They take off in the only direction Lily can think of, to a town called Tiburon – a name she found on the back of a picture amid the few possessions left by her mother. Lily and Rosaleen are given refuge in Tiburon by a trio of black sisters who run a bee-keeping business from their home, the Pink House.

- 3 While you are watching the film, think about the following questions.

- 1 Dakota Fanning, the young actor who plays Lily, was born in the southern state of Georgia. She was only 14 when the film was released. How might her age and background have helped her performance?
 - 2 The character of Rosaleen was recast as a younger woman in the film. Why do you think this was done?
 - 3 Through the book and film, we learn a great deal about the process of bee-keeping. Why is this theme important to the story?
 - 4 How do the three sisters, August, June and May, differ in character?
 - 5 The author, Sue Monk Kidd, has commented on the film's accuracy in terms of scene setting. What examples of this do you notice in the Pink House and its surroundings?
- 4 Read the exam task below and the sample answer on page 73, ignoring the spaces for the moment. How would you conclude the essay?

Your teacher has asked you to write an essay discussing how events and details included in The Secret Life of Bees reflect the historical period in which the story is set. You should give specific examples based on your knowledge of the book or the film.

Write your essay.

The story of 'The Secret Life of Bees' takes place in South Carolina in the summer of 1964, against the backdrop of the desegregation of the American south. It is clear through the many examples of meticulous 1 that the director and the other members of her 2 researched the historical background to the story thoroughly, in order to breathe life and authenticity into the story. The brilliant 3 adds tremendous atmosphere, suggesting a long hot summer through its portrayal of harsh daylight and sultry nights.

Early on in the film at T. Ray's peach farm, we see President Johnson talking about the Civil Rights Act on a fuzzy black and white TV screen. This brief clip places the story very precisely in time. Other aspects that confirm the period of the 4 are the 1960s cars, the commemorative plates of President Kennedy displayed on the parlour walls of the Pink House (the 5 excelled itself in sourcing these), the old washing machine that sits out on the porch, and also snatches of popular music from the time. The 6 must have spent a considerable number of hours researching the dresses and hats, as well.

One particularly moving event that highlights the continuing reality of segregation is when Zach and Lily go to see a film together. They buy their tickets separately and have to enter the cinema through separate doors – Zach goes through the one marked 'COLORED' – but once inside, they sit together upstairs and watch the film. However, this is not tolerated by some of the racist townspeople, who manhandle Zach and take him off to jail, where he is beaten up.

Rosaleen's thwarted attempt to register to vote on July 4 is the key event that prompts her and Lily to flee. During the scene, the state of Mississippi is mentioned, which is where the most brutal attacks on would-be black voters occurred. Here, the 7 has decided to depart slightly from the book in transferring the mention of Mississippi from Lily's thoughts into Rosaleen's mouth, but it seems a valid change from book to 8 , which serves to underline the reality of Rosaleen's position and the very real risk she is taking in a bigoted southern town.

- 5 Now complete spaces 1–8 with the correct word or phrase to do with film-making, choosing from the box. There are two extra words that you do not need to use.

action	cast
cinematography	crew

- 6 Now write an essay based on the exam task in 4. If you have not read The Secret Life of Bees, refer to the book and film tie-in of your choice. Follow the advice given below.

EXAM ADVICE

- Don't be afraid to refer exclusively to the film of the book – you will not be penalised for doing this.
- Plan your answer, noting down specific examples that you can mention.
- Use an appropriate register for the task type required – this will be unmarked to formal for an essay.
- Summarise your views in a conclusion.
- Demonstrate a wide range of language, including vocabulary relevant to novels and film-making.

Writing

4 Insert rhetorical questions A–E into this essay about modern art and music.

- A Is the world of contemporary music any better?
- B Yet is there genuine technical skill in Damien Hirst's sheep, pickled in formaldehyde?
- C What has happened to good judgement and common sense?
- D So should we look again to nature to provide us with the beauty that we crave?
- E Have these composers really nowhere left to go?

1 In my opinion, the art world lacks both. It has, moreover, abandoned its traditional role, that of being pleasing to the senses. Modern artists are merely out to shock, to be sensationalist. Bound up with this ruthless modernism is intense commercialism. Prices are inflated by urban galleries and urbane collectors, whose 'discerning' purchases appreciate by the day, as mediocre artists are successfully hyped as the latest Andy Warhol or Georgia O'Keeffe.

2 Here, too, we are no longer given works we can enjoy, but 'difficult' music with no discernible melody, that jangles the nerves and leaves us with a dreadful headache.

3 Yet perhaps I am making the very same mistake as contemporary critics of Georges Seurat's, who shunned his masterpieces and saw him die at the age of 31, poor and unappreciated. Maybe in another twenty years, the music that I personally cannot fathom will be regarded as safe and conventional; the art installations seen as old hat.

4 The jury's still out. Living in our post-industrial society, the vast majority of today's artists and musicmakers fail to give us any beauty in their work, exhibiting only their own creative frustration. 5 Or at least, as Andy Goldsworthy has proved, art could be transported to a more meaningful setting, where commercialism does not hold sway.

- 7 Quickly read this extract from an article about dress to get some idea of what it is about. Don't fill in any spaces at this stage. Answer the following question.

What changes does the writer say have occurred in the way we dress?

SUITABLY DRESSED

Today the notion of 'suitable clothing' is dying (0) OUT. It (1) now appear that, to all (2) and purposes, anything goes. At one (3), it was possible to (4) at a glance the difference (5) someone dressed for work and someone en route to a nightclub. And, needless to (6), the same clothes would never have been worn to both.

However, in the last thirty years, we have undergone a sea change in (7) ideas of what a dress code consists of. Even well (8) the 1960s, male air travellers were expected to wear a suit; these days it would (9) as no surprise to find them in shorts and trainers.

In fact, (10) has been the revolution in our own dress codes that we may find (11) dressing down to go to work and dressing up to go (12) in the evening. That (13) said, there are occasions, a wedding or a funeral, for example, (14) only certain clothes will (15)

Now fill in the spaces. Having a good idea of what the text is about will help you.

- 8 Do you think that clothes are as important as personality? How do you respond to people who dress very differently to you? How do you respond to the way people in government or celebrities dress?

Speaking

1 With a partner, talk about the following.

- How important is it to look attractive?
- What do you think makes a face attractive?
- What's your opinion of
 - cosmetic surgery
 - nose and lip piercing
 - make-up
 - wigs
- How important are good looks to a politician?
- Would you describe yourself as a) immaculate, b) smart or c) neither?
- Do you ever look a) scruffy or b) unkempt?

2 Read both texts. With a partner, decide which points the writer is making in each.

Text 1

Recently, a politician was mocked in the press for having a digitally enhanced poster of himself produced. Gone were the receding hairline and wrinkles and a younger, more attractive face peered down from the hoarding. However, there does seem to be evidence that, although they may be unaware of it, a considerable number of people vote according to a candidate's looks. A scientific experiment which used photos of just under 2,000 political candidates and over 10,000 voters took place recently. It found that if a candidate was attractive, then both men and women were more likely to believe that he or she was trustworthy and very able. When a candidate's educational background and occupation were included as an additional check, it was found to have no effect.

Text 2

The images we see on magazine covers today are not what they used to be. A few clicks of the mouse on Photoshop can easily transform models and celebrities into living Barbies. It seems as if advertisers and photojournalists are on the quest to define and sell 'ideal beauty'. Female models have their spots and wrinkles airbrushed out, their legs and eyelashes are made to look longer than they really are and faces magically become more symmetrical. Perhaps the time has come for legislation prohibiting editors from using these techniques? Or, maybe, as some people think, all this is nothing new. Artists have been doing something similar for centuries and we have accepted it as normal.

3 Now look at this summary of the two texts. There are five linking words missing. Decide which answer A, B or C, best fits each space. Use the information in the Phrase spot to help you.

According to the first text, research has shown that both people involved in the political process and, (1) , the public at large, unconsciously give more weight to a candidate's attractiveness than to their background skills. (2) , good-looking candidates were seen to possess very positive personal qualities.

Text B puts forward the opinion that (3) , modern technology enables people in the media to idealise faces and bodies. It (4) goes on to question whether this is really a problem and (5) it asks whether this issue is entirely modern.

- | | | |
|--------------|----------------|---------------------|
| 1 A thus | B additionally | C finally |
| 2 A Moreover | B Then | C On the other hand |
| 3 A although | B besides | C firstly |
| 4 A besides | B then | C therefore |
| 5 A finally | B equally | C although |

4 Now write two paragraphs of about 120 words each, giving your opinion on the points mentioned in the two texts. Try to link your sentences effectively.

Phrase spot

In the Paper 2, Part 1 writing task, it is important to use linking devices effectively. This means choosing your words with care. Avoid beginning a sentence with these words – And, Or, But.

Link your points together using a variety of linking words and phrases, such as the following.

Introducing	Adding	Conceding
First of all,	Besides,	however
Firstly,	Moreover,	even though
Secondly,	In addition,	although
At the same time,	Additionally,	on the other hand
	Above all,	then again
	Not only, ... but also
Equation	Summarising	Result
Equally,	Finally,	therefore
Likewise,	In short/brief,	thus
Similarly,	In conclusion,	consequently
In the same way,	To conclude,	so

5 The following are definitions of personality types. With a partner, decide if the definition is correct or not. If you think the definition is wrong, write a correct version.

EXAMPLE: An observant person is one who is always interested in everyone else's business.

Wrong. An observant person is one who is good at noticing things.

- a A morbid person is one who is interested in unpleasant subjects, especially death.

Paper 1 Part 6 Gapped text

This part of the Reading and Use of English paper consists of one text, from a range of sources, which has had seven paragraphs removed and placed in jumbled order after the text. You must decide from where in the text the paragraphs have been removed. This part tests knowledge of cohesion (the relationship of the words/sentences and paragraphs to each other), text structure and global meaning.

You are going to read an article about telling lies. Seven paragraphs have been removed from the extract. Choose from the paragraphs A–H the one which fits each gap (1–7). There is one extra paragraph which you do not need to use.

Would I lie to you?

Blatant dishonesty has invaded our culture. Sue Jackson explains how to spot a liar.

Who hasn't told a lie? Even the most upstanding individual probably utters one occasionally to help the day to run more smoothly. But, according to experts, the extent to which people regularly tell serious untruths has exploded. Lying has pervaded every aspect of our lives.

Research in California reveals that people lie up to 20 times a day, while in a poll last year, a quarter of respondents admitted being untruthful on a daily basis. Only 8 per cent claimed they had never lied – although there is always the chance that even then they weren't being honest. Many of these will be sweet little lies, the type psychologists refer to as 'false positives' and the sort we are all guilty of committing when we want to appear more enthusiastic about something than we really are.

2

Until recently it was thought that only manipulative and Machiavellian characters were prone to excessive fabrication of this sort, but research has proved otherwise. According to experts, anyone under pressure or with a big enough incentive is prepared to say something that isn't true.

3

That figure rose to one in three among people with university qualifications. Apparently, this sort of background gives people the vocabulary and the confidence to deceive. The lies are more sophisticated and plausible than you might find elsewhere in society.

Read the Exam advice and then do the task below.

Questions 1, 2 and 3 have some clues to help you. Some words have been underlined in both the main article and the missing paragraphs. When you have the answers to questions 1, 2 and 3, do the same with the other questions. Find the words which tell you which paragraph goes where and underline them. Some words will be topic words and others grammatical links.

The proliferation of lying in corporate culture means that there are huge profits to be gained by companies who can weed out real-life fraudsters before employing them. Numerous studies have been conducted, including some using video cameras, to analyse people who lie. There are two main methods of ousting liars, although one, the mechanical lie detector or polygraph, requires subjects to be trussed up in electrodes, so it hardly lends itself to interviews. That leaves body language and psychological testing.

5

However, sometimes the subconscious takes over. Liars often start blinking fast, a visual sign that the brain is concentrating hard on the task in hand, and are likely to frequently touch their body and face with their hands. Liars are also more likely to tap or swing a foot as they speak.

6

Everyone seems to agree that good liars don't show non-verbal signals, so you need to know what to look for. Lying takes a lot of effort, so often they will rely on past experience to see them through and reduce the cognitive load.

Experts, however, agree that the one person you shouldn't deceive is yourself – and that, once you begin to do so, it is a sure sign that your untruthfulness is getting out of hand.

A This makes detecting the charlatan who fibs his way through a CV very difficult. In the film Liar, Liar the comedian Jim Carrey played a smooth-talking lawyer and consummate liar who specialises in dealing with untrustworthy clients whom no one else will take on. Only when his young son made a wish to see his father get through an entire day without lying was Carrey's character forced to tell the truth. Mayhem ensued.

B Things like 'That was delicious, thank you', 'You look great in that dress' and 'Of course I want to see you'. They are mostly considered harmless social lubricants. But at the other end of the spectrum are the compulsive liars who are effortlessly dishonest.

C Visual clues are not wholly reliable, as experienced deceivers are aware of the common give-away signs and take calculated measures to avoid them. Shifty eyes, for instance, are traditionally thought to be a sure way to tell whether someone is being dishonest, but experienced fabricators will capitalise on this myth.

D So, for instance, people who are lying about where they have been may declare they were at the cinema or the gym so that their untruth doesn't take too much mental planning. It is easier to make up a story about something they know well and have done many times.

E 'We are experiencing an epidemic of lying,' says Professor Leo Damak, an expert in lie detection at a leading university. 'It has always been around, but we are much more aware of it now.' In one study of college students, 85 per cent of couples reported that one or both of them had lied about past relationships or recent events. In another, it was found that dating partners lie to each other in about a third of their conversations.

F A recent study found that pathological liars are just as likely to be self-confident, attractive and popular as they are introverted and withdrawn. It also seems that the better educated a person is, the higher their level of deceit. It was found that falsehoods typically occurred in one fifth of all ten-minute conversations they have.

G Obviously, many won't stand for ambiguity any more. By being more aware of how and why someone will tell a lie, they have more chance of catching him before he tells another and causes real harm.

H However, vocabulary and sounds are generally considered more reliable indicators than body movements. Liars tend to use fewer words, take longer to start answering a question and pause a lot as if to mentally rehearse what they are about to say. Their voices may adopt a high pitch and they are prone to repetition.

EXAM ADVICE

- Read through the base text for general meaning and then read the removed paragraphs very carefully. Go back and read the base text more carefully.
- Highlight any words which will help you to find which paragraph goes where.
- You need to fully understand what is going on in each paragraph to be able to do this task. However, both subject and grammatical links are important.
- Try to find a suitable paragraph for each gap. Check it fits by reading both the paragraph before and the paragraph after.
- Go back at the end and check that the whole passage makes sense.
- As a last check, make sure the extra paragraph wouldn't fit in any of the gaps. If it would, you will need to check all your answers carefully again to see where you have gone wrong.

 - Roughly how many languages are there in the world?
 - Approximately how many languages do you think die out every year?
 - Which language is spoken more than any other?
 - Do you think your language is worth learning by other people?

Reading

- Read through the article quickly and then answer these questions.

- Read the article again more carefully and then answer the questions which follow.

DEATH SENTENCE

A language dies only when the last person who speaks it dies. One day it's there; the next it is gone. Here is how it happens. In late 1995, a linguist, Bruce Connell, was doing some fieldwork in the Mambila region of Cameroon. He found a language called Kasabe, which no westerner had studied before. It had just one speaker left, a man called Bogon. Connell had no time on that visit to find out much about the language, so he decided to return to Cameroon a year later. He arrived in mid-November, only to learn that Bogon had died on November 5.

On November 4, Kasabe existed as one of the world's languages; on November 6, it did not. The event might have caused a stir in Bogon's village. If you are the last speaker of a language, you are often considered special in your community. You are a living monument to what the community once was. But outside the village, who knew or mourned the passing of what he stood for?

There is nothing unusual about a single language dying. Communities have come and gone throughout history, taking their languages with them. But, judged by the standards of the past, what is happening today is extraordinary. It is language extinction on a massive scale. According to the best estimates, there are now about 6,000 languages in the world. Of these, about half are going to die out during this century. This means that, on average, there is a language dying out somewhere in the world every two weeks or so.

A survey published by SIL International, formerly known as the Summer Institute of Linguistics, established that there were 51 languages with only one speaker left – 28 in Australia alone. There are almost 500 languages in the world with fewer than 100 speakers; 1,500 with fewer than 1,000 speakers; more than 3,000 with fewer than 10,000 speakers; and a staggering 5,000 languages with fewer than 100,000 speakers. Ninety-four per cent of the world's languages are spoken by only 6% of its people. No wonder so many are in danger.

Many languages die as a result of cultural assimilation. When one culture assimilates another, the sequence of events affecting the endangered language is usually characterised by three broad stages. The first is immense pressure on the people to speak the dominant language. The second stage is a period of bilingualism; people become increasingly efficient in their new language while still retaining competence in their old. Then, often quickly, bilingualism starts to decline, with the old language giving way to the new. This leads to the third stage, in which the younger generation increasingly finds its old language less relevant.

Is language death such a disaster? Surely, you might say, it is simply a symptom of more people striving to improve their lives by joining the modern world. So long as a hundred or even a couple of thousand languages survive, that is sufficient. No it is not. We should care about dying languages for the same reason that we care when a species of animal or plant dies. It reduces the diversity of our planet. In the case of language we are talking about intellectual and cultural diversity, not biological diversity, but the issues are the same.

Increasing uniformity holds dangers for the long-term survival of a species. The strongest ecosystems are those which are most diverse. If the development of multiple cultures is a prerequisite for successful human development, then the preservation of linguistic diversity is essential, because cultures are chiefly transmitted through spoken and written languages. Encapsulated within a language is most of a community's history and a large part of its cultural identity.

Sometimes what we might learn from a language is eminently practical, as when we discover new medical treatments from the folk medicine of an indigenous people; sometimes it is intellectual, as when the links between languages tell us something about the movements of early civilisations. Sometimes it is literary. Every language has its equivalent – even if only in oral form – of Chaucer, Wordsworth and Dickens, and of course, very often it is linguistic: we learn something new about language itself – the behaviour that makes us truly human, and without which there would be no talk at all. Ezra Pound summed up the core intellectual argument: 'The sum of human wisdom is not contained in any one language, and no single language is capable of expressing all forms and degrees of human comprehension.'

Not everyone agrees. Some people believe that the multiplicity of the world's languages is a curse rather than a blessing. If only we had just one language in the world – whether English, Esperanto, or whatever – we would all be better off. World peace would be established. Or so they think.

- 5 Read the article again and answer these questions.
- What does the writer mean by 'caused a stir' in line 17?
 - Explain in your own words what happens during 'cultural assimilation'? (lines 50–51)

Pidgin and Creole

Just as a language may develop varieties in the form of dialects, languages as a whole may change. Sometimes rapid language change occurs as a result of (1) between people who each speak a different language. In such circumstances a pidgin language may (2) Pidgins usually have low (3) with respect to other languages. They are grammatically (4) on one language but are also influenced, especially in vocabulary, by others; they have relatively small sound systems, reduced vocabularies and simplified and altered grammars, and they rely (5) on context in order to be understood.

Pidgins are often the result of traders meeting island and coastal peoples. A pidgin has no native speakers: when speakers of a pidgin have children who learn the pidgin as their first language, that language is then called a creole. (6) the creole has enough native speakers to form a speech community, the creole may (7) into a fuller language. Many Creole speakers think of their languages as dialects of some colonial language (e.g. dialects of French or English). Linguists nearly always disagree with this view – from our (8), Creoles have independent grammars and all the equipment of full, proper languages.

For questions 1–8, read the text above and decide which answer (A, B, C or D) best fits each gap.

Wish and if only

- 1 Read this business anecdote and then answer the question below.

The British company was chasing a multimillion-pound deal to sell slate from a quarry that it mined to a Spanish customer. The meeting was arranged, the plane arrived and the guests were whisked off to a smart restaurant. Everything was in place – but the interpreter failed to turn up. The directors managed to say the five words of holiday Spanish that they knew between them – several times – but most of the meal passed in embarrassed silence. The guests returned to Spain the next day and, needless to say, there was no deal.

One of the directors might have said to his colleague during the meal 'I wish I had learned Spanish' or 'I wish the customers could speak English'. What else might have been said using wish?

- 2 What verb form do you use after wish when you want to talk about
- the present?
 - the past?
 - something that is annoying you?
- 3 What difference does it make if you begin a sentence with If only ... rather than I wish?

Hope and wish are often confused. If you want something to be true or to happen in the future and you believe it's possible, then a structure such as I hope is required. Wish is used for things which you want to happen but think may not happen.

- 1 With a partner, look at the photos and talk together about whether or not you think that the photos show positive aspects of globalisation. You have about a minute to do this.

Extract One

You will hear part of an interview with a politician called Steven Bright, in which globalisation is being discussed.

- 1 Steven Bright is concerned that globalisation means a country
- A losing employment opportunities.
 - B having a lack of economic control.
 - C losing its sense of individuality.
- 2 Which aspect of loaning money to developing countries does Steven Bright disagree with?
- A the reasons for giving out loans
 - B the unrealistic amount of money loaned
 - C the imposition of certain conditions

Extract Two

You hear a woman called Paula Drinkwater talking about her research into bilingualism.

- 3 Why did Paula do research into bilingualism?
- A She needed a research project for her psychology doctorate.
 - B It was a natural development of a project she was involved in.
 - C She was keen to get into a new and exciting field.
- 4 What does Paula say about the experiment she did?
- A She thought it was too dangerous to repeat.
 - B She realised that any results would be questioned.
 - C She wasn't particularly surprised by the outcome.

Extract Three

You will hear a man called Bob talking about learning Chinese.

- 5 What is Bob doing when he speaks?
- A justifying the learning method he used
 - B criticising the way languages are often taught
 - C advising other people to learn Chinese
- 6 What does Bob say about some of Elena's ideas?
- A Some of them were more useful than they first appeared.
 - B They were based on what she had picked up in Spain.
 - C They didn't help with every aspect of learning Chinese.

- 2 Now, you have three minutes to talk together about the aspects of global culture that the photos show.

Things to think about:

- Does it make you feel excited or depressed when people say we live in a 'global village'?
 - In what ways do you think it affects culture in your country – for example, in music, food, education, work, family life, language?
 - Does global culture widen or cross the generation gap?
- 3 1.16 You will hear three different extracts. For questions 1–6, choose the answer (A, B or C) which fits best according to what you hear. Read through the questions carefully before you listen. After listening, discuss your answers with your partner.

Pronunciation

- 4 In the recording in this unit you heard the words homework and bookshelves. Where is the main stress in these words? Make as many combinations as you can from the following words and say where the main stress should go. Some combinations are written as one word, some as two words and others take a hyphen. Use a dictionary to check.

EXAMPLE: old house

boathouse

old seat back tea house woman carpet bag horse dog red boat wine sheep road sign glass race

- 5 For questions 1–8, read the text below. Use the word given in capitals at the end of some of the lines to form a word that fits in the space in the same line. There is an example at the beginning (0).

Remember the words must be spelled correctly. Use your dictionary to check.

MODERN CULTURE?

When people talk about contemporary culture they are just as (0) LIKELY to be talking about fast cars, trainers or high heels as they are to be talking about Shostakovich or Shakespeare.

Goods have become as (1) a measure and marker of culture as the Great and the Good. The word 'culture' can now cover just about anything. Culture is no longer merely the beautiful and singular.

It wasn't until the late twentieth century that a (2) interest in objects began to replace the traditional interest in -isms, with historians, (3) critics and philosophers all suddenly becoming fascinated by the meaning of objects, large and small. Is this a sign, perhaps, of a society cracking under the strain of too many things?

Our current (4) with material culture, one might argue, is simply a (5) to the Western crisis of abundance. There are obvious problems with this materialist (6) of culture. If our experience of everyday life is so (7) , then how much more so is the (8) of our everyday things under scrutiny?

Part 2 Article

For Part 2 of Paper 2, you may have to write an article on a certain topic or discussion point. Real-world articles carry an eye-catching title, open with a thought-provoking statement and use stylistic devices to hold the reader's interest throughout.

1 These quotes are all to do with globalisation. Match each one to the organisation or product to which it refers.

- a 'It can locate thousands of sites on your chosen topic within seconds and operates at country-level, so you won't need to wade through lots of irrelevant American stuff.'
- b 'Name me one bar in the whole world where you can't get this or its local equivalent – they'll be serving it on the moon next!'
- c 'Their innovation revolutionised the music industry and led to a worldwide collapse in CD sales.'
- d 'The company has a high profile and its logo pops up everywhere, even at sports events – driving one is a real status symbol.'

2 Read the article below and choose the best title, a, b or c.

- a GLOBALISATION MEANS STANDARDISATION
- b LIKE IT OR LUMP IT
- c DON'T WORRY, BE HAPPY

Nowadays, we hear a lot about the growing threat of globalisation, accompanied by dire warnings that the rich pattern of local life is being eroded, and that its many dialects and traditions are on the verge of extinction – but stop and think for a moment about the many positive aspects that globalisation is bringing. Read on and you are bound to feel comforted, ready to face a global future.

Consider the Internet, that prime example of our shrinking world. Leaving aside the all-too-familiar worries about pornography and political extremism, even the most parochial must admit that immeasurable benefits are offered by it, not just in terms of education, the sector for which the Internet was originally designed, but more importantly, the dissemination of news and comment worldwide. With global internet access and Smartphone technology, it is increasingly difficult for dictators to maintain regimes of misinformation, and any oppressed group is able to organise themselves quickly and effectively.

Is the world dominance of brands like Nike and Coca-Cola so bad for us, when all is said and done? Sportswear and soft drinks are innocuous products when compared to the many other things that have been globally available for a longer period of time – dangerous drugs, for example. In any case, just because Nike trainers and Coke cans are for sale, it doesn't mean you have to buy them – even globalisation cannot negate the free will of the individual.

Critics of globalisation can stop issuing their doom and gloom statements. In the final analysis, life goes on, and undoubtedly has more to offer for many citizens of the world than it did for their parents' generation.

- 3 Do you agree with the views expressed? Why? / Why not? Note down some counter-arguments to this positive viewpoint.
- 4 Look back at the article to find these expressions, which are used to underline an opinion.

when all is said and done (line 25)
in the final analysis (lines 37–38)

Do you know these similar expressions? Fill in the missing words.

- a at the of the day
b things considered
c when you to think of it d in the light of day e in all
- 5 Read this rhetorical question, which introduces the third paragraph of the article.

Is the world dominance of brands like Nike and Coca-Cola so bad for us, when all is said and done?

Turn statements a–c into rhetorical questions, using one of the expressions from 4 and making any changes necessary.

EXAMPLE: The net effect of globalisation is to standardise everything.

Isn't the net effect of globalisation to standardise everything, when you come to think of it?

- a American products impose a way of life that many of us regard as alien.
b Globalisation could bring more equality to the world.
c It's very depressing to find a McDonald's in every town.
- Write two more rhetorical questions on the negative aspects of globalisation, referring to the notes you made in 3.
- 6 Write a paragraph of 50 words to insert into the article, to give a more balanced answer. Start your paragraph with a rhetorical question.
- 7 Use the advice above to answer the following Part 2 task. Write 280–320 words.

An international current affairs magazine has invited readers to contribute articles entitled 'Globalisation – good news or bad?' for its next issue. You decide to write an article explaining your personal views on this topic.

Write your article.

EXAM ADVICE

- Read the question carefully.
- Spend a few minutes making notes of ideas to include.
- Order these ideas logically and to best effect.
- Present a balanced argument or personal view.
- Use rhetorical questions to maintain interest.
- Write in an appropriate register.
- Include a punchy final message.

Speaking

- 1 What causes ups and downs in relationships? What external factors can put stress on a marriage or partnership? What character traits and personal attributes contribute to a successful long-term relationship?
- 2 Rank these aspects from 1 to 7, with 1 being the most important factor. Then summarise what counts in a relationship, justifying your ideas.
 - sharing a sense of humour
 - being honest and trustworthy
 - lending emotional support
 - taking the lead in a crisis
 - being willing to compromise
 - having interests in common
 - being loyal and dependable

Exam spot

In Paper 3 Part 3, the multiple-choice task, you have to understand detail and infer meaning. This will include identifying attitude or opinion in what is said. Read the five questions carefully before the recording starts and read them again before the second listening. They provide clues on what to listen out for.

Listening

- 3 17 You will hear an interview with Steve, who talks about the love of his life, Abby. For questions 1–5, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which fits best according to what you hear.
 - 1 How did Abby feel about Steve five years ago?
 - A She felt the same way as Steve did about her.
 - B She was uncertain about starting any relationship.
 - C She thought he was fun to be with occasionally.
 - D She looked up to Steve, but didn't love him.
 - 2 How did Steve explain Abby's change of heart initially?
 - A He saw it as an aberration, brought on by boredom.
 - B He thought she was having a laugh at his expense.
 - C He put it down to her being lonely and unattached.
 - D He decided something at work must have upset her.
 - 3 What did Steve's work colleagues suddenly notice about him?
 - A He was putting in longer hours than he had done.
 - B He was showing more commitment to his work.
 - C He seemed preoccupied by a personal problem.
 - D He spent less time chatting with them in the office.
 - 4 On hearing Steve's declaration, the first thing Samantha did was to
 - A get some flowers for Abby.
 - B tell Steve's office he was sick.
 - C burst into tears at his news.
 - D rush round to Abby's place.
 - 5 At the family wedding, Steve
 - A announced his plan to get married to Abby.
 - B showed an American how to drive a British car.
 - C was given advice by someone he didn't know well.
 - D was attacked by his mother for ditching Samantha.
- 4 Will Steve and Abby's marriage work out? Why? / Why not?

- 5 Steve says Abby has always had a streak of theatricality. What does he mean by this?

Many adjectives collocate with streak, for example jealous, nasty, romantic, ruthless, sadistic, vicious. Are all of these attributes negative?

Fill the spaces in the 'problem page' letter with words from the recording. Then decide what advice you would give Christine.

Can too much romance be a bad thing? I'm beginning to think so! I met Max at my local gym seven months ago and it was love at (1) I soon discovered his deeply romantic (2), which I absolutely revelled in to begin with. He would bombard me with chocolates and fluffy toys, turn up on my doorstep with champagne and roses and text me every day with really (3) messages. The trouble is, he still does. I feel our relationship should have moved beyond these excessively romantic (4), but he obviously sees it differently. I'm sure Max is the (5) for me, and I'd say 'yes' immediately if he (6) the question. But I really can't take much more romance. It's suffocating! What should I do? I don't want to hurt his feelings.

Christine (22)

Vocabulary

Phrasal verbs

- 6 Look at these examples of nouns that collocate with phrasal verbs.

To fend off the problem, I threw myself into my job.
I couldn't keep up the pretence any longer.

Make similar expressions, choosing from the lists below. Some of the nouns will be used more than once. Suggest other noun collocations for each phrasal verb if you can.

blurt out	an argument
bottle up	a problem
choke back	a secret
fend off	criticism
keep up	appearances
shoot down	emotions
sweep aside	tears
tease out	rage
tone down	blows
whip up	accusations

Now use some of these expressions in sentences of your own based on the following situations.

- You have seen your best friend arm-in-arm with someone other than their partner.
- A publisher doesn't want to hurt a new writer's feelings but thinks their novel is rubbish.
- At a protest rally, a student is giving a passionate speech to the crowd.
- Two teenagers are having an argument which has degenerated into physical violence.
- You had to give some disappointing news to your family and it has affected them, though they don't want to show this.
- A politician is demolishing a member of the opposition party's reasoning in a debate.

Idiom spot

Explain the meaning of these idioms from the recording.

- | | |
|------------------------|-------------------------------|
| a tying the knot | g rolled up her sleeves |
| b cast my net | h at death's door |
| c bolt from the blue | i giving me the cold shoulder |
| d time on her hands | j get a grip |
| e calling the tune | |
| f carrying a torch for | |

Now complete these idioms, four of which contain keywords from a-j.

- The union has its tied, as it can no longer support any form of industrial action.
- The party has been losing its on those middle class voters who have traditionally been so loyal.
- I've got a cunning plan up my which I think you're going to approve of.
- We're at straws here – there's no way a deal is going to be struck.
- Once again, it seems that the government has failed to the nettle on transport.
- I haven't quite got to with Jack's eccentric behaviour, though I'm learning fast!
- Marion played right into management's by voicing her concerns so blatantly.
- There are several jobs up for in the marketing department.

- How many new friends have you made via the Internet? What are the advantages and disadvantages of social networking sites that you have used?
- Skim the text below to find out why the Internet was especially important for Richard and Cindy. Ignore spaces 1–8 for the moment.

♥ Love on the INTERNET ♥

Richard and his American wife Cindy are extremely affectionate towards (0) EACH other and talk constantly – using sign language. Cindy has been deaf (1) birth, but Richard lost his hearing only recently. He had had problems as a child, although doctors failed to find (2) amiss. However, on finishing university, his hearing difficulties became acute. He was so depressed he (3) ate and his weight dropped to 44 kilos. (4) been surrounded by sound his whole life, he found living in this new silent world completely devastating.

Richard learnt sign language so (5) to be able to communicate again and his audiologist suggested finding new friends online. (6) hours of getting this advice, Richard was in contact with other deaf people. For the (7) part, he chatted to Americans, finding them particularly upbeat. No (8) had he got chatting to Cindy than he was bowled over. Their signed wedding took place on a Mississippi riverboat only a few months later.

Now complete 1–8, using only one word in each space.

- Look back at the beginning and end of the first paragraph. Are the degree adverbs extremely affectionate and completely devastating interchangeable? Why? / Why not?

Which degree adverbs can only modify the adjectives in column A? Which only relate to column B? Three adverbs can be used with both sets of adjectives. Which ones?

- Choose adverb–adjective combinations from the box to complete sentences a–f. Use each one once only. Then make two sentences of your own with the remaining phrases.

absolutely staggering fairly laid-back highly suspicious remarkably accurate

- It's been around here without Tom, but we're all putting on a brave face until he gets back.
- I missed out on a trip to the States because I was ill – and what makes it is that they were going to fly me business class!
- The guys are by their poor performance in front of the home fans and hope to play better in Australia next month.

- I find it that anyone manages to have a proper social life, given the hours we work here!
- Both girls were of their brother's trip to Mauritius and would have liked to accompany him.

5 Although adjectives are generally classified as either gradable or ungradable, some are used in both ways, often with a change in meaning. Consider these examples of the adjective dead.

The tiny bird had fallen from its nest and was dead. (Literal use – ungradable – a bird is either dead or alive.)

The town centre is completely dead after eight o'clock at night. (Figurative use – gradable, with degree adverb used for emphasis.)

Compare the use of British in these examples. Which is ungradable?

Richard is British by birth but moved to Spain 20 years ago.

Despite living in Spain, Richard remains very British in his behaviour.

6 Comment on the differences in meaning in these pairs of examples. Which pairs include a meaning that is restricted to informal use?

a I couldn't get to the market today, so we'll have to use frozen spinach instead.

It's minus 15 outside and I had to walk home – I'm absolutely frozen!

b Your glass is empty. Shall I get you another drink?

Margit's life is totally empty without him.

c Brad won't listen to me – he's being utterly impossible!

It was impossible to drive the car as all four tyres were flat.

d The crowd went absolutely insane when the band came on stage. He was finally diagnosed as insane and remained in an institution until his death.

e Right now, Shirley feels she has an utterly bleak future ahead of her. The house stands on a bleak, windswept moor and is very isolated.

f They eventually dished up a pretty tasteless bowl of lukewarm soup. George's jokes in the wedding speech were fairly tasteless in my view.

ROAD

- 1 Why do people feel the need to conform in society? How important is it for an individual to feel part of a group? What is the attraction of belonging to a particular club – or a gang?
- 2 Read these two texts about belonging to a group. Where do they overlap in subject matter?

There are between 100 and 200 gangs in London alone, and their members are getting younger – down to ten years old in some cases. In an inner-city area dominated by gangs, it's almost impossible to improve people's quality of life, so addressing gang culture is a critical element in tackling social breakdown.

There is a need for more male role models in schools, as constructive fatherhood has disappeared in many of these communities. The original value set has collapsed and often, a gang provides a kind of structure, promoting a sense of belonging and a perverse sense of purpose.

Text 2

A group is a collection of individuals, and the prejudices and shortcomings of individuals are likely to be found at group level too. However, groups often behave bullishly, reaching more polarized decisions than individuals. Irvin Janis has studied the rationality of group decision-making, using the Orwellian term 'groupthink' to refer to poor group thinking. Janis identifies three aspects to groupthink: a tendency to overestimate the group, giving rise to the illusion of invulnerability; a lack of open-mindedness in decision-making, disregarding additional (outside) information; a craving for uniformity, leading to self-censorship, with direct pressure being exerted on dissenters in the drive towards unanimity.

- 3 Which two statements below accurately reflect the content of text 1? Identify where the ideas come in the text.
 - 1 Damaged communities will only be rebuilt once gang culture is dealt with.
 - 2 With so few male teachers, schools need to seek positive parental support.
 - 3 In the absence of a social code, gangs offer a substitute group dynamic.

4 Reformulate phrases a–h from text 2 concisely, including some of the words below.

absent/absence	biased/bias deceive/deceptive(ly)/deception	desire/desirability extreme/extremist	failings/failure
homogenous/homogeneity	inclined/inclination
inflexible/inflexibility	invincible/invincibility oppose/opposition	radical/radically rigid/rigidity	suppress/suppression

- a the prejudices and shortcomings of individuals
 - b groups often behave bullishly
 - c a tendency to overestimate the group
 - d the illusion of invulnerability
 - e a lack of open-mindedness
 - f a craving for uniformity
 - g self-censorship
 - h direct pressure being exerted on dissenters
- 5 Read the sample answer below. How successfully does it summarise and evaluate both texts? Identify examples of where the writer has reformulated the original wording. Replace any 'lifted' words and phrases in red with your own words.

Becoming an accepted member of a group is a natural human desire that is present in all walks of life, from football supporters and music societies to the hardest of street gangs. Both texts raise the phenomenon of the group mentality – the first considers the social context, while the second is possibly more rooted in the commercial world.

The first text is a simple description of the harsh realities of 21st century inner-city life, where children from broken homes join gangs in their search for acceptance and a perverse sense of purpose. The writer believes that only by addressing gang culture will society be improved.

The second text reflects complex ideas about the dynamics of a group, suggesting that any prejudices or shortcomings that an individual has will also be present in a group. This text cites the work of Janis on group decision-making, which he terms "groupthink". According to Janis, groups often behave bullishly when making decisions. He identifies a trio of "groupthink" characteristics: the illusion of invulnerability, a lack of open-mindedness in decision-making and a craving for uniformity.

The second text offers a plausible scenario in the world of business, where poor boardroom decisions are often the result of blinkered vision and where disregarding external advice often leads to poor decisions. However, do Janis's ideas extend outside the realm of business? Up to a point: two of his three criteria could even be applied to gang culture, where there may well be a feeling of invincibility and a desire to conform. However, decision-making itself is unlikely to form part of gang mentality, where actions are taken largely on impulse.

Paper 3 Part 4 Multiple matching

This part of the Listening paper consists of five short themed monologues, lasting approximately 35 seconds each, with ten multiple-matching questions. In Part 4 you will need to identify gist, attitude, main points and interpret the context. It is divided into two tasks, each with a different focus. Each task contains five questions and requires you to select the correct option from a list of eight. You hear the information to complete each task in random order – i.e. you might hear the information for Task One before you hear the information for Task Two. You hear the recording twice.

1 Read through both tasks extremely carefully.

You will hear five short extracts in which different people are talking about their relationships.

TASK ONE

For questions 1–5, choose from the list (A–H) each speaker's reason for being initially attracted to their partner.

- | | | | | |
|---|--------------------------|-----------|----------------------|---|
| A | having a sense of humour | Speaker 1 | <input type="text"/> | 1 |
| B | being tolerant of others | Speaker 2 | <input type="text"/> | 2 |
| C | being clever | Speaker 3 | <input type="text"/> | 3 |
| D | being shy around others | Speaker 4 | <input type="text"/> | 4 |
| E | being outgoing | Speaker 5 | <input type="text"/> | 5 |
| F | being well-dressed | | | |
| G | having lots of energy | | | |
| H | being good-looking | | | |

TASK TWO

For questions 6–10, choose from the list (A–H) which quality each speaker appreciates most in their partner now.

- | | | | | |
|---|--------------------------------------|-----------|----------------------|----|
| A | their conscientious approach to work | Speaker 1 | <input type="text"/> | 6 |
| B | their determination | Speaker 2 | <input type="text"/> | 7 |
| C | their ability to judge character | Speaker 3 | <input type="text"/> | 8 |
| D | their grasp of detail | Speaker 4 | <input type="text"/> | 9 |
| E | their attitude towards money | Speaker 5 | <input type="text"/> | 10 |
| F | their affectionate nature | | | |
| G | their patience | | | |
| H | their loyalty | | | |

While you listen, you must complete both tasks.

- 2 1¹⁸ Now, you are going to hear Speaker 1. Look at both Task One and Task Two and decide which answers are true for the first speaker. You will hear the recording twice.

The answer for 1 is E and the answer for 6 is H. With a partner, look at the recording script for Speaker 1 below. Underline the parts containing the answers. Also look to see where distraction is being used.

Speaker 1

I was at a 21st birthday 'do'. I'd just broken up with a beautiful girl who I'd been head over heels in love with and my loyal friends thought it was time to find me someone else. I'm quite shy but I was instantly taken with this girl they introduced me to, called Sarah. She struck me as really fun and sparkling, ready to chat to anyone, even me! Anyway, we were married a year later. She's a wonderful person – she must be to have stayed married to me all these years. She's been there through thick and thin, and I can tell you there have been times when money's been extremely tight.

- 3 1¹⁹ Now listen to Speaker 2 and, with a partner, decide on the answers for questions 2 and 7. When you have decided what the answers are, look at the recording script below and underline the part of the text which gave you the answers. You will hear the recording twice.

Speaker 2

I'm a bit of a workaholic and so actually finding someone to have a relationship with was always tricky. I'm at the top of my game, head of a large fashion house, and I've found that men find me a bit intimidating because I'm so determined to succeed. I guess that's why I've always liked older men – they are usually less insecure. My partner is great, so shrewd about people, much better than me, although when I first met him, even though he was as stylish as everyone around me, it was his intellect that drew me to him. I like to think we're really well matched.

EXAM ADVICE

- You have 45 seconds to read through both tasks before you hear the recording. Make good use of this time.
- Always put an answer, even if you aren't sure.
- You hear the extract twice, and it is very important that you take the opportunity to check your answers carefully during the second listening. If you make a mistake with one answer, it could affect your answers to the other questions.
- Don't put an answer because you hear the same words in the recording as you see in the question. It is very unlikely to be correct and much more likely to be distraction.

- 4 1²⁰ You will notice that the order in which the information is given to complete the tasks is different. Speaker 1 mentions information for Task One first whereas Speaker 2 mentions information for Task Two first. The order in the exam can vary so you need to keep both tasks in mind when you are listening. Now listen to the other three speakers and for questions 3–5 and 8–10, choose from the lists A–H. Use each letter only once. There are three extra letters which you do not need to use. You will hear the recordings twice.

1 Discuss these questions on the role of science today.

- How have the lives of ordinary people been affected by recent scientific advances?
- In what areas are scientific discoveries likely to be made in the near future?
- Should scientific research be subject to tighter governmental controls?

Some years ago, scientists at Cornell University released photographs of a guitar no larger than a human blood cell, its strings just one hundred atoms thick. This Lilliputian instrument was sculpted from crystalline silicon, using an etching technique involving a beam of electrons. The implications of being able to develop machines that are too small to be seen with the naked eye are breathtaking, but we should not lose sight of the fact that nature got there first. The world is already full of nanomachines: they are called living cells. Each cell is packed with tiny structures that might have come straight out of an engineer's manual. Minuscule tweezers, scissors, pumps, motors, levers, valves, pipes, chains and even vehicles abound.

Individually, atoms can only jostle their neighbours and bond to them if the circumstances are right. Yet collectively, they accomplish ingenious marvels of construction and control, unmatched by any human engineering. Somehow nature discovered how to build the intricate machine we call the living cell, using only the raw materials to hand, all jumbled up. Even more remarkable is that nature built the first cell from scratch.

2

Like any urban environment, there is much commuting going on. Molecules have to travel across the cell to meet others at the right place and the right time in order to carry out their jobs properly. No overseer supervises their activities – they simply do what they have to do. While at the level of individual atoms life is anarchy, at this higher level, the dance of life is performed with exquisite precision.

Even nowadays, some people flatly deny that science alone can give a convincing explanation for the origin of life, believing that the

Reading

- 2 You are going to read an extract from a 'popular science' book that gives information about living cells and DNA. This is presented as a gapped text, as in Paper 1, Part 6. First read the text, ignoring the missing paragraphs. How has the writer tried to simplify the subject for the non-scientific reader?

living cell is just too elaborate, too contrived, to be the product of blind physical forces alone. Science may give a good account of this or that individual feature, they say, but it will never explain how the original cell was assembled in the first place.

It would be wrong, however, to suppose this is all there is to life. To use the cliché, the whole is more than the sum of its parts. The very word 'organism' implies cooperation at a global level that cannot be captured in the study of the components alone. Without understanding its collective activity, the job of explaining life is only partly done.

5

With the discovery of DNA, however, this mystery was finally solved. Its structure is the famous double helix, discovered by Crick and Watson in the early 1950s. The two helical strands are attached by cross-links and we can imagine the whole shape unwound and laid out to make a ladder, where the handrails are the two unwound helices and the rungs the cross-links.

Each rung is actually a pair of bases joined end to end and it is here that geometry comes in. A is tailor-made to butt neatly with T, while C and G similarly slot together snugly, though the forces that bind these base pairs in their lock-and-key fit are in fact rather weak. Imagine the two handrails being pulled apart, breaking all the base pairs, as if the ladder had been sawn up the middle. Each would be left with a row of complementary projecting arms.

So long as the base-pairing rules work correctly, this is guaranteed to be identical to the original. However, no copying process is perfect, and it is inevitable that errors will creep in from time to time, altering the sequence of bases – scrambling up the letters. If the message gets a bit garbled during replication, the resulting organism may suffer a mutation. Viewed like this, life is just a string of four-letter words, for we are defined as individuals by these minuscule variations in DNA.

3 Now read paragraphs A–H and use the underlined parts to help you fit them into the text correctly (there is one extra). Remember to look for links before and after a gap.

A Can such a magnificently self-orchestrating process be explained or might the mystery of life be, in the end, impenetrable? In 1933, the physicist Niels Bohr, one of the founders of quantum mechanics, concluded that life hides its secrets from us in the same way as an atom does.

B It is this templating that is the basis for the replication process and ultimately, the recipe for life. If a DNA molecule is pulled apart and if there is a supply of free base molecules – As, Gs, Cs and Ts – floating around, they will tend to slot in and stick to these exposed stumps and thereby automatically reconstruct a new strand.

C Near the top of my list of its defining properties is reproduction. Without it, and in the absence of immortality, all life would sooner or later cease. For a long time, scientists had very little idea how organisms reproduce themselves. Vague notions of invisible genes conveying biological messages from one generation to the next revealed little.

D Of course, there's more to it than just a bag of gadgets. The various components fit together to form a smoothly functioning whole, like an elaborate factory production line. The miracle of life is not that it is made of nanotools, but that these tiny diverse parts are integrated in a highly organised way.

E Boiled down to its essentials, this secret can in fact be explained by molecular replication. The idea of a molecule making a copy of itself may seem rather magical, but it actually turns out to be quite straightforward. The underlying principle is in fact an exercise in elementary geometry.

F I beg to differ. Over the past few decades, molecular biology has made gigantic strides in determining which molecules do what to which. Always it is found that nature's nanomachines operate according to perfectly ordinary physical forces and laws. No weird goings-on have been discovered.

G The former perform a purely scaffolding role, holding the molecule together. The business part of DNA lies with the latter, which are constructed from four different varieties of molecules or bases, with the chemical names adenine, guanine, cytosine and thiamine – let's use their initials for simplicity's sake.

H As a simple-minded physicist, when I think about life at the molecular level, the question I keep asking is: How do all these mindless atoms know what to do? The complexity of the living cell is immense, resembling a city in the degree of its elaborate activity. Each molecule has a specified function and a designated place in the overall scheme so that the correct objects get manufactured.

4 At the end of the first paragraph, the writer refers to a set of technical things, from tweezers to chains. Decide which is suitable for these actions.

- a The floodwater was extracted by means of
- b A trumpet is played by shutting off a series of
- c Julie's hair had been hastily lopped off with
- d The splinter was finally pulled out with
- e The bike had been secured to the railings with

Idiom spot

Many technical words are used in other contexts, for example, a negotiating lever, a chain of supermarkets. They also occur in some idioms. Choose the correct word to complete idioms a–j and explain their meanings.

bolt	chain	fuse	gear	knife
nail	spade	strings	tubes	wires

- a the final in the coffin
- b to call a a
- c to go down the
- d a weak link in the
- e to blow a
- f with (no) attached
- g to get your crossed
- h to shoot your
- i to get into

12.2 Passive structures

When should the passive be used? In this example from 12.1, it is not important to know who made the nano-guitar – the emphasis is on the innovation itself.

This Lilliputian instrument was sculpted from crystalline silicon.

Jamaican athlete Usain Bolt

1 When is it more appropriate to use a passive rather than an active form? Match examples a–e to the explanations 1–5 below.

- a The world record for the men's 200 metres was broken by Usain Bolt in 2009.
 - b Over a thousand people have been affected by the recent flooding.
 - c Kerstin's knee is being operated on tomorrow at the City Hospital.
 - d The front of the building has been severely damaged.
 - e Jonathan's apartment was broken into twice last year.
- 1 the action is emphasised, but the sentence still mentions who is or was responsible for it
 - 2 who is or was responsible for the action is not important or not known
 - 3 the action is emphasised, but the sentence still mentions what was responsible for it
 - 4 what is or was responsible for the action is not important or not known
 - 5 who or what is or was responsible for the action is obvious so does not need to be mentioned

2 Rewrite these sentences in the passive, making the underlined words the subject of each sentence and deciding whether the agent needs to be mentioned.

- a They gave the Nobel Prize for Chemistry to Marie Curie for her discovery of radium.
- b Lengthy power cuts have affected homes in and around the city all this week.
- c Researchers found that the 'miracle' drug had unpleasant side-effects.
- d Scientists have found meteorites in Antarctica which they believe have come from the Moon.
- e Astronomers say that there is dark matter in the universe, but they haven't been able to detect this as yet.
- f Due to recent global restructuring, they will no longer manufacture the car in Europe.
- g Mark McGurl won the Truman Capote Award for Literary Criticism in 2011.
- h You should install the latest version of Adobe Flash to get the best from this application.

3 In the rewritten sentence h in 2, the use of the passive reflects not only the chosen emphasis, but also a shift in register, producing a more formal sentence and an impersonal tone. Rewrite these sentences in the passive to change their register.

EXAMPLE: You must supervise young children on this play equipment.

Young children must be supervised on this play equipment.

- a You mustn't bring food and drink into the lab.
- b You can't take any photographs inside this museum.
- c They're using infra-red equipment to search for further survivors.
- d Three postgraduate students will share the award for best innovation.
- e They are to carry out thorough safety checks immediately.

Corpus spot

Example e in 3 requires a passive infinitive. The Cambridge Learner Corpus shows that even at C2 level, candidates sometimes find it difficult to use passive infinitives and participle forms accurately. Correct the errors in these sentences.

- a I did not have to be remind of what had happened on that day.
- b If your boss doesn't mind you delaying some mornings, public transport could be a solution.
- c Protect tender plants from being damage by frost.
- d It was strange to been invited by his brother rather than by John himself.
- e Despite asked to attend a second interview, I wasn't offered the job.
- f Even though it may prove impossible for all the reasons to discover, research continues.

- 4 Complete the text below using suitable passives. Where a modal passive is required, be careful with the tense choice.

THE END OF THE DINOSAURS

In 1990, ten years after Nobel prizewinner Luis Alvarez first suggested a link between the extinction of the dinosaurs and an asteroid collision, a huge impact crater (1) (discover) underground, near the village of Chicxulub in the Yucatan, Mexico. Recent research has shown that this crater (2) (could not + cause) by volcanic activity. This is because a significant quantity of the element iridium, which is extremely rare on earth, (3) (detect) at the crater site, supporting the view that the crater (4) (must + form) by an asteroid. 65 million years ago, iridium-enriched dust (5) (would + throw) up into the atmosphere, causing the sun (6) (blot out) for many weeks. As a result, the temperature would have plummeted and the plants which (7) (eat) by the dinosaurs (8) (would + kill) by the accompanying acid rain. With the removal of their food chain, the dinosaurs could not have survived.

- 5 Rewrite these sentences using a noun formed from the underlined verb. You should add a new verb of your choice in the passive, making any other changes necessary.

EXAMPLE: They will only confirm a place on the course upon full payment.

Confirmation of a place on the course will only be issued upon full payment.

- They won't publish these scientific papers until next year.
- They have just announced big job losses on the local news.
- They are considering the planning application for a new sports centre.
- They will recommend the immediate closure of the hospital.
- They are to investigate the case in more depth.
- They didn't explain how much the project would cost.

- 6 For questions 1–6, complete the second sentence so that it has a similar meaning to the first sentence, using the word given. Do not change the word given. You must use between three and eight words, including the word given.

- 1 The European Space Agency's Rosetta mission aims to land a probe on a comet.

for

The aim of the European Space Agency's Rosetta mission is on a comet.

- 2 It will be necessary to wear safety gloves throughout this experiment.

duration

Safety gloves of this experiment.

- 3 Using electron beams, it is possible to manufacture machines that are too small to see.

naked

Tiny machines that cannot are manufactured by means of electron beams.

- 4 Recently, astronomers have been finding more and more planets outside our solar system.

increasing

Recently, an outside our solar system.

- 5 Advances in science should soon yield a cure for cancer.

brink

Scientists are thought finding a cure for cancer.

- 6 Although they tried to dissuade Josh from continuing with it, he has opted for physics as a career.

advised

Despite Josh has chosen a career in it.

12.3 Listening and Speaking

- 1 You are going to listen to a recorded task for Paper 4, Part 3, where one candidate will speak for two minutes and a second candidate will be asked a question. First, look at the prompt card below and decide what aspects might be covered in the recording.

What are the implications of scientific research today?

- career opportunities
- commercial interests
- moral issues

- 2 1 21 Now listen to the recording. How many of your ideas are covered? Do you agree with the speakers? Why? / Why not?

Pronunciation

- 3 Here are some expressions that Jana could have used to show more advanced language. Match them to their meanings 1–6.

- a in the vanguard
 - b a double-edged sword
 - c the lay person
 - d for its own sake
 - e subject to enough regulations
 - f the greater good
- 1 as an end in itself
 - 2 effectively controlled by law
 - 3 at the cutting-edge
 - 4 having advantages and disadvantages
 - 5 non-expert
 - 6 the benefit of society at large

- 1 22 Now listen to Jana using these expressions. Notice how she stresses certain words and slows down or pauses when making an important point. This can be quite effective in a two-minute talk – and will allow you time to think about what you want to say next.

- 4 1 23 Practise using the following words, building them up into the phrases and sentences you hear on the recording.

- a concern
- b duty
- c repercussions
- d significance

a tight ship	out your stall
the strings	your weight

a dangerous precedent	the record straight

5 Use expressions with set to describe the situations below.

EXAMPLE: The investigation has found Peter Gresham to be entirely innocent and will publish their findings.

The Precautionary Principle

How far should members of the public have to run the risk of personal (0) A where scientific or technological innovation is concerned? In some legal systems, including European Union law, the (1) of the 'precautionary principle' is a statutory requirement. The precautionary principle advises society to be (2) about a technology or practice where there is scientific uncertainty, ignorance, gaps in knowledge or the likelihood of (3) outcomes.

This runs (4) to the optimistic notion that any adverse effects that (5) unintentionally can be addressed. Indeed, some claim these may provide an opportunity to develop new solutions, and in this way (6) to economic growth. For this reason, the US Chamber of Commerce dislikes the precautionary approach and prefers: 'the use of sound science, cost-benefit analysis, and risk assessment when assessing a particular regulatory issue.' Its (7) is therefore to: 'Oppose the domestic and international adoption of the precautionary principle as a basis for regulatory decision making.' Yet history reminds us that asbestos, halocarbons and PCBs seemed like miracle substances at first, but (8) to be highly problematic for human and environmental health.

Part 2 Report

If you choose to write a report for Part 2 of Paper 2, make sure you use impersonal language and adopt a neutral tone. It is appropriate to include passive structures to achieve this. Sub-headings and other organising devices such as bullets will make your report easier to read.

- 1 Look at the sub-headings opposite, then read the report below, which is on career opportunities for science graduates. Decide where the sub-headings fit, and suggest where bullets would be helpful for readability.

Exciting new opportunities
A more unconventional path
Academic research
Next steps
A broad scope of employment
Education as a career

This report summarises the current career opportunities for science graduates, drawing largely on the experiences of past and present students. Many final-year students have already been invited to interviews and some have even been offered jobs, conditional on graduation.

The first point to stress is that interesting opportunities exist outside the specialist scientific fields. This is dealt with in the final section of the report.

Returning to pure science, it has been estimated that there will be over a thousand post-graduate posts available for the next academic year, countrywide. Students should consult their tutor for advice in the first instance. High-achievers should contemplate applying for scholarships to the U.S.A., where so much research is at the cutting edge. Students wishing to follow up on specific research possibilities in the States are advised to consult Professor Grimbleton.

The fast-moving developments in biotechnology and genetics look set to provide good job opportunities, as many companies are being expanded in their bids to become market leader. Four local companies have specifically requested graduate trainees from this college. They are Bio-futures, Genotech, PJF Seed Research and Railton Systems. Application forms can be obtained from the Administration Secretary.

Several past students have opted for jobs in teaching and it is recommended that anyone considering such a career should attend the information day planned by this department. At this event, it will not only be possible to meet Head Teachers and Science Coordinators from schools in the region, but also former college students who are now qualified and practising teachers.

As indicated above, any report on current opportunities would be incomplete without mentioning other non-scientific jobs that past students have taken up with relish. While none of these jobs can be said to demand the recall of actual science, the generic skills that students have been given through their undergraduate courses are directly relevant. Here are some of the more unusual career moves: accountancy, stockmarket brokering, counselling, air-traffic control and casino management.

More details can be found on the student website. A booklet is also in preparation.

- 2 The report contains some 'signposting' devices, for example, As indicated above. These are included to help the reader to process the report without undue effort. What other examples of signposting can you find in the report?

Here are some more useful signposting devices. Which are looking forward and which refer back?

- a As already discussed ...
- b Alongside this decision ...
- c Below is a different interpretation of ...
- d The previous statement confirms that ...
- e Further ideas will be elaborated in the next two sections.
- f As mentioned at the outset ...
- g It should now be considered whether ...
- h It would appear then that ...
- i The aspects covered earlier suggest ...
- j This does not necessarily mean that ...

- 3 Find examples of the following in the report opposite.

- a compound nouns
- b compound adjectives
- c prefixes
- d suffixes
- e topical expressions, e.g. market leader

EXAM ADVICE

- When writing a report, make a detailed plan.
- Draft sub-headings for each section.
- Add bullets when listing information.
- Signpost the information clearly.
- Write in a neutral and impersonal style.
- Include passive structures.
- Use a range of relevant vocabulary.

- 4 Now look at the following exam task.

You belong to an international film club and have been asked to write the club's annual report this year. This report is written for club members and has to include information about the main events held over the last twelve months, to present plans for activities in the coming year and to summarise the current financial position of the club in respect of money received and payments made.

To plan your report, make a spider diagram like the one below. Spend at least five minutes thinking of what to include under each of the three areas, adding to the ideas given. Then draft suitable sub-headings, further dividing the three main sections if necessary.

- 5 Now use this advice to write your report, in 280–320 words.

Use of English

- 1 Read this extract from an article about socks. For questions 1–14, think of the word which best fits each space. Use only one word in each space. There is an example at the beginning (0).

SOCKS

Mr Twenty-First Century strikes a pose on (0) THE pages of a 1939 issue of British Vogue magazine. He wears a jump-suit, belt and waistcoat festooned (1) hardware. His hat is 'an antenna snatching radio out of the ether', Vogue tells (2) (3) quite today's mobile-phone man, (4) close. However, as we reach his socks, the best Vogue's futurologist can (5) up with is 'disposable'.

Throwaway insults are (6) new for socks. And that's not (7) they have to put up with. Over a day, the average human foot (8) off at least half a cup of moisture – manna from heaven for those odour-causing micro-organisms. Yet socks are (9) the most ancient of human inventions – an Egyptian mummy's knitted socks are arguably the oldest surviving examples, (10) hand-sewn versions may (11) back to the Bronze Age. They surely deserve a better future than consignment to the bin.

Not (12) appreciates the sock's versatility, though. Albert Einstein famously eschewed socks altogether, apparently regarding them as an unnecessary luxury. I too go sockless in the summer. (13) the frost begins to bite, I can't help wondering, (14) Einstein have been wrong?

- 2 For questions 1–6, complete the second sentence so that it has a similar meaning to the first sentence, using the word given. Do not change the word given. You must use between three and eight words, including the word given.
- The children agreed they would each tidy the playroom on alternate days.
turns
The children the playroom.
 - Professor Smith talked firstly about living on Mars, and then discussed the Space Lab.
went
After talking about living on Mars, Professor Smith the Space Lab.
 - It's a shame Peter didn't wear a suit to the wedding.
put
If only the wedding.
 - Everyone remembers my great-uncle because he was always having arguments with his wife.
having
My great-uncle arguments with his wife.
 - We must always bear in mind that many scientific breakthroughs are due to luck.
sight
We must plays a large part in many scientific breakthroughs.
 - When it comes to friendship, I prefer having a few close friends to many acquaintances.
rather
As far a few close friends than many acquaintances.

Vocabulary

3 For questions a–n, decide which word is correct.

- a His plans came in for/came up with fierce criticism at the meeting.
- b My English teacher always had a nice turn/set of phrase when he commented on essays.
- c Lisa is such a bright, meticulous/vivacious girl, always fun and cheerful.

- n I have a terrible habit of whipping up/blurting out the first thing that comes into my mind.

Writing

4 Improve this report on an exchange visit by inserting suitable compound adjectives where the symbol * appears, choosing from the list below.

deep-sea	record-breaking	long-standing	glass-bottomed	wider-ranging inter-continental	easy-going	trouble-free	meticulously-planned	half-day

Here is my report on our club's recent exchange visit to Australia. Without exception, members who participated in this trip were highly appreciative of the * itinerary, not to mention the warm welcome extended by our * Australian hosts. This * relationship continues to flourish and we will be hosting a * number of visitors this summer (see below).

Travel

The * flights went smoothly and we arrived in Melbourne on schedule. A coach had been organised to transport us to the civic reception, where our individual hosts awaited us. Travel within Australia was mostly by plane – unfortunately, our visit coincided with industrial action, so our transfers were not entirely *.

Trips

The highpoint was the Great Barrier Reef, where two exhilarating days were spent * diving. Those members who chose not to dive were given the alternative of a * cruise in a * boat, which was said to be very enjoyable for all concerned.

Some members have suggested that the visit to the Kakadu National Park could have been extended, as it was rather rushed. In subsequent years, it might also be more informative to visit during the dry season, which would allow * access to the park.

Return visit

There will be 48 visitors to us in July, including six families with young children. In view of this, it will be necessary to find extra hosts. Strategies for achieving this should be agreed at the next club meeting. In anticipation, could the following suggestions be tabled:

- advertising in relevant journals
- mailshot to schools and colleges
- feature in local newspaper
- interview on KJY radio
- posters in public places, e.g. library
- club website?

Perhaps other members should be asked for further suggestions in advance of the meeting.

Vocabulary

Environment collocations

- 1 Match a word in A with one in B to make the correct collocation. Some words may be used more than once.

A	B
fossil	resources
severe	environment
pristine	sea levels
finite	famine
greenhouse	density
water	ice cap
climate	expectancy
solar	gases
population	shortages
melting	energy
rising	fuel
life	change

Speaking

- 2 Are we doing enough to save the planet? Look at the photos and discuss the problems shown. Try to think of some solutions. Use some of the collocations above.
- 3 Think about your daily routine and make a list of ways you could help the environment. With a partner, choose three things that you would both find the easiest to put into practice.

Listening

- 4 1 24 You are going to hear three different extracts on subjects relating to the environment.

Read through questions 1–6 opposite. Choose the answer (A, B or C) which fits best according to what you hear. There are two questions for each extract.

Extract One

You hear a woman talking about her job.

- 1 How does the woman get her message across to the school children?
- A She helps teachers to make their lessons more relevant.
B She takes advantage of their interests.
C She believes in getting them out of the classroom.
- 2 What does she find frustrating?
- A The lack of time she has in the classroom.
B That more waste could be recycled.
C The low prices paid for recycled waste.

Extract Two

You hear part of an interview with a climate change expert.

- 3 What does the man say about solar and wind as sources of energy?
- A They are often unreliable.
B They are costly to install.
C They are unlikely to be adopted in some countries.
- 4 What is the man's attitude to biomass energy?
- A It wouldn't supply enough of the world's energy needs.
B It may be politically more unacceptable than other renewables.
C It is untenable in the long term.

Extract Three

You hear two people talking on the radio about a controversial theory.

- 5 What does the man say about the theory?
- A It was ahead of its time.
B It wasn't a very scientific theory.
C It has never been acknowledged by the government.
- 6 What do the speakers agree about?
- A Lovelock's approach was too amateurish.
B Lovelock was rather an odd person.
C Lovelock alienated fellow scientists.
- 5 1 24 The extracts you heard illustrate different registers. Listen again, and then with a partner decide whether the extract is formal, informal or unmarked in tone. Give reasons for your decisions.

6 The following are all examples of words which have been used inappropriately by Proficiency candidates. The words are either formal, informal or unmarked. Decide when it would be appropriate to use each word.

EXAMPLE: kids / children

'Kids' is informal and used mainly in speaking; 'children' is unmarked.

- a people / persons
- b amelioration / improvement
- c bloke / man
- d stuff / things
- e frequented / went to
- f reckon / think
- g boozing / drinking
- h mates / friends
- i fellow / guy
- j snaps / photographs
- k pluses / advantages
- l lousy / terrible
- m prudent / careful
- n mad / annoyed

The words in the exercise above are all synonyms – that is words with the same or similar meaning. Synonyms can rarely be used interchangeably, either because of difference in register (as above), or because of a difference in use. For example, rife and widespread have a similar meaning – 'existing in many places':

Many illnesses are rife in areas with a poor water supply.

There is widespread flooding of coastal areas.

However, rife suggests something unpleasant, whereas widespread is a more unmarked or neutral word.

7 Decide which of the words in italics in each sentence below fits best. Justify your answers and think of a sentence using the alternative word.

- a I can't afford to buy a new car this year – I'm broke/destitute.
- b Her grandmother is always telling her she should eat more, as she's much too slender/skinny.
- c Dr Pitt has made many opponents/enemies because of his rudeness.
- d I have a feeling my horrible sister's been sneaking into/entering my room and reading my diary while I'm out.
- e The evening will commence/kick off with a short speech, given by Sir John Bertram.
- f The left back lost his cool/became displeased with his opponent and socked him in the jaw.
- g Pablo struck/touched the jammed window forcibly with his fist to make it open.
- h I felt the rain trickling/flooding slowly down the back of my collar.

8 For questions 1–8, read the text below and decide which answer (A, B, C or D) best fits each gap.

THE FUTURE

The environmental (1) for the future is mixed. In spite of economic and political changes, interest in and (2) about the environment remains high. Problems such as acid deposition, chlorofluorocarbons and ozone depletion still require solutions and (3) action is needed to deal with these. Until acid depositions (4), loss of aquatic life in northern lakes and streams will continue and forest growth may be affected. Water pollution will remain a growing problem as an increasing human population puts (5) stress on the environment. To reduce environmental degradation and for humanity to save its habitat, societies must recognise that resources are (6) Environmentalists believe that, as populations and their demands increase, the idea of continuous growth must (7) way to a more rational use of the environment, but that this can only be brought (8) by a dramatic change in the attitude of the human species.

- 1 1 25 You will hear part of a radio interview with a woman who helped save a type of rhino from extinction in the wild. Before you listen, read through the notes below.

Area visited:	1
Habitat of rhino:	2
Susan was there to	3
She found a	4
People she met:	5
People who gave her a lot of help:	6
Condition of rhino today:	7

Now, listen and complete the notes.

- 2 With a partner take it in turns to report verbally to each other what you heard in the interview. Try to put in as much detail as possible.

EXAMPLE: The man said that we were all aware of the need for biodiversity.

G → page 185

- When reporting, it's usual to go back one tense. This is called 'backshifting'.
'I saw her yesterday.' She said she had seen her the day before.
'I'll email her now.' He said he would email her then.
- In conversations, people sometimes don't backshift if what they are reporting happened not long ago.
'I saw Rachel this morning. She says she'll meet us at the cinema at seven, if that's OK?'
Backshift also doesn't need to happen if a fact is still true or the speaker believes it is true.
He said that elephants are still in danger today.
- There are some structures which are more difficult than others when reported because they do not always follow either of the patterns outlined above.

- 3 Report the following. Begin each sentence with She said ....

EXAMPLE: 'I shall see you at the meeting.'

She said she would see me at the meeting.

- 'My grandmother could walk to school without worrying about traffic.'
- 'You must come to tea sometime!'
- 'You must remember to recycle the rubbish.'
- 'You mustn't smoke in the restaurant.'
- 'Companies which pollute rivers must be fined.'
- 'If I were mayor, I'd make public transport free.'
- 'If the children picked up the rubbish regularly, I'd pay them.'

When reporting, it is often possible to use a verb or a verb plus an adverb which carries much of the meaning of the sentence.

'I hate you! You're scum!' she said to Tom and then she walked out of the door.

She screamed abuse at Tom before walking out of the door.

'Shh! You're not supposed to talk in here!' the librarian scolded us.

The librarian sternly told us off for talking.

- 4 Use the following verbs to convey the meaning of the sentences below. Take care with these verbs – some are followed by a gerund, others by an infinitive and others by a clause. Sometimes a preposition is required.

claim	decide	declare	insist object	refuse	sigh	suggest

- 'What about going to Crete this year for our holiday?' Tina said.
- 'I will always love you, Daphne!' Fred said.
- 'I've made up my mind – I'm going to take the job, but I'm not keen!' Colin said.
- 'It can't be helped. I know you didn't mean to drop it,' my mother said.
- 'Leave that window shut. We don't want to catch our death of cold,' the old man said.
- 'That's my book you've got in your school bag!' Rose said.
- 'I'll go out if I want to!' my brother said.
- 'I have no intention of going by train, thank you very much,' Lucy said.

- 5 Which of the following adverbs would fit with the reporting verbs on page 112? Insert one adverb in each of the sentences you wrote in 4.

passionately	confidently	categorically	peevishly
tentatively	reluctantly	resignedly	stubbornly

- 6 Write a sentence in direct speech which ends with these adverbs. (Use a dictionary to help you.)

- a '.....' the shopkeeper exclaimed angrily.
 b '.....' the police officer said sarcastically.
 c '.....' the teacher stated pedantically.
 d '.....' my grandfather muttered absent-mindedly.
 e '.....' Theresa said decisively.
 f '.....' the doctor murmured reassuringly.
 g '.....' my neighbour retorted rudely.
 h '.....' his boss said cautiously.

- 7 For questions 1–15, read the text below and think of the word which best fits each space. Use only one word in each space. There is an example at the beginning (0).

The first naturalists

There came a time, maybe 20,000 years ago, (0) WHEN man, instead of being merely a hunter, started to domesticate animals. The dog helped in his hunting activities and geese and ducks were kept and bred (1) a source of food, which was easier than (2) to go out and hunt them. Once humans had domesticated animals they (3) their attention to plants. Instead of being nomads, drifting from place to place following the game animals, they began to create farms and thus enter upon a more settled (4) of life. Villages and towns sprang (5) in places where previously there had been only a hamlet. Now animals and plants began to be kept (6) merely for food but also for interest's (7) or for their beauty.

The first writers on animal life were Aristotle, in 335 BC, and Pliny, in 75 AD, but for many hundreds of years after Pliny the subject of natural history, in (8) with many other areas of knowledge, (9) progressed at all. For the most part (10) zoos as existed were in the hands of the dilettante nobility and were no (11) than second-rate menageries, (12) any scientific purpose.

However, in the seventeenth century, naturalists began to realise that they needed a system for classifying living things (13) as more plants and animals were discovered, (14) was difficult to (15) track of them all.

- 8 In the recorded interview, it was pointed out that biodiversity was important for a healthy planet. In groups, talk about which of these methods you think is the best way to maintain biodiversity. Present your ideas to the rest of the class.

- Keeping animals in zoos.
- Having more national parks.
- Having egg and sperm banks of endangered species or collecting and preserving the DNA of endangered species.

- How much do you know about endangered species? The five animals above are examples of animals which are or have been endangered. With a partner, decide which animal you think is no longer endangered.
- All these words are useful when talking about the environment. Complete the table with the correct form of the word given.

Noun	Verb	Adjective
predator predation a	b	c
demography e	X	d
X	sustain	f
conifer i	X	g domestic
j	diversify	h
evolution n	l	k
	X	m inevitable

- Complete the sentences using a preposition from the box.

in to of into on

- The impact climate change has been greatest in the polar regions.
- The attitude of this community recycling has been very positive.
- Research solar power has shown it can be cost effective.
- Analysis the data will be done later in the year.
- What the outcome the scientific report will be, no one yet knows.
- The rise/increase the cost of petrol continues to trouble the government.
- An increase/rise 12% on heating bills will prove unsustainable.
- A change the law against polluting streams is long overdue.
- The impact polar bears of the ice cap melting will be huge.
- The objection the legislation was not based on scientific evidence.

- 4 In Paper 2, Part 1 you will need to write a well-structured essay summarising and evaluating the main points of two short texts and also giving your own opinions. Read the two texts below and decide what are the key points in both texts.

THE NEED TO SAVE THE TIGER

Tigers are an important part of the planet's rich diversity of life. As top predators in their food chain, they feed on a variety of prey species and help maintain the structure and functioning of the ecosystems they inhabit. Tigers, therefore, are considered a keystone species. If tigers disappear, there will be far-reaching and negative consequences for other parts of the ecosystem. Protecting tigers, therefore, helps many other species as well. For example, protecting tiger habitats in India and Bangladesh has helped to protect human habitats by reducing land erosion, stabilising ecosystems and encouraging wise land use. It has also led to an increase in global awareness of climate change and the problem of rising sea levels.

Text 2

Conservation: Is it worthwhile?

A majority of professional conservationists believe it is time to consider shifting efforts away from some of the world's most famous species, such as the polar bear, to concentrate on others which have a greater chance of survival. The scientists believe a serious loss of biological diversity is 'likely, very likely or virtually certain'. Some experts have rejected the idea on the grounds that it is impossible to make judgments about one species at the expense of another, given the complexity of the ecological interactions in the natural world. However, others are starting to question the value of spending millions of pounds on one celebrated species, such as the panda, or a big predator such as the tiger, where loss of habitat is almost inevitable.

- 5 With a partner, brainstorm ideas that you can use in the personal opinion part of the essay. There are some suggestions in the box below.

tigers/polar bears/useful symbols people attracted to cuddly animals/good publicity important to save unattractive animals too global warming/unlikely to decrease

Exam spot

In Paper 2 Part 1, as well as summarising the information from two texts, you are asked to give your own ideas. You gain higher marks for linking your points clearly and for showing that you can use a range of phrases to do so.

- 6 Now, write an essay summarising and evaluating the key points from both texts. Use your own words as far as possible, and include your own ideas in your answers. Use the sentence openers below and some of the phrases from the Useful language in your answer.

Paper 1 Part 5 Multiple-choice text

This part of the Reading and Use of English paper consists of a text from a range of sources with six four-option multiple-choice questions. The questions may test any of the following: detail, opinion, attitude, tone, purpose, main idea and implication. They may also test organisational features such as exemplification, comparison and reference.

Read the Exam advice and then do the task below.

You are going to read an extract from an article where two books are reviewed. For questions 1–6, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which you think fits best according to the text.

EXAM ADVICE

- Read through the text carefully.
- Read through the questions very carefully to make sure you really understand what the question is asking. Then find the answer in the text.
- Underline your answer in the text and then find the option, A, B, C or D, which best matches your answer.
- Read the text again to check you are right.
- Don't spend too much time worrying about a word you can't guess the meaning of.

Wild flowers

The journalist Simon Jenkins considers two books on wild flowers.

We all find solace in flowers. I go when times are hard to the wild dune church of Aberdaron in north Wales, where is pinned up (or was) a list of flowers that battle against the wind in the graveyard outside. Here is an uplifting array of thrift, vetch, yarrow and dozens more that toss and chatter, apparently immune to the salty south-westerlies. I hardly know these flowers, let alone could recognise them. Nature's wilderness is a foreign land, yet its tongue is strangely comforting. It is a realm of unrivalled colour and richness, defying time and order.

Hence when Sarah Raven's colossal new compendium, Wild Flowers, thudded into my lap, it was not to the pictures that I turned but to the index. The names are, in truth, the pictures, recording how country people down the ages have seen in nature a mirror of their lives. Here are adder's tongue, autumn lady's-tresses and betty-go-to-bed-at-noon. Flower names can be peculiar down to individual parish, corrupted by geographical accent and dialect. They can be vulgar, poignant and romantic. What pain yielded traveller's-foot? What anguish went into heartsease, love-in-a-mist and love-lies-bleeding? The poet and botanist Geoffrey Grigson traced more than 6,000 English common names for plants. There are 50 for dandelion alone and 90 for lords-and-ladies: starchwort, cuckoo pint and jack in the pulpit. Only the dreariest Linnaean sergeant-major could want to dragoon all these into arum maculatum.

Raven cries for us to save the homesteads of her beloved friends. Ninety-seven percent of England's lowland wilderness has gone in the last sixty years.

A quarter of all hedgerows have been destroyed since 1980 alone. Marshes are drained, woods conifered, meadows concreted. In South Africa an appeal is being launched this week to save the world capital of wild flowers, the Cape's unique Fynbos landscape, threatened with mass development spreading out from Cape Town. Fynbos is the most florally diverse ecology on earth. Yet wild flowers are wild. They are nature's flotsam, survivors, anarchists, freelancers, defying the horrors of modern life. I am drawn to a different botanical lifestyle, that of the weed-seekers. While Raven wanders her moors, urban geeks are scrambling over rubbish tips and railway sidings in search of vagabond exotics. Their champion is the naturalist Richard Mabey, whose Defence of Weeds must be the most eye-opening book I have read. De-industrialisation has led to a new, mostly urban British landscape which is fertile ground for the invaders.

Mabey tears back the city's familiar curtain to reveal a jungle of migrant species beneath. They bear with pride the seedsman's definition of weeds as 'plants in the wrong place'. They are tramps, rebels, defying the laws of municipal authority. Moving in among the empty factories and canal banks are giant hogweeds, buddleias and rosebay willowherbs. They come with sinister names such as winy Jack and stinker Bob. Exotics arrive from round the globe, spilling from cargos on to roads and railway lines. Mabey finds specimens from Africa dropped from the hems of Commonwealth conference visitors in Buckingham Palace gardens.

Wild flowers have evolved a class system of their own: effete respect is shown to Raven's country cousins while war is declared on Mabey's 'vegetable guerrillas that have overcome the dereliction of the industrial age'. Many wild flowers are protected so that roads and footpaths must be diverted round them. Biodiversity grants are awarded for endangered species such as corn buttercup and pheasant's eye.

Despite the damage they do to other flora, that splendid weed, the daffodil, is planted out 'wild' by councils to give 'a splash of spring colour' to verges. Yet even weeds must conform. When a friend of mine drove round the M40-M25 interchange after it was built, hurling poppy seeds from his car and delighting in the subsequent harvest of red, he found a year later that it had fallen foul of ministry herbicide. Mabey even admires those mighty bolsheviks who are determined to defy humankind's occupation of the earth. Buffel grass, tumbleweed, hogweed, Indian balsam, Japanese knotweed and kudzu grow a metre and more overnight. They can upheave motorways and tear down houses in days. Acts of parliament have been passed against Japweed, the cost of clearing it now exceeding £150m a year. 'Weeds are the tithe we get for breaking the earth,' cries Mabey. They are feral biology.

- 1 How does the writer react to the church at Aberdaron?
 - A He finds consolation in the barren appearance of its surroundings.
 - B He is embarrassed that he knows so few of the names of the flowers.
 - C He is cheered by the abundance of flowers in such a windswept place.
 - D He takes pleasure from the care that has been lavished on the flowers.
- 2 What point is the writer making about wild flower names in the second paragraph?
 - A They are more evocative than the correct botanical names.
 - B They can differ from one period of time to another.

Chloe:
New Pilates

A I'll be honest, I have never felt the natural high which scientists claim follows a bout of intense exercise. The empirical evidence of my own body tells me that the only thing exercise releases in my brain is loathing. So I scoff when the people at the gym tell me I'll be hooked on a new type of Pilates in two sessions. My first session is an hour's one-on-one with Daniel, my trainer; a good idea for any beginner. Although I, disappointingly, don't actually lose any weight over my six sessions – personally, I find it rather ups my appetite – I can attest to its toning abilities. The classes themselves – which take a maximum of six people – are entertaining, and as agreeable as enforced muscle fatigue can ever be. It definitely helps if you'd already got to grips with some basic Pilates techniques before you start, but, once you've got the hang of commands such as 'squeeze that imaginary grape under your armpit', it provides a great variety of exercise.

Mark:
Personal training

B A month of sessions with a personal trainer three times a week seems like the perfect springboard to a better future. My personal trainer, Tony, asks me what I hope to achieve. I mutter something about losing a few pounds and toning up a bit, but the truth is I want to get back into my tailor-made suits. It's the gap between my expectations and reality that is hardest to contend with. I know that no matter how healthy I become at the age of 36, I will still be less fit than I was as a lazy 18-year-old who did no exercise at all. But if I'm honest, I secretly believed I wouldn't actually be all that bad at this. The problem is weights. I've never bothered with them before. I take it slowly for the first few sessions but it's hard going and I eventually pull a muscle in my right arm. It's time for a few days off. I greet a four-day respite with enthusiasm, but actually find myself in the gym, running faster and longer than before and lifting weights well.

- 3 Which of the ways of exercising mentioned in the texts would appeal to you? Why / Why not?
- 4 The choice of verb you make will often change the tone of what you are saying. For example, in the first text, the writer talked about 'loathing' exercise. This is a more emphatic way of saying dislike.

For each sentence, replace the words in italics with one of the verbs in the box and make any other necessary changes. Decide what difference the new verb makes. Use a dictionary to help you.

yank	harangue	resolve	swear	seethe

- a She lectured me for over an hour about the need to keep fit.
- b Laura decided to give up chocolate at New Year.

- d 'Can I borrow £5 from you, do you think?'
- e My sister really wanted to eat coal when she was pregnant.
- f Jo was very angry when his mobile was stolen.
- g Don't pull the door open like that – you'll only break it.

Ben:
Sport Active

C I go along to my nearest fitness centre and decide to try out the DVD of Sport Active, which has more than 70 different exercises on it. The programme can measure and display your heart rate, thanks to a monitor that straps to your forearm which sends information to the console. I start with tennis and get an enormous kick out of hitting balls into an onscreen net. I quickly move on to mountain biking, or, as I now call it, 'total physical punishment'. However, even though I am an old hand at cycling, by halfway round, I have clearly lost all ability to show off. On screen, my heart rate has rocketed up to 178. 'You're definitely getting a good cardio workout here,' encourages Robert, the fitness centre trainer. Could these games damage people by suggesting the wrong positions? Robert is dismissive: 'It's unlikely you're going to hurt yourself.' I decide to carry on and after a few weeks begin to see the benefits.

Tasha:
Wild fitness

D Wild Fitness is more than a form of exercise, Matt, my trainer, told me that it was a whole philosophy of life: to transform yourself by learning to move and eat in the way of our hunter-gatherer ancestors and to become strong, fast and agile. It all sounded a bit bizarre but I was more than happy to give it a go. The first session began at 8am on a Monday morning in Regent's Park, London, with some introductory exercises. The hardest session came the next week when Matt told us we would sprint around the 400-metre running track four times, with a short rest in-between – no excuses allowed. I did my best and then discovered that the so-called rest was going to involve squat thrusts; 20 of them. Matt didn't stop there. It was thanks to him that I did far more than I would ever have done exercising alone and I looked thinner and was far more toned as a result, especially around my thighs and stomach.

Writing folder 7

Part 2 Letter

In Part 2 of Paper 2, you may be asked to write a letter. This will be formal in register and the target reader may be the editor of a newspaper or magazine. You are not expected to include postal addresses but the letter should be paragraphed and have a suitable opening and close.

1 Read this exam task.

You have read a critical article in the local newspaper about the sports provision at your college. As a member of the sports committee, you discover that substantial national funding is available for the upgrading and enlargement of facilities. You decide to write a letter to the editor of the newspaper, responding to the article and requesting suitable publicity for a grant application.

2 Look at the draft answer on page 125. An R or T to the right of a line means that the register or tone needs improving. Underline the parts to be edited and then suggest improvements to make the letter consistently formal in register and less aggressive in tone. An example is given.

3 The following expressions are useful when arguing for or against a course of action. Decide what each refers to, writing

- A do something positive without delay
- B deal with at some stage but low priority
- C stop working on.

- a give priority to A
- b take the initiative in
- c place less emphasis on
- d set in motion immediately
- e put on hold (temporarily)
- f allocate minimal resources to
- g back the establishment of
- h freeze the development of
- i sanction major investment in
- j pull out of

4 Now, using some of the expressions above, answer the task below in 280–320 words.

An international student magazine has invited its readers to submit a letter arguing for immediate action on a key environmental issue. You decide to write a letter, briefly describing an environmental problem that concerns you, explaining why you are arguing for immediate action and recommending appropriate measures to rectify the situation.

Write your letter.

Dear Sir or Madam

Following your ^{rather negative} damning article on this college's current sports provision, we demand that you think again and print an apology - most of what you have written is garbage! We also want your help regarding a funding application - please see below.

Your article claims that a lack of adequate facilities is hurting our basketball and swimming teams, yet both have represented the college at the highest levels of competition and done brilliantly over the years. Indeed, your newspaper featured the recent success of the basketball team in an article published in May. How ironic is that?

Still, you're not wrong to say that the main sports hall requires some work, especially the dodgy flooring and the pathetic lighting - you can't even see the ball sometimes! In connection with this, we've just spotted that funding is available nationally, which our college would be in a good position to apply for. We reckon that getting a grant would enable us to undertake the repairs alluded to above, and also allow for an extension of the present changing facilities, whereby separate 'wet' and 'dry' areas could be introduced, to service the pool and hall respectively.

What do you think? Would you be willing to run an article in support of our grant application? It would be in the public interest, given that members of the public have daily access to our sports facilities.

Hear from you soon, ok?

EXAM ADVICE

2 03 Now listen to the recording and, for questions 1–5, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which fits best according to what you hear.

- 1 Read this article on internships. Do you think interns receive fair treatment in the workplace? Why? / Why not?

LANDMARK VICTORY SEES JOURNALISM INTERN AWARDED OVER £2,000 IN PAY AND DAMAGES

In the current period of austerity, employers are becoming more and more attracted to the creation of internships, as a cheap way of extending their workforce – and young people are usually more than willing to work unpaid or for minimal wages, in order to gain valuable experience and get them closer to the first rung on the career ladder. Unpaid interns are in a vulnerable position, often afraid to take action against their employers for fear that they might be shown the door.

However, a journalism intern has scored a victory for interns everywhere by successfully suing her publishing company employer, for whom she interned unpaid for several weeks. Keri Hudson, 21, proved in an employment tribunal that she had the right to be paid for two months' work she carried out last year, despite having no written contract with her employer.

The tribunal heard that Keri had received no pay from her employer, despite working 10am to 6pm every day, being responsible for a team of writers – and even for hiring new interns. Apparently, “the company had told her she was not eligible for any pay because they considered her an intern”.

But the judge was having none of it. After hearing a description of the work she had carried out, he ruled that she was a “worker” by law – and was therefore entitled to the National Minimum Wage and holiday pay.

Style extra

In English, some words to do with people refer only to men or women, either because they are gender-specific, e.g. maid, or because usage is just like that. (Corpus evidence suggests that taciturn is only used of men.)

Group the nouns and adjectives below under these three headings. Decide also whether they are formal, informal or unmarked in terms of register, and whether there are any further restrictions on their use, e.g. offensive, old-fashioned.

used of men used of women used of both nouns			adjectives

actor	bag	bimbo	bullish
bounder	chairman	charmer	chivalrous
chav	duchess	freshman	doting
geek	lout	mate	effeminate
neanderthal	nerd	partner	laddish
patriarch	sibling	spouse	lanky
thug	vamp	whizz kid	prickly wimpy

Now combine each adjective with a noun of your choice and produce an example sentence to illustrate usage and meaning. Use a dictionary if necessary.

EXAMPLE: The bullish whizz kid had a reputation for making wild predictions about the futures market.

1 Which of these leadership qualities are the three most important for each of the following people? What are the other characteristics of a successful leader?

- a a company chairman
- b a college principal
- c a military commander

decisiveness	intuition
vision	assertiveness
flexibility	fairness
good humour	openness
determination	humility
specialist knowledge	stamina

2 Read the texts on two contrasting leadership styles, ignoring the highlighting for the moment. Which style appears to be the more effective? Do you agree with what is said?

Text 1

The 'Affiliative Style' revolves around people – its proponents value individuals and their emotions more than tasks and goals. The affiliative leader strives to keep employees happy and to create harmony among them, building strong emotional bonds and then reaping the benefits of such an approach, commanding fierce loyalty.

There is a markedly positive effect on communication, and flexibility also rises because the affiliative leader gives people the freedom to do their job in the way they think is most effective. However, this style can allow poor performance to go uncorrected and, since affiliative leaders rarely offer advice, employees can be left in a quandary.

Text 2

The 'Pacesetter Style' focuses on tasks and goals, with the leader setting extremely high performance standards and exemplifying them personally. Underachievers are swiftly identified and more demanded of them – if they don't rise to the occasion, they are replaced. Employees tend to feel overwhelmed by the pacesetter's demands for excellence, and morale drops. Guidelines for working may be clear in the leader's head, but are often not stated clearly. People feel that the pacesetter doesn't trust them to take any initiative. Flexibility and responsibility evaporate; commitment dwindles because people have no sense of how their personal efforts fit into the big picture.

- 3 It is important to use your own words in the Part 1 essay. Find words or phrases in the texts that have a similar meaning to a–h.

Text 1

- a advocates
- b ties
- c profiting from
- d predicament

Text 2

- e deliver the goods
- f motivation and confidence
- g resourcefulness
- h the operation as a whole

- 4 Text 2 contains three verbs describing downward movement or decline. What are they? Suggest three more verbs you could use in their place. Then find the verb that describes an upward trend in Text 1 and think of two others to replace it.

- 5 Tick the linkers that can be used to contrast information.

Be that as it may	Even so	Nonetheless
By the same token	In contrast	On the other hand
Conversely	In other words	Similarly
Despite this	Likewise	Whereas

- 6 Read the paragraph below about effective leadership and complete linking phrases 1–5 with one or two words. Which phrases are used to contrast information?

To be an effective leader in business, it is essential to have vision, with a steady grasp of the bigger picture. 1 What is , senior management figures need to show determination and a firm belief in their ideas for change. 2 That , assertiveness can sometimes go too far and this will only serve to alienate staff. To avoid this 3 the case, any major shift in direction must be fully explained to all members of the company. 4 In much way, organisational change needs to be handled carefully, within an adequate timeframe that allows for some downward consultation. 5 that, strong leadership requires decisiveness and hasty U-turns should be avoided at all costs.

- 7 Choose linkers from 5 and 6 to contrast the colour-coded information in the two texts, using your own words as far as possible – you can include the words and phrases from 3 and 4. Write one or two sentences for each point.

EXAMPLE: Within the Affiliative Style of leadership, individuals count, and appropriate concern is shown for their welfare, whereas under the Pacesetting Style, the primary focus is on the achievement of objectives according to ambitious targets.

- 8 Now evaluate these four ideas in turn, making notes of your own views. Combine this evaluation with your sentences from 7.
- 9 Write an essay in 240–280 words, summarising, contrasting and evaluating the ideas in the two texts. Start by introducing the two management styles in general terms (see the example in 7 for ideas, but use your own words). Then include your ideas from 8, suitably paragraphed. Finish off the essay with an appropriate conclusion.

Paper 3 Part 2 Sentence completion

In Part 2 of the Listening paper, you will hear a monologue or prompted monologue (that is someone introducing the main speaker). You will need to listen for specific information and stated opinion in order to complete spaces in sentences. There are nine spaces altogether. You will hear the piece twice and you must write your answer – in the form of a word or short phrase – on an answer sheet. You must spell the word or short phrase correctly.

- 1 Read through questions 1–9 and try to predict what the answers might be.
- 2 2.04 You will hear a man called John Farrant talking about his job working for a car hire company. For question 1, listen to the first part of the recording as far as '... a plastic wallet'. Then, with a partner, decide which is the word you heard which fits in the space.

John Farrant says that people doing his job have to act in a (1) way.

- 3 Underline the adjectives in the recording script below which describe the way people act. Why is there only one possible answer?

John Farrant: Good morning. My name is John Farrant and I have the job of reservations manager at a large, international car hire company, based in London. Dealing with the public can be a tricky business. You get to meet all types from the arrogant and rude to the downright abusive. We aren't expected to reply in kind, of course, or come over all ingratiating and deferential either. It's down to us to be respectful and remember the customer is always right. Sometimes it can be difficult, especially with a real joker. For example, when taking a booking, we have to ask certain questions, one of which is: 'Do you possess a clean driving licence?' To which one man snapped at me, 'Of course I do. I keep it in a plastic wallet!'

EXAM ADVICE

- You have 45 seconds to read through the questions before you hear the piece. Make good use of this time.
- Make sure you read ahead or else you will get lost and begin to panic. Always know the topic of the next question.
- You should write what you hear; there is no need to change the words into a different form. Make sure the word or short phrase you write fits the sense of the sentence to be completed.
- Look out for clues – e.g. an before the space; the use of a particular preposition, in, on, etc; the use of many rather than much to show a countable noun is needed.
- You shouldn't write a whole sentence.

4 2.05 Now, listen to the rest of the recording and then do the task below.

For questions 2–9, complete the sentences with a word or short phrase.

John was asked by an older customer to talk him through a

Reading

1 What are the challenges and constraints of writing a short story, as opposed to a novel? Think about characters, chronology, detail and so on.

2 Read the text below, taken from An old-fashioned story, a short story by American writer Laurie Colwin, that was published in 1981. What is the significance of the title, in your opinion?

Nelson Rodker was two years Elizabeth's senior, and was a model child in every way. Elizabeth, on the other hand, began her life as a rebellious, spunky and passionate child, but was extraordinarily pretty, and such children are never called difficult; they are called original. It was their parents' ardent hope that their children might be friends and, when they grew up, like each other well enough to marry.

In order to ensure this, the children were brought together. If Elizabeth looked about to misbehave, her mother placed her hand on Elizabeth's forearm and, with a little squeeze Elizabeth learned to dread, would say in tones of determined sweetness: 'Darling, don't you want to see Nelson's chemistry set?' Elizabeth did not want to see it – or his stamp collection. As she grew older, she did not want to dance with Nelson or go to his school reception. But she did these things. That warm pressure on her forearm was as effective as a slap, although her compliance was not gained only by squeezes and horrified looks. Elizabeth had begun to have a secret life: she hated Nelson and the Rodkers with secret fury. While she was too young to wonder if this loathing included her parents, she felt that if they forced Nelson upon her and chose the Rodkers for their dearest friends, they must in some way be against her. At the same time she realised that they were foolable. If she smiled at Nelson, they were happy and considered her behaviour impeccable. If rude, she spent weeks in the pain of constant lectures. Thus, she learned to turn a cheerful face while keeping the fires of her dislike properly banked. The fact of the matter was that an afternoon of Nelson's stamp collection was good for two afternoons hanging around the park with her real friends.

The beautiful daughters of the nervous well-to-do are tended like orchids, especially in New York. Elizabeth's friends were carefully picked over. The little O'Connor girl was common; that her father had won a Pulitzer prize was of no matter. The one friend her mother approved of was Holly Lukas, whose mother was an old friend. Elizabeth never brought her real friends home, since, with the exception of Holly, they were all wrong: the children of broken homes, of people with odd political or religious preferences or of blacklisted movie producers. Elizabeth learned the hard way that these children would not be made comfortable in her house. This might have put a crimp in Elizabeth's social life except that none of her friends wanted to entertain at home. They knew early on that the best place to conduct a private life was in public.

Like most girls her age, Elizabeth became horse crazy. She did not want to share this passion with her parents, who felt riding once a week was quite enough, so she made a deal with the stable that, in exchange for a free lesson, she would clean out the stalls on Tuesdays. This, however, was not known by her mother, who had her expensively outfitted. These riding clothes Elizabeth carried in a rucksack along with her real riding clothes – an old pair of blue jeans and a ratty sweater. It was soon discovered that Elizabeth was coming home late one extra afternoon a week stinking of horse. She was made to remove her jodhpurs at the service entrance and, when these garments were found to be relatively horseless, a search was made and the offending jeans rooted out. Elizabeth was mute. One word about manure, and her riding days were over. But manure was not on her mother's mind and, in fact, when she learned that Elizabeth spent one day a week in the company of a pitchfork, she was much relieved.

At college, Elizabeth had her first taste of freedom. While similarly restrained girls went wild, she reveled in being left alone and staying up late reading anything she liked. Her parents were not against reading, but Elizabeth's reading habits contributed to eyestrain and bad posture and, besides, all that reading made one lopsided. At home on holidays she was correctness itself. In the middle of her first love affair, she was grown up enough to restrain herself from calling her beloved in Vermont, lest her parents find him on the telephone bill. Elizabeth's parents set great store on adult behavior. Had they known what sort of adult Elizabeth had become, great would have been their dismay.

After graduation, her decision to live in New York was not easily come by, but she loved New York and wanted to enjoy it finally on her own terms. Using as collateral a diamond-and-sapphire bracelet left to her by her grandmother, she borrowed enough money to rent an apartment in Greenwich Village. Through a friend of the O'Connor girl's father, she found a job at a publishing company and went to work. Her parents were puzzled by this. The daughters of their friends were announcing their engagements in the Times. Elizabeth further puzzled them by refusing to take a cent of their money, although her mother knew the truth: what you dole out to the young binds them to you. To have Elizabeth owing nothing was disconcerting to say the least.

It's hard to issue (0) PREDICTIONS on exactly what impact Jonathan Galassi's superb translation and (1) of the Italian writer Eugenio Montale's Collected Poems: 1920–1954 will have on English-speaking (2) and, more importantly, on poets. Translations of poetry are often (3) today, not because, as the poet Robert Frost once claimed, 'Poetry is what gets lost in translation,' but because, (4) the act of turning writing in another language into writing in 'ours' is part of a larger (5) project. As a result, instead of attempting to feel and think beyond the boundaries of any single nation-state, much academic work (6) itself within a restrictively pure nationalist framework of literatures – 'American', 'English', 'French'. (7) as I already was with Montale's poetry, my own reaction has been an unexpected one. After consuming his three main books in a two-day gulp, I felt stunned by the concentrated power of his language. Without my particularly wanting them to, the poetry's cadences have infiltrated my memory, and its (8) images have invaded my dreams. As remote as Montale's poetry may be from one's own world view in the twenty-first century, it nevertheless has to be accommodated.

How important is the printed book in the twenty-first century?

- technological alternatives
- practical advantages
- educational issues

Decide which prompt on the card above each of these statements refers to. Give your own opinion on each one.

- Although there are several benefits to downloading ebooks and being able to access them anywhere on a pocket-sized device, I would never contemplate giving away the hard copies of my favourite novels.
- Powerful though the arguments for the electronic book may be, I don't believe it will ever replace the physical object completely.
- Much as I enjoy sitting down with a good paperback, I'm excited by the availability of downloadable books, not least being able to track down obscure works that have been out of print for fifty years.
- While there is an initial cost implication in terms of classroom hardware, it cannot be denied that the electronic medium of instruction is far more engaging for students than battered old textbooks.
- Even though I love holding a real book in my hands, its manufacture is a waste of natural resources, which can no longer be justified given the existence of cheap electronic alternatives.

7 Plan your own talk on the importance of the book in the twenty-first century, working through the checklist below.

Planning stage

- Which ideas will you concentrate on, or will you touch on all three prompts?
- What other ideas do you intend to bring in?
- How will you introduce the talk?
- How will you move from one idea to another?

Now record your talk. Stop after exactly two minutes and then analyse your talk, working through the checklist below.

Rehearsal analysis

- Did you cover all your ideas in the time?
 - Were the ideas logically organised?
 - In which part of the recording were you strongest? Why?
 - Was there any repetition of ideas to cut out?
 - Where could you have elaborated further?
 - Were there any long pauses? How can you minimise these?
 - Did you lack any specialist vocabulary? If so, how did you get round this?
 - How large a variety of structures did you use? For example, did you remember to use concessive clauses?

 - To what extent do you think the printed book will remain in widespread use?
 - If you had to read all text in an electronic form, would there be any drawbacks?
- 9 After 30 seconds, Student C should ask Student A one of the questions below.
- What do you think?
 - Do you agree?
 - How about you?

Part 2 Set text question: Review

Question 5 of Paper 2 Part 2 offers two options, a) and b) – one on each of the specified set texts. You may be asked to write a review, article, report, essay or formal letter. It is essential that you refer clearly to the text you have studied, including appropriate detail and possibly brief quotations. Make sure you answer the question: don't just narrate the plot. Every set text question will demand more than narration – for example, description, comparison or evaluation.

1 Read this exam task.

A magazine is producing a special collection of readers' reviews entitled 'The importance of distinct characters in novels'. You decide to send in a review of the set text you have read, in which you give relevant information on the main characters and evaluate how successfully the author differentiates these characters.

Write your review in 280–320 words.

2 Now read the answer opposite and choose a suitable sentence opener (A–G) to fit the spaces (1–6). There is one extra opener that does not belong anywhere.

- A However, it has to be said that
- B The author achieves this
- C Last but not least
- D Similarly
- E Much as Kneale has tried
- F Throughout the novel
- G At the same time, the book

'English Passengers' is a meticulously-researched historical novel chronicling an expedition to Tasmania in 1857, where the theories of Darwinian evolution are juxtaposed with the religious beliefs of the day, often in a comical way. 1 deals sensitively with the bigger historical picture of the tragic destruction of the Aboriginal islanders' way of life at the hands of white settlers, ex-convicts and religious 'do-gooders', who all in their separate ways contributed to the Aborigines' demise.

2, events are narrated by a cast of some twenty characters, whose 'first-hand' accounts span fifty years and combine to give the reader a truly epic novel, that is rich in detail and variety.

3 largely through the varied use of language itself – from the formality of documents written by the island's governor, where official policy is revealed, to the base and harsh language used by convict Jack Harp. Shifty Captain Kewley incorporates words from his native Manx dialect into his vivid snapshots of the outward voyage, while the Reverend Geoffrey Wilson, the expedition's leader, has a predictably stiff style of narrating.

The pieces contributed by the expedition's doctor are written in scientific note-form, with judicious use of underlining to indicate his sinister concerns. This stylistic device, though hard to process at times, is most effective and develops as we learn more about Dr Potter's nefarious deeds. In the denouement, the notes become more truncated and you can almost see him underlining in rage.

4, when Wilson goes mad, the author is able to use subtle changes in language to reflect his sorry state.

Perhaps the most difficult character to portray credibly through language is Peevay, the Aboriginal hero. 5 even here the author successfully adopts a distinct style, incorporating paradoxical expressions learned from settlers, such as 'tidings of joy'. 6, the third expedition member Timothy Renshaw matures in the course of the novel and becomes the voice of reason and common sense. Helped by Peevay when abandoned in the wilderness, his awakening to the beauty of the land and decision to stay on the island could be seen as a final reconciliation.

- 3 In the review, the book is referred to in different ways:

*The pieces contributed by
In the denouement,*

Read these sentence openers and decide on their function, writing

B for reference to the book
E for evaluation
C for comparison.

- a Up to this point, B
- b In much the same way,
- c Eventually,
- d By and large,
- e By the same token,
- f Subsequent to this,
- g To a certain extent,
- h Within a matter of hours,
- i On balance,
- j As it turns out,
- k For the most part,

Now write six sentences about the set text you are studying, choosing some of these openers.

EXAMPLE: Up to this point, very little is known about the main character.

- 4 The review refers to the book as a meticulously researched historical novel. Using adverb–adjective compounds like this will demonstrate your range of language. Make further adverb–adjective collocations from lists A and B and combine them with a suitable noun from list C. Only the adverbs should be used more than once.

EXAMPLE: annoyingly paradoxical individual annoyingly trivial interpretation

A	B	C
annoyingly	accurate	characterisation
exquisitely	compelling	chronicle
hauntingly	detailed	depiction ingeniously	enigmatic	hero
intensely	impressive	images
painstakingly	intricate	individual subtly	moving	interpretation
utterly	paradoxical	narrative
zealously	pompous	plot
	realistic	portrayal
	trivial	protagonist
	woven	storyline

EXAM ADVICE

- When answering a set text question, decide what language functions the question requires.
- List ideas for each paragraph.
- Decide on key information to include about the book.
- Note down brief quotations (only if they are relevant!).
- Vary your linking devices.
- Introduce the book in different ways.
- Use as wide a range of language as you can.

- 5 Using the advice above, write the review outlined in 1, referring to the set text you are studying. As a general rule, you should start a new paragraph for each character you introduce, but this will depend on the number of characters and level of detail you go into (see the review in 2 for guidance).

MAPPING BIODIVERSITY

Preserving (0) ORGANISMS in ORGAN museums is one way of retaining them for posterity, but most people agree that it would be nice to keep a few of them alive in the wild, too. At the moment, which species survive, which decline to threatened or even (1) status and which succumb to extinction is something of a lottery.

WORLDMAP is easy-to-use software that identifies geographical patterns in diversity, (2) and conservation priorities. DANGER

It can perform a range of specialist biological (3) for ANALYSE countless numbers of species, in order to provide biodiversity data for research purposes.

The program divides the surface area of the world into cells, usually arranged in a (4) RECTANGLE grid. WORLDMAP can also predict the (5) of a hitherto LIKE unobserved species being found in an area on the basis of its known distribution. Given the

(6) of most records, PATCH that is a useful trick. Furthermore, it can select (7) areas COMPLEMENT for preservation. These are not necessarily the cells with the highest individual biodiversity, but rather those which, together, (8) what is preserved MAXIMUM by picking places with the least overlapping species.

Writing

- 4 Improve the register and tone in this letter, in an attempt to persuade the managing director to take action.

To Andy, our esteemed MD

April 1

We, the hard-working nerds in the IT Department, want to propose some changes to the daily grind. As you know, we're really whizz at sorting out the company's computing problems and, let's face it, you couldn't survive without us. To guarantee a rapid response, we've always been willing to burn the midnight oil when the need arises. But no more, mate! If you want us to slave away like this, you're gonna have to provide us with better conditions, which we demand herewith.

Firstly, it is totally out of order to expect any of us to struggle to work on the bus. Lots of us hit our desks by 6.00 in the morning and most of the guys are still hanging around after the pubs have shut. We therefore insist that you cough up for five stretch limos to provide us with adequate door-to-door transport. The pay-off for you is obvious: increased productivity and goodwill.

And another thing, we are fed up with the rubbish served up in your so-called restaurant downstairs and want our own top-class chef and eatery, to be located on this floor. Give us two hours minimum for lunch, or else – we need a quick catnap before going back to our screens.

Thirdly, to be brutally honest, the money you pay round here is peanuts. How come you've just landed a fat bonus and we've got the big 'O'? Put your money where your mouth is! We're warning you, if you don't do something about it pronto, you won't see us for dust.

We look forward to hearing from you before midday. Get the message, you April fool?

In the recording, one speaker talks about infectious laughter, using the adjective metaphorically. The Cambridge English Corpus shows that many words to do with illness and health are used in this way.

bruised	bank balance contagious	criticism
fatal	dose of scepticism
feverish	egos
healthy	flaw in the argument
jaundiced	loser
sick	sense of humour

EXAMPLE: A flash of wild inspiration sparkled in her eyes.

But a word of warning – don't mix your metaphors! For example, it would sound odd to talk about a wave of sympathy igniting, because waves are not associated with fire.

- 7 In this extract from My family and other animals, the writer and naturalist Gerald Durrell recalls his idyllic childhood on the island of Corfu. For questions 1–8, read the text and decide which answer (A, B, C or D) best fits each gap.

Gradually the magic of the island settled over us as gently and clingingly as pollen. Those days were (1), each with a tranquility, a timelessness, about it, so that you (2) it would never end. But then the dark skin of night would (3), and there would be a fresh day waiting for us, glossy and colourful as a child's transfer, and with the same (4) of unreality. In the morning, when I woke, the bedroom shutters were luminous and barred with gold from the rising sun. The (5) morning air was full of the scent of charcoal from the kitchen fire, full of eager cock-crows, the distant (6) of dogs, and the unsteady, melancholy (7) of the goat-bells as the flocks were driven out to pasture. Think of a particular moment when you were utterly content. Where were you? What was happening around you? Describe the scene and explain how you felt, making use of metaphor.

Life of Epicurus

Epicurus, who was born on the verdant island of Samos, took early (0) TO philosophy. When only 14, he started travelling, to learn from the likes of the Platonist Pamphilus. Finding himself at (1) with much of this teaching, he decided to define his own philosophy of life. (2) immediately set this philosophy apart from other lines of thought was its emphasis on sensual pleasure. (3) , if any, philosophers had ever made admissions of this kind and Epicurus shocked many, not (4) when he set up a school (5) very aim was to promote happiness. Nevertheless, despite outrage and criticism, his teachings attracted support and spread (6) afield, from Syria to Gaul. Even today, Epicurus's name lives (7) in many languages in adjectival form – in English, 'Epicurean' signifies being dedicated to the pursuit of pleasure.

In fact, Epicurus drank water rather than wine, and usually restricted his diet to bread, vegetables and a palmful of olives. (8) were the tastes of the man who, after rational analysis, had reached the striking conclusion that the essential ingredients of happiness were the most inexpensive, however elusive they might be.

Exam spot

Remember the importance of reformulation – you will lose marks if you use words that occur in the texts. Think of synonyms you can use instead.

- 1 Use the pictures to help you define the term 'quality of life'.

What other factors are involved besides the ones illustrated? Discuss your ideas with a partner.

- 2 These factors are often used to measure quality of life. Which did your discussion in 1 include?

climate	gender equality
life expectancy	political freedom
stability in relationships	job security

- 3 Look at this exam task.

Write an essay summarising and evaluating the key points from both texts. Use your own words throughout as far as possible, and include your own ideas in your answer.

The phrase 'quality of life' embraces a number of different aspects, including physical health, emotional well-being, material wealth, community life, political stability, job satisfaction, and even geography and climate. Only the most fortunate of individuals will have access to 'perfect' conditions in all categories, and the various quality-of-life index calculations are averaged-out statistics. Yet it could be argued that a person's state of health determines their ability to work and benefit from community life, so is of prime importance. On the other hand, certain aspects are outside the individual's control – political freedom, for example, or the local climate.

- 4 Read the Exam spot and then read the sample answer on page 149. Underline any words and phrases that have been 'lifted' from the texts and rewrite them. Quoted terms do not need to be replaced. For example, it would be better to change the underlined parts of the first paragraph as follows.

In both cases, healthiness is seen as a crucial attribute, since it dictates whether someone can hold down a job, and therefore influences other 'quality of life' indicators.

Every year, much media attention is given to 'quality of life', usually following the publication of reports indicating the best cities to live in, the most temperate world climates, the country with the safest economy, and so on. Such analyses are interesting, but how much use can the individual make of them? In spite of advances in mobility, it is unrealistic for most of us to emigrate to this year's top country, nor should we have to take such a radical step. Everything starts at home – even those who struggle to make ends meet can enjoy a good quality of life providing they are healthy and supported by friends and family.

Both texts deal with the concept of 'quality of life' and consider which factors within this umbrella term are the most important in reality. In both cases, physical health is seen as being of prime importance, since it determines an individual's ability to work and will determine many of the other aspects too.

The first text gives an overview of the factors that go to make up a person's quality of life, mentioning health and well-being, social involvement, work, the political status quo and the local climate. Not only does it underline the fact that without good health, job satisfaction and an active and fulfilling role in the community are impossible, but also, it argues that some aspects cannot be changed – political background and freedom, for example.

The second text focuses on the annual phenomenon of quality-of-life indexes and, while viewing them as informative, questions the value of their having such prominence in the media. For most of us, it is academic which city in the world has the best quality of life, as we have no real opportunity to uproot our existence and rush to start a new life there. Nor is it necessary, argues the writer, as a good quality of life is still possible, provided that the individual is healthy and supported by friends and family.

While this may be true up to a point, it is nevertheless going to be far more difficult for people trapped in poverty to gain a quality of life equal to that of people at the other end of the wealth spectrum – especially in our materialist society, where possessions seem to count for so much and we are constantly encouraged to wish for more.

In the second text, the idiom make ends meet is used. What does it mean?

Paper 3 Part 1 Multiple-choice questions

In Part 1 of the Listening paper you will hear three short extracts. There will be a mixture of monologues – only one person speaking – or a conversation between two, or possibly more, speakers. There are two questions for each extract with a choice of three answers for each question. You will hear each extract twice.

Here are some examples of the types of questions.

What does the speaker say about ...?

What do the speakers agree on?

What is the speaker comparing X to?

- No one shall be held in slavery or servitude.
 - No one shall be subjected to arbitrary arrest, detention or exile.
 - Everyone has the right to a nationality.
 - Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion.

Reading

- 2 You are going to read an extract from a book on human rights. Seven paragraphs have been removed from the extract. Choose from the paragraphs A–H the one which fits each gap (1–7). There is one extra paragraph which you do not need to use.

Values for a godless age

When the Berlin Wall came tumbling down in 1989 so did the plaster cast which had kept the idea of human rights in limbo. It was now free to evolve in response to the changing conditions of the late twentieth century.

1

Of course, in one sense, the quest for universal human rights standards after the Second World War was an early attempt to communicate across national boundaries, albeit a rather faltering endeavour, with its claims to universality challenged both in terms of authorship and content. More recently, a loosening of the reins of the human rights dialogue has ushered in wider debate.

2

Perhaps the best known of these is Amnesty International, established in 1961. Before Amnesty, there were very few organizations like it, yet now there are thousands operating all over the world. Whether campaigning for the protection of the environment or third-world debt relief, any such organization is engaged in the debate about fundamental human rights. And it is no longer just a soft sideshow.

The fact that strangers from different countries can communicate with each other through the worldwide web is having a similar effect in dealing a blow to misinformation. During one recent major human rights trial over sixty websites sprang up to cover the proceedings, while sales of the government-controlled newspaper in that country plummeted.

4

The effect of increased responsibility at this highest level has been to continually extend the consideration of who is legally liable, directly or indirectly, under international human rights law. In part, this is an acknowledgement that even individuals need to be held responsible for flagrant breaches of others' rights, whether these are preventing protesters from peacefully demonstrating or abusing the rights of children.

It has been noted that paradoxically, in such circumstances, it may be in the interests of human rights organizations to seek to reinforce the legitimacy and authority of the state, within a regulated global framework.

6

Part of the new trend in human rights thinking is therefore to include powerful private bodies within its remit. The International Commission of Jurists has recently explored ways in which international human rights standards could be directly applied to transnational corporations.

Whatever the way ahead, the lessons of the past must be learnt. Any world view or set of values which is presented as self-evident is ultimately doomed to failure. The case for human rights always needs to be made and remade. In a world where globalization too often seems like a modernized version of old-fashioned cultural imperialism, it is important to query the claim that human rights are universally accepted.

A The problem is that the growth of globalization makes the protection of nation states a pointless goal in certain circumstances. Transnational corporations with multiple subsidiaries operating in a number of countries simultaneously wield significant economic and political power and it is often extremely difficult for the state – both home and host governments – to exercise effective legal control over them.

B If the proliferation of pressure groups has raised the profile of the human rights debate, satellite television has reinforced much of the content of their campaigns. The fact that from our armchairs we can all see live what is happening to others around the world has had an enormous impact on the way the struggle for human rights is viewed. It would not be remotely believable to plead ignorance nowadays, for 24-hour news coverage from the world's hotspots reaches us all.

C This is, after all, a uniquely propitious time, as the values and language of human rights are becoming familiar to more and more people, who judge the merits or otherwise of political and economic decisions increasingly in human rights terms. Arguments seem fresh and appealing in many quarters where once they sounded weak and stale.

D On a global scale, it is not strong states that are the problem here but weak ones, as they fail to protect their citizens from private power – whether it is paramilitaries committing murder and torture or transnational corporations spreading contamination and pollution.

E One of the most significant of these is what has come to be called 'globalization', the collapsing of national boundaries in economic, political and cultural life. From the expanding role of the world's financial markets and the spread of transnational corporations to the revolution in communications and information technology, more and more areas of people's lives are affected by regional, international or transnational developments, whether they are aware of this or not.

F Not only must states not infringe rights, and enforce those rights which fall within their direct sphere (like providing a criminal justice system or holding fair elections), but they also have 'positive obligations' to uphold rights enshrined in human rights treaties, even when it is private parties which have violated them.

G The results of its investigations were published in 1999 in a unique pamphlet on Globalization, Human Rights and the Rule of Law. The issue to be faced is whether to treat these and other corporations as 'large para-state entities to be held accountable under the same sort of regime as states', or whether to look for different approaches to accountability 'that are promulgated by consumer groups and the corporations themselves'.

H No longer the preserve of representatives of nation states meeting under the auspices of the United Nations, a developing conversation is taking place on a global scale and involving a growing cast of people – for an increasing range of pressure groups now frame their aspirations in human rights terms.

3 How do you view the future for universal human rights? What role does the Internet play in social and political change? Will increasing globalisation lead to more or less freedom for the individual? Why?

- 1 Should animals enjoy the same rights as humans? Outline your views with reference to the animal welfare campaigns shown.

- 2 2 11 Listen to this extract about the use of animals in medical research. Is the speaker for or against animal testing? Why?

The speaker used various modal verbs to express different functions. Here are two examples.

Animals must be used in order to trial new drugs and treatments safely. (obligation)

It could in fact be damaging to human health. (speculation)

Before you do the exercises in the Corpus spot, turn to the Grammar folder to review the different functions modal verbs have.

Corpus spot

As the Cambridge Learner Corpus shows, modal verbs often cause problems, even at Proficiency level. Correct any errors in these sentences. One sentence is correct.

- Animals could be kept in zoos, but they must to have a comfortable place to live in.
- I've written a few notes about things that may be changed if the campaign is to succeed.
- His dog ought to be registered because then they might have been able to trace it.
- Much more should have been done to bring this epidemic under control.
- You mustn't have been here last summer – the café only opened a month ago.
- I needn't have bought these batteries if I had known you were going to buy some too.
- If only we should live our lives again, knowing what we know now!
- It can't be possible for you to phone back later?

- 3 Choose the correct modal form in each of these sentences.

- I needn't have / shouldn't have gone out last night as I had so much work to do.
- You might have / needed to have rung me to say you'd missed the bus – I was worried sick.
- It must have / could have been a full three hours later when the ship finally docked.

- Need / Ought I* to have let someone know about this earlier?
- Would / Might* you mind if I didn't give you a lift all the way home tonight?

4 For questions 1–6, complete the second sentence so that it has a similar meaning to the first sentence, using the word given. Do not change the word given. You must use between three and eight words, including the word given.

5 For questions 1–8, read the text below. Use the word given in capitals at the end of some of the lines to form a word that fits in the space in the same line. There is an example at the beginning (0).

Mankind's intuition of freedom, and our (0) IDENTIFICATION of freedom with knowledge, sets us apart from animals. The animal's grasp of freedom is (1) in comparison, being only the freedom to respond to external stimuli. The nearest creature to us on the (2) tree of life, the chimpanzee, cannot retain an image for a sufficient length of time to be able to reflect on it. So animal life is largely a matter of conditioned reflexes, performed in an (3) present; in short, animals are little more than machines with consciousness.

While the animal is carried along (4) on the stream of time, mankind has certain capacities that (5) us to resist the current or look into the future. Our (6) in developing language was the first step towards this 'conquest of time'. Language 'fixes' experiences, and places the experience of the past on an equal (7) with that of the present.

Imagination was bound to follow, as a (8) progression from 'labelling' a past experience to conjuring up its mental image.

Listening and Speaking

- 1 Identify what aspect of freedom – or the lack of it – is shown in the three pictures A–C, using some of these words and phrases.

civil disobedience	political regime
free speech	sweatshop
child labour

- 2 2.12 Now listen to the first stage of a Speaking Test, Part 2, based on these pictures. Do both candidates do what is required? Could the discussion have been more balanced? If so, how?
- 3 2.13 Listen to the second stage of the same task. What two additional aspects of 'freedom' do the candidates decide to include?

Pronunciation

- 4 2 14 Read the Exam spot and then listen to utterances a–f taken from the recording. Notice how the speakers stress certain words and vary their intonation.
- Anyway, what about picture A?
 - I didn't say they succeeded.
 - Looking at picture B, I suppose it's illustrating the rights of the individual, isn't it?
 - Yes, that's an important point – you don't have that freedom of choice everywhere.
 - Speaking purely for myself, I'd want to include something on education.
 - I'm not sure that's strictly about freedom, though.

Exam spot

Pronunciation, including stress and intonation, is assessed in Paper 4. It is important that what you say has some rhythm and flows as connected speech. Stress important content words and remember to vary your intonation according to whether you are asking a question, agreeing with something or contrasting information. Don't worry if you have problems pronouncing individual sounds – what is important is the overall effect, which must be easy to understand.

- 5 Now read this task, which is based on the same set of photos.

Imagine that all these photographs have been entered for an award: Most powerful image in journalism. Talk about the message that each picture conveys and decide which one should win the award. You have three minutes for this.

Think quickly of one or two points to make about each picture. When you are both ready to start, note the time. Speak for the full three minutes. Remember to give your partner a chance to speak!

- 6 For questions 1–8, read the text below and decide which answer (A, B, C or D) best fits each gap.

In the 21st century, the revolution may not be televised – but recent experience suggests it is likely to be tweeted, blogged, texted and organised on Facebook. After (1) more than 3 million tweets, gigabytes of YouTube content and thousands of blogs, a new study finds that social media played a (2) role in shaping political debates during the Arab Spring. Conversations about revolution often (3) major events, and social media carried inspiring stories of protest across international borders (4)

During the week before former Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak's resignation, for example, the total (5) of tweets from Egypt – and around the world – about political change in that country ballooned from 2,300 a day to 230,000 a day. Videos (6) protest and political commentary went viral – the top 23 videos received nearly 5.5 million (7) And the amount of content (8) online by opposition groups increased dramatically.

Writing folder 9

Part 2 Article

Writing folder 5 also dealt with the article task, considering aspects of style and ways of holding the reader's attention. This Writing folder focuses on sophistication of language and writing an article for a specific audience.

- 1 Read the exam task below. What is the intended readership of the article? What style would you expect as a result?

An academic journal has invited its readers to contribute to a series of articles on new technology and personal freedom. You decide to submit an article describing the effects that new technology, such as the Internet, social networking sites and mobile phones, has had on people's lives and explaining whether these changes have led to more or less freedom. You should also evaluate how positive the changes are for society.

Write your article.

- 2 Read this sample answer and decide whether the content is relevant to the task. Then underline any inconsistencies in style that you notice.

- 3 Tick the boxes that apply to the sample answer.

- Complex ideas are communicated convincingly.
- Style is consistently appropriate for the readership.
- Text is a well-organised, coherent whole.
- Errors only occur in less common words and may be slips.
- Grammatical forms lack control and complexity.
- Choice of vocabulary generally shows sophistication and precision.

HANG ON TO YOUR RIGHTS!

The prevalence of mobile communication devices together with the widespread use of social networking and the Internet have altered our way of life fundamentally. This article weighs up their impact on individual freedom and assesses whether the outcomes are really that great.

I think the big plus with Smartphones and tablets is that friends and family are always contactable. Parents need not be concerned for the welfare of their teenage children, as they can keep track of them. This may be beneficial to the older generation, but I think it imposes unfair limits on the liberty of their kids.

The downside of mobile devices from the working adult's standpoint is that they can be reached 24/7 and the distinction between work and home life becomes blurred. This again places constraints upon the individual, who has fewer opportunities to shut out the stress of everyday life.

At the same time, the Internet gives us the ability to control our lives, right? From booking a holiday to selecting a new home, everything can be done direct, without any middleman restricting what is on offer. So that is an example of greater freedom – the freedom of choice.

As for social networking, the chance to share ideas and communicate more effectively means that nobody need feel alone in the modern world. Furthermore, the role played by social media in disseminating information under less tolerant political regimes shows how networking sites can be used to help us out, contributing to profound social change.

However, I think the big snag of all this is an inevitable erosion of privacy. People seem happy to display their innermost thoughts and aspirations in a way that would have been unheard of in the previous century, but at what cost? It is impossible to turn the clock back, yet it must be acknowledged that through social media, restrictions have been placed on individual freedom, which society at large may come to regret.

- 4 Rewrite the parts of the answer you underlined in 2, using these words and phrases to help you. Correct any slips and decide on a more suitable title.

unequivocally advantageous (paragraph 1)

the main asset of; offspring (paragraph 2)

one drawback; at all times (paragraph 3)

it is undeniable that (paragraph 4)

- 5 A good way of demonstrating sophistication in vocabulary selection is to draw on your knowledge of word families. Find words in the article that are related to the verbs in a–h. These occur in text order.

- | | | |
|-----------|-------------|------------|
| a prevail | d constrain | g aspire |
| b contact | e tolerate | h restrict |
| c benefit | f erode | |

- 6 Look at the word family for the verb tolerate, which is taken from the English Vocabulary Profile. All of these words are within the level of C2 learners. Check your understanding of the five words in italics by using them to complete sentences a–e.

Word family

Nouns: intolerance, tolerance

Verbs: tolerate

Adjectives: intolerable, intolerant, tolerant

- a Canada has a very and inclusive attitude to incomers and a great track record of entrepreneurship.
- b The issue of same-sex marriage still has the power to polarise views and what is remarkable in this battle is how deeply each side feels itself a victim of the other's
- c Sometimes, if a situation is, walking away is the only way to cool things down.
- d The researchers give some possible reasons for the decline in juvenile violence, such as the growth of community policing, less cultural of violence, and more aggressive policies to regulate firearms.
- e The nation is somewhat unfairly portrayed as an inward-looking society that is manifestly of minorities.

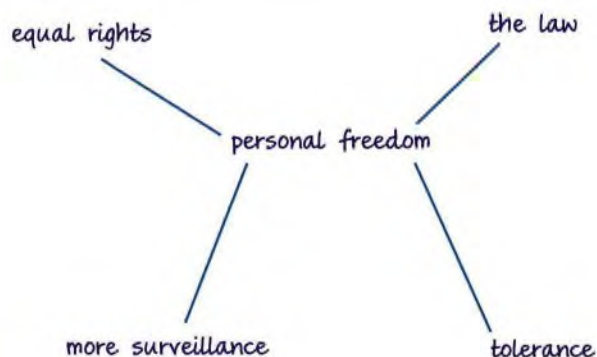

EXAM ADVICE

- Read the question carefully to decide on an appropriate style.
- Think of a title that will be suitable for the readership.
- Plan the content of your article before you start writing.
- Decide whether it is appropriate to use headings for the various sections of the article.
- Include an introduction that outlines the article's coverage and ties in with the title.
- Order the paragraphs logically, following your plan.
- Make sure your ideas are expressed effectively and are well linked.
- Summarise your main idea in a conclusion.
- Use a range of structures in complex sentences.
- Demonstrate your knowledge of vocabulary to the full.
- Check your answer for any slips you have made in spelling or grammar.

- 7 Read the exam task and use the mind map to help you plan your ideas. Then write an article of 280–320 words, following the Exam advice and using vocabulary from this Writing folder and Unit 18.

An international research body is publishing a book entitled Freedom in modern society and has asked for contributions from around the world. You decide to submit an article for the book. You should describe the current situation in your country with regard to education, employment and family life and explain what aspects of freedom an individual has the right to expect. You should also evaluate whether there are too many limits on personal freedom nowadays.

Write your article.

Speaking

- 1 Why do you think the topic of ghosts, vampires and werewolves has been popular in fiction for many years, and more recently, in films? What evidence is there for the existence of the paranormal?

Style extra

In the listening passage, what was described as 'rattling' and 'murmuring'?

Words like these are called onomatopoeic words because they seem to sound like their meaning.

Below are verbs connected with types of sound. Using an English-English dictionary, decide what you would use these words to describe.

EXAMPLE: howl
the noise made by an unhappy dog, also by the wind

creak	rumble	slap	hiss	drip tinkle	crunch	slam	growl	peal
quelch	slash	click	screech	slither

Poltergeists have always been with us; there are (1)..... cases as far back as AD 530, and from all parts of the world. The German word poltergeist means (2)..... 'noisy spirit', and that describes the behaviour of this phenomenon very well. Among its manifestations are banging noises, things being thrown around, furniture being (3)..... and other destructive behaviour; but it also (4)..... itself in other, quieter ways, such as hiding things or writing messages. It is seen as a mischievous spirit because that is what the behaviour suggests; a disembodied spirit that enjoys upsetting people.

It is clear that many poltergeist activities do not follow the rules (5)..... by science; things move without being touched, objects move slowly through the air, solid objects pass through other solid objects, (6)..... fires occur, water appears from nowhere, and so on. It is possible that these paranormal events are (7)..... by powers and energies we have not yet recognised, but which everyone has the (8)..... to use.

Corpus spot

Correct the mistakes in the word order of adverbs that exam candidates have made, making any other changes necessary. Two sentences are correct.

- He slumped into the nearby velvet armchair, holding tightly his briefcase in his hands.
- Statistically looked at, however, the centre has attracted more people, spending more money than before.
- Being rather into contemporary than old-fashioned art I don't find the good old Tate Britain a place I would visit too often.
- A lot of people actually do travel abroad, but apparently only a few return home with more knowledge and better understanding.
- I have always wanted to remember perfectly every movie I see and every book I read.
- It goes without saying that seldom you will see a very shy person wearing a bright orange shirt.
- Kerry is a very green county: you hardly can find a road where two cars pass each other.
- Most of us are aware of the fact that not always is this solution economically viable.
- Before he appeared on the music scene, there hardly existed 'Pop' music.
- Oddly enough, she never seems to be really angry and perhaps that is the reason why I like confiding in her.

- It is possible to change most adjectives into an adverb with the addition of -ly, for example happy to happily.
- Some adjectives do not have an adverb, for example friendly, lonely, silly. In this case you need to use an adverb phrase, for example He looked at her in a friendly way.
- Some adverbs have the same form as the adjective, for example hard. He works hard. He's a hard worker.
- Some adverbs may have two forms – one which looks like an adjective and the other with -ly. There is usually a difference in meaning.

3 Use one of the words from the box to complete each sentence below.

hard	hardly	short	shortly	right	rightly high	highly	late	lately	wrong	wrongly

- a I ever see her nowadays – she's so busy.
- b Sally thought very indeed of the gypsy's fortune-telling powers.
- c The interviewer claimed that the house was haunted.
- d Sue thought long and about whether to take part in the experiment.

- f You've done this calculation
- g They were just saying that they hadn't seen you
- h The car turned round and went back the way it came.
- i The article stopped of accusing anyone of a hoax.

4 For questions 1–8, read the text below and think of the word which best fits each space. Use only one word in each space. There is an example at the beginning (0).

Carrying out a ghost hunt

(0) SHOULD a visit to a house convince you that there may be something worth investigating, follow these simple steps. There is much you can do in the way of preliminary research before you (1) any serious attempt to (2) out any practical investigation. Documents devoted to the area can often be (3) interest and a visit to the local museum will be invaluable. Maps can also provide information on the whereabouts of underground water. Water running underground through streams, old sewers and so (4) beneath or close to the foundations of a house may subject it to spasmodic thrusts. (5) the water builds up, such jolts cause objects in the house to move, increasing the general strain on the house, (6) produce noises that sound eerie at night. Such possibilities have to be (7) into account, depending on the reported paranormal activity. In (8) event, knowledge of previous buildings in the area may produce a clue to any apparitions seen.

1 Read these facts about two former American presidents, Abraham Lincoln and John F. Kennedy.

Abraham Lincoln was elected to Congress in 1846. John F. Kennedy was elected to Congress in 1946.

Abraham Lincoln was elected President in 1860. John F. Kennedy was elected President in 1960.

Both were particularly concerned with civil rights.

Both Presidents were shot on a Friday. Both were shot in the head with one bullet.

Both were rumoured to be killed in a conspiracy. Neither was confirmed to be a conspiracy.

Both successors were named Johnson. Andrew Johnson, who succeeded Lincoln, was born in 1808. Lyndon Johnson, who succeeded Kennedy, was born in 1908.

Some sceptics say that you could take any two famous people and find a number of similar-type coincidences between them. The only problem with that theory is that there really haven't been any listings of such comparisons. And certainly none has been as extensive as the Lincoln–Kennedy similarities.

Do you think this is pure coincidence or do you think there is more to it than that?

2 Can you explain the following expressions? Have you any experience of the situations they would be used for?

- Talk of the devil!
- To have a guardian angel
- It's a small world
- To have second sight
- Female intuition
- A feeling of déjà vu
- A sixth sense

3 Read the texts below.

Text 1

Coincidence or evidence of the paranormal?

An investigation of coincidences should be primarily designed to get at the truth, or at least make progress towards it. The moment that chance ceases to be a convincing explanation, uneasiness sets in. Most people are embarrassed to speak out in case they are thought of as eccentrics. Their experiences may be commonplace enough – the occasional precognitive dream; a feeling of déjà vu or thinking of somebody a moment before they ring up – but they still feel the need for anonymity.

But a surprising number of people who clearly regard themselves as free from irrational fears are ready to admit that even mundane coincidences can be disturbing.

Text 2

a reasonable EXPLANATION?

It is in the imagery of sight, hearing, touch, smell or temperature that paranormal cognition often emerges into the conscious mind. There may be no more than a sudden impression that something has happened, even no more than an unaccountable impulse to act; to cancel a seat on a flight which will shortly crash, for example. Even now, of course, such happenings are often dismissed as superstitious nonsense. In the same way, the report that the inhabitants of the island of St Kilda only got colds when a ship came in was said to be contrary to all common sense by critics in the seventeenth century, only to be accepted as a statement of fact when the germ theory of disease was established in the nineteenth.

- 4 Look at the following words from the texts. What part of speech is each word in the text? What other forms of the word are possible?

Text 1	Text 2
Speak out	conscious
anonymity	impression
disturbing	dismissed

- 5 Use an appropriate form of the words in capitals to complete the sentences.

- a He is a very critic of what he calls 'paranormal geeks'. SPEAK
- b The newspaper article was of the possibility of ESP (Extra-Sensory Perception). DISMISSED
- c Her one wish after her experience was to remain ANONYMITY
- d There was a rumour of some sort of a at the cemetery last night. DISTURBING
- e Children of primary school age are very and tend to believe what they are told. IMPRESSION
- f You may not be aware of things happening but your probably registers events. CONSCIOUS

- 6 Look at the essay below, which is an attempt at the following exam task.

Write an essay summarising and evaluating the key points from both texts. Use your own words throughout as far as possible, and include your own ideas in your answers. Write your answer in 240–280 words.

The essay is a poor attempt. With a partner, decide what you think needs to be improved and then rewrite it so that it fully answers the question.

The two texts contrast the pros and cons of coincidences, whether they are evidence of the paranormal or can be explained on a purely rational level. Text 1 argues that people are often embarrassed by unusual happenings and prefer not to tell anyone about it. If they think of a person just before that person rings up then they don't tell them because they are worried that that person will think they are stupid.

My feeling is that it is wrong to feel embarrassed as, in fact, there is always a rational explanation for nearly everything that happens.

Text 2 says that we shouldn't believe in superstition because most things can be explained by science. Everyone thought that the people on St Kilda got colds for some paranormal reason when a ship came in. In fact, it was easily explained once the theory of germs was discovered.

I totally agree with this as I think that science is showing us new things all the time. During my short life many things have been discovered which we would never have dreamt of in the past – e.g. the mobile phone, etc.

Exam folder 10

Paper 4 Speaking

The standard format for the Speaking paper is for there to be two candidates and two examiners. It is also possible to have three candidates and two examiners.

One examiner, called the interlocutor, asks the questions while the other only listens. Both examiners will assess you. They are looking for accuracy of grammar, a wide and appropriate range of vocabulary and the ability to express opinions and abstract ideas. Your pronunciation should be clear and you should be able to interact well with your partner(s).

There are three parts to the test and it lasts for 16 minutes (24 minutes for groups of three). Part 1 is two minutes (three minutes for groups of three), Part 2 is four minutes (six minutes for groups of three) and Part 3 lasts for 10 minutes (15 minutes for groups of three).

In Part 1 you will be encouraged by the interlocutor to talk about yourself and give some personal opinions. In Part 2 you and the other candidate have a decision-making task consisting of visuals (up to seven pictures or photos) and/or a written prompt. In Part 3 you will have the chance to speak for about two minutes on a topic given to you and then have a discussion with the other candidate, developing the topic you have been given.

EXAM ADVICE

- Don't worry if you think you do badly in one part of the test. You are assessed on the complete test.
- If the other candidate is better than you, or not as good, you shouldn't worry. You are assessed on what you do, not in relation to the other candidate.
- It's important to show sensitivity to the other candidate during the test. This means allowing the other candidate to speak and responding to what they say.
- Remember this is your opportunity to show you can speak English – use it!
- Do ask if you are unclear about what you have to do.

Do this complete Speaking test with a partner, taking it in turns to ask and answer the following typical questions. (Remember that in the exam the interlocutor will be asking the questions.)

Part 1

Ask each other these questions.

Questions for Student A to ask Student B

- Are you working or studying at the moment?
- How do you spend your leisure time?
- What would be your ideal job?

Questions for Student B to ask Student A

- How do you travel to work/college every day?
- What are your plans for the future?
- How important are computers in your life at the moment?

Part 2

Here are some photos of useful inventions. Look at pictures A and E and talk together about whether you could live without them. You have about one minute to do this.

Now look at all the pictures. Imagine that an exhibition is going to take place on the theme of 'Essential Inventions'. All these objects are to be included. Talk together about the importance of the inventions shown in the pictures. Then suggest two other inventions you would like to see included in the exhibition.

You have about three minutes to do this.

Part 3

In this part of the test you have to speak by yourself for about two minutes. You should listen carefully while your partner is speaking because you will need to comment afterwards.

Both students should look at Student A's card. There is a question written on it and Student A has to give his/her opinion on it. There are some ideas on the card for you to use if you like.

Student A

How has life changed in the past hundred years?

- work
- education
- family life

Student B is now asked a question. Do you think marriage is as important today as in the past?

Student A is then asked what they think about this topic.

Now the roles are reversed and Student B has the chance to speak, using the prompts below if he or she wishes.

Student B

What changes do you foresee in the future?

- accommodation
- fashion
- transport

Student A is now asked a question. Does the future worry you at all?

Student B is now asked to comment on this topic.

To finish the test both candidates have to talk about changes to our lives in general. This section lasts about four minutes.

Reading

2 Read this extract from a book by the American writer Bill Bryson, who is renowned for his dry sense of humour. It was written after the writer and his family moved back to the USA after living in the UK. His wife is English.

What impression does he give you of life in the USA?

How to have fun at home

My wife thinks nearly everything about American life is wonderful. She loves having her groceries bagged for her. She adores free iced water and book-matches. She thinks home-delivered pizza is a central hallmark of civilization.

5 I haven't the heart to tell her that waitresses in the States urge everyone to have a nice day.

Personally, while I am fond of America and grateful for its many conveniences, I am not quite so slavishly uncritical. Take the matter of having your groceries bagged
10 for you. I appreciate the gesture, but when you come down to it what does it actually achieve except give you an opportunity to stand there and watch your groceries being bagged? It's not as if it buys you some quality time. I don't want to get heavy here, but given the choice between free 15 iced water at restaurants and, let us say, a national health service, I have to say my instinct is to go with the latter.

However, there are certain things that are so wonderful in American life that I can hardly stand it myself. Chief among these, without any doubt, is the garbage disposal.
20 A garbage disposal is everything a labour-saving device should be and so seldom is – noisy, fun, extremely hazardous, and so dazzlingly good at what it does that you cannot imagine how you ever managed without one. If 25 you had asked me eighteen months ago what the prospects were that shortly my chief hobby would be placing assorted objects down a hole in the kitchen sink, I believe I would have laughed in your face, but in fact it is so.

I have never had a garbage disposal before, so I have been learning its tolerances through a process of trial and 30 error. Chopsticks give perhaps the liveliest response (this is not recommended, of course, but there comes a time with every piece of machinery when you just have to see what it can do), but cantaloupe rinds make the richest, throatiest sound and result in less 'down time'. Coffee grounds
35 in quantity are the most likely to provide a satisfying

'Vesuvius effect', though for obvious reasons it is best not to attempt this difficult feat until your wife has gone out for the day, and to have a mop and stepladder standing by. The most exciting event with a garbage disposal, of course, is when it jams and you have to reach in and unclog 40 it, knowing that at any moment it might spring to life and abruptly convert your arm from a useful grasping tool into a dibber. Don't try to tell me about living life on the edge.

Now basements I know because I grew up with one. Every American basement is the same. They all have a 45 funny smell – a combination of old magazines, camping gear that should have been aired and wasn't, and something to do with a guinea pig named Mr Fluffy that escaped down a central heating grate six months ago and has not been seen since (and presumably would now be better called 50 Mr Bones).

Occasionally, especially in starter homes, you will find that some young gung-ho dad has converted the basement into a playroom for the children, but this is always a 55 mistake, as no child will play in a basement. This is because no matter how loving your parents, no matter how much you would like to trust them, there is always the thought that they will quietly lock the door at the top of the stairs and move to Florida. No, basements are simply and 60 inescapably scary; that's why they always feature in spooky movies, usually with a shadow of Joan Crawford carrying an axe thrown on the far wall. That may be why even dads don't go down there very often.

I could go on and on cataloguing other small, unsung glories of American household life – refrigerators that 65 dispense iced water and make their own ice-cubes, walk-in closets, electrical sockets in bathrooms, but I won't. I'm out of space and anyway Mrs B has just gone out to do some shopping and it has occurred to me that I have not yet seen what the disposal can do with a juice carton. I'll get back to 70 you on this one.

- 3 For questions 1–6, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which you think fits best according to the text.
- In the first paragraph, what does Bill Bryson imply about his wife?
 - She has very poor taste in food.
 - She is only happy so long as she can get things for nothing.
 - She is only pretending to be uncritical of the American way of life.
 - She is relatively unsophisticated.
 - What is Bill's reaction to having his groceries bagged and getting iced water?
 - He feels that the country hasn't quite got its priorities right.
 - He would prefer to pay less and pack his own groceries.
 - He thinks that service could be even better in American shops and restaurants.
 - He is of the opinion that Americans waste a lot of time unnecessarily.
 - Why does Bill enjoy using the garbage disposal?
 - It fulfils his notion of what a household gadget should be.
 - He has plenty of free time to experiment now he has moved back to the States.
 - He is finding it much easier to use than he thought he would.
 - It devours anything you put in it without any fuss.
 - What impression do you get of Bill when he talks about the garbage disposal unit?
 - He is irritated that the unit is so potentially dangerous.
 - He is keen to help around the house and will happily mend the disposal unit for his wife.
 - He likes to experiment with it without fear of interruption.
 - He thinks the garbage disposal unit should take a wider variety of garbage.
 - According to Bill, basements often
 - make people feel intimidated.

 - are a source of argument in families.
 - In describing his current home in the USA, Bill seems
 - quite critical.
 - fairly effusive.
 - sometimes nostalgic.
 - quietly indignant.

- 4 Find these expressions in the text. In your own words, explain what the writer means by each of them. (Sometimes you will need to explain the writer's choice of words.)
- I don't want to get heavy here (lines 13–14)
 - a satisfying 'Vesuvius effect' (lines 35–36)
 - and presumably would now be better called Mr Bones (lines 50–51)
 - some young gung-ho dad (line 53)
 - other small, unsung glories of American household life (lines 64–65)
 - I'll get back to you on this one (lines 70–71)
- 5 Did you find the extract funny? Why? / Why not?

A man's car had broken down, so he stopped the next car that came down the street.

'What's the problem?' asked the driver of the second car.

'I need some help,' said the driver of the first car. 'My car has broken down and I must get it looked at.'

'I can't help you,' said the driver of the second car. 'I'm not a mechanic. I'm a chiropodist.'

'In that case,' said the first driver, 'you can give me a tow.'

1 The joke above is a play on words. Can you explain it?

The first driver wants to have his car looked at. What does this imply?

Now match each phrasal verb above with its meaning below.

4 For questions 1–6, complete the second sentence so that it has a similar meaning to the first sentence, using the word given (as part of an expression with go). Do not change the word given. You must use between three and eight words, including the word given.

20.3 Listening and Speaking

- 1 How would you describe someone who is eccentric? Do you know anyone who could be called eccentric?

Eccentrics can be extreme in the exuberance with which they express their sense of humour. The way normal people regard the eccentric often depends upon what they find funny. Read this description of the antics of an eccentric.

'His mildest kind of practical joke is to push a dish of meringue trifle into the face of a lady guest at a smart dinner party in his home, having first asked her to smell it to see if it is 'off'. There is an oubliette under one of his dining room chairs, and any boring guest is seated over it and dropped into the wine cellar when he can stand no more. His coup de grâce was the miniature bomb that he planted inside his son's birthday cake, which the boy detonated by blowing on the candles, covering all his little friends with icing. The man's long-suffering wife had to clean them all up, then explain and apologise to their parents after the party.'

Would you find someone like this funny or irritating?

- 2 216 You will hear a discussion in which a student, Terry, is talking to his psychology lecturer, Dr Morris, about a new book on eccentricity.

 - They dismiss them as having mental problems.
 - They are irritated by their lack of conformity.
 - They regard them as being outside of society.
 - They have mixed feelings about them.
- Dr Morris and Terry agree that the defining trait of an eccentric is
 - an interest in other people's hobbies.

- 5 With a partner, look at the Part 3 Speaking tasks below. The prompts are to give you some ideas on the subject. You can use all, one or two or none of the ideas. Student A should look at Task A and then speak about it for about two minutes.

Task A

Is it better to conform or be different from your peers?

- fashion
- relationships
- leisure pursuits

Student A should now ask Student B the following question.

Generally speaking, do you feel pressurised to conform?

Student A should then give their opinion on this topic.

Student B now talks for about two minutes on the following topic.

Task B

How much are people's ideas affected by what they see on the TV?

- popular comedians
- documentaries
- politicians and other famous people

Student B should ask Student A the following question.

Which type of media influences you most?

Student B should then also try to answer this question.

Remember it is fine to hesitate in order to gather your thoughts – as long as you don't pause for too long! You can also repeat the question or use phrases such as:

Umm ... Let me see ... As I see it ...
Well ... I mean ...

You might also want to add something you'd forgotten to mention or return to a previous subject. For this you can use phrases like:

By the way, ... As I was saying, ...
Incidentally, ... I forgot to say/mention that ...

It's very likely you will need to generalise during your talk. Use phrases such as:

Broadly speaking ... In general ...
To a great extent ... On the whole ...

Laughter's geography

Wherever you go, you meet people who think that foreigners have either no sense of humour or at best, a (1) one. They are wrong. Humour is universal. But language is not, and neither are (2) of reference. Puns that (3) on Chinese pictograms and their homophones are hard to (4) in English. Punchlines that assume an intimate knowledge of Italian politics (5) few laughs outside Rome. The comedy that travels easily is often the most obvious: Mr Bean and Beavis and Butt-head. Domestic humour is subtler and, generally speaking, more revealing. Take this example from Africa:

A poor beggar is sitting by the side of the road. Suddenly the President's gleaming motorcade (6) past. (7) afterwards, a plump and ragged man runs sweating by, (8) an obviously stolen goat under his arm. A minute later, two policemen come rushing up in pursuit. 'Did you see a fat thief come this way?' they ask. 'Yes', replies the beggar, 'but you'll never catch him on foot.'

PERSONAL FREEDOM ● ○ ○

A recent report, entitled Surveillance: Citizens and the State, says Britain leads the world in the use of CCTV, with an estimated 4 million cameras. The report warns that “pervasive and routine” electronic surveillance, together (1) the collection and processing of personal information, is almost taken (2) granted nowadays.

Despite many surveillance practices and data collection processes (3) unknown to most people, the expansion in (4) use represents “one of the most significant changes in the life of the nation since the end of the second world war”. The report challenges the claim that CCTV cuts crime, and questions (5) local authorities should actually be allowed to use surveillance powers (6) all. In (7) view, privacy is an “essential prerequisite to the exercise of individual freedom” and the growing use of surveillance and data collection (8) to be regulated by executive and legislative restraint.

Writing

- 5 Read this Part 2 letter, written to a magazine on the subject of the supernatural. Add about 100 words to complete the missing narrative, using suitable words and phrases from Unit 19.

Dear Sir

I read the article entitled Inexplicable Events in your magazine this month with great interest. As you have asked for anecdotal evidence from your readers, I am writing to share my own story with you.

Before I tell you my own experience, I should stress that, up until last January, I had not been in the least superstitious. Indeed, I have always been very sceptical about the whole area of the supernatural. What I am about to relate has changed my views for good!

I was driving home from a meeting one winter's afternoon and took a country road across the hills to avoid the motorway traffic. As the car snaked its way up the narrow road, the sky darkened around me and it felt quite spooky. I turned up the radio and sang along, in an attempt to raise my flagging spirits. Round the next bend, however, was a sight I never wish to witness again ...

Can any of your readers explain my ordeal?

Yours faithfully

Jessica Langley

Unit 1

Perfect tenses

The perfect tenses are used in English in a number of ways.

Present perfect simple tense

- when talking about events or situations that started in the past and are still true
Amelia Kenton has lived in the same house all her life.
- when thinking about the present effects of something that happened in the past
I've lost my purse so I need some money for the bus.
- when talking about a recent event or situation
Jack has just phoned to wish you good luck.
- when referring to something that will happen at some time in the future
As soon as I have settled in, come and stay!

Present perfect continuous tense

This can sometimes be used instead of the present perfect simple tense. So, in the first example above, you could also say Amelia Kenton has been living in the same house all her life.

Main uses of the present perfect continuous tense are:

- to stress the period of time involved
I've been sitting at this computer all day!
- to refer to a situation that continues Membership numbers at this club have been falling year by year.
- to focus on the present effects of a recent event
You can tell it's been raining – the seats are still damp.
- to refer to something that has recently stopped
Have you been crying?

Note that stative verbs such as be, know, seem are not usually used in continuous tenses. For example, you would not say I've been knowing Jim since he was 15, but I've known Jim since he was 15.

Past perfect simple tense

This tense is generally used to clarify the timing of an event. It is used

- to refer to an event which took place before something else
Sailing towards the harbour, I remembered how it had looked on my first visit, ten years earlier.
Sometimes this involves using words like already or just.
I had just stepped into the bath when the phone rang.

Past perfect continuous tense

This tense is used

- to stress the continuity of an event at an earlier point in time
Their cat had been missing for over a week when a neighbour spotted it in the local park.
See also information regarding stative verbs.

Future perfect simple tense

This tense is used

- to refer to events which have not yet happened but will definitely do so at a given time in the future
By the end of September, I will have started that course in London.

Future perfect continuous tense

This tense is used

- to indicate duration at a specified time in the future
Come next Saturday, we'll have been going out together for a whole year!

Other modal verbs

To express regret about the past, should or ought to is combined with a perfect tense form.

We should never have bought Alex that drum kit!

I'm sorry, I ought to have remembered that you can't eat strawberries.

Unit 2

Aspects of the future

There are many ways of expressing the future in English depending on meaning. We can use:

Will + infinitive

- to predict what is going to happen based on past experience or opinion
You must go to India – you'll enjoy it.
- in more formal contexts for arrangements which have been made in some detail
The tour will begin at 9.30 and all visitors to the site will need to wear good walking shoes.
- for decisions which are made on the spur of the moment
I think I'll go to Paris next weekend.

Going to + infinitive

- to predict something that you have evidence for
Look at those clouds – I'm sure it's going to rain.
- to express intentions or decisions
I'm going to see the Museum of Modern Art when I get to New York.

Shall + infinitive

- to talk about the future instead of will with I and we, although it is used less nowadays than previously
I shall certainly travel first class next time I go abroad.
- for offers
Shall I carry your bags?

Present continuous

- to talk about activities or events which have already been arranged or are definite. The future continuous can also be used in this context. It is a little more formal.
I'm travelling on the Orient Express to Venice.
I'll be travelling on the Orient Express to Venice.
- to avoid going to + go we can use the present continuous form of go instead He's going climbing in the Alps next summer.
- for surprising or unexpected events
Paula is taking her mother on her honeymoon!

Present simple

- to talk about future events such as a timetable or programme
The train for Burnley leaves at 5.00 sharp every Friday evening.
- in temporal clauses after a time conjunction
When you arrive in Beijing, go directly to the hotel and I'll meet you in the lobby.

Future continuous

- to talk about something that is going on at a particular time or over a particular period in the future
The ship will be travelling at 20 knots as it cruises in the Caribbean.
- for something that has been arranged previously
Luisa will be visiting us again in the fall.
- when you want to appear very polite
Will you be needing anything to drink, Sir?

be + infinitive

- for official notices, newspaper reports, formal instructions and to give orders
Passengers are to leave by the rear door of the aircraft.

Future perfect

- to say when something will be completed by
I hope they will have finished the building work on the hotel before we go on holiday.

Future perfect continuous

- to emphasise how long something has been going on for by a particular point in the future
The airline will have been carrying passengers for fifty years at the end of March.

Note that this tense isn't used with stative verbs, e.g. see, believe, hear, know, become, etc.

Expressions

- There are various expressions in English which are used to express future meaning. These include:
to be about to
to be on the verge/point of
to be bound/certain/likely/unlikely to to be on the brink of

Unit 3

Conditional clauses

There are four main types of conditional clauses.

- Zero conditional – to express real situations
If/When + present tense | present tense
If I eat too much in the evening, I can't sleep at night.
- First conditional – to express real situations
If + present tense | future tense will
If you don't apologise, you'll regret it later.
- Second conditional – to express unreal situations
If + past tense | would/could/might
If I had some money, I would live somewhere warmer.
If I were you, I'd go now before it rains.
- Third conditional – to express unreal situations
If + past perfect | would/could/might + have + past participle
If she hadn't had the chocolate chip ice cream, she would have been in a worse mood.
- Mixed conditionals
If + past tense | might/could/should/would – for situations in the present which affect the past
If I weren't so untidy, I wouldn't have lost your keys.
If + past perfect | would/might/could + infinitive – for situations in the past which affect the present
If I had moved to California, I would be much richer today.

Inversion and conditionals

Sentences with inversion are more formal than those with 'if'.

- First conditional
This often expresses a tentative idea/request/offer, etc.
If you should require more assistance, please telephone.
Should you require more assistance, please telephone.

- Second conditional

If you went out in this weather, you'd be thoroughly soaked.

Were you to go out in this weather, you'd be thoroughly soaked.

- Third conditional

If I had known there was going to be a storm, I would have stayed indoors.

Had I known there was going to be a storm, I would have stayed indoors.

Other conditional clauses

- If + would | will: If you would take a seat, the doctor will see you shortly.

- If + will | will: I'll clean the house, if you'll mow the lawn.

- Other words and phrases can be used to introduce conditional clauses:

Providing, provided that, as/so long as are similar to if. They are all emphatic forms emphasising a condition.

Even if introduces an extreme condition.

Well, it's true, even if you refuse to believe me.

Unless can be replaced by if ... not or providing ... not but sometimes works better with except when.

I won't give a waiter a tip except when / unless I get excellent service.

Supposing should be used at the beginning of the sentence and is often not used as a linking word, but rather in the sentence setting up the condition.

Supposing/suppose it rains tomorrow. What will we do?

Given that is used when some fact is already known.

Given that this area is liable to flood, it would be unwise in the extreme to consider buying a house here.

But for and without are often used with third conditional sentences.

But for his help, I would never have managed to survive the ferry crossing.

Unit 4

Talking about the past

There are a number of ways of talking about the past in English.

- To talk about completed actions, the past simple is used. Novak Djokovic won his first Grand Slam singles title in 2008, at the age of 20.
- To talk about events which occurred regularly or habitually in the past, would or used to can also be used. It was our little ritual. I would nod, she would smile and he would look longingly.

I used to go swimming four or five times a week.

Every spring, Grant visited his elderly aunts in Maine.

- To talk about something which continued to happen before and after a given event, the past continuous is used. While Kevin was away visiting friends in Italy, his flat was burgled.

- To talk about a temporary situation in the past, the past continuous is used.

The two families were eating a meal together for the first time.

For information about the past perfect, see also the section on Perfect tenses on page 178.

Speculating about the past

- To express certainty or near-certainty about something in the past, the modal verb must is used with have and a past participle.

Those early settlers must have had access to fresh water.

You must have seen that Johnny Depp film at least five times!

- To express uncertainty about something in the past, the modal verbs could, may, might are used with have and a past participle.

I suppose it could have been my mistake, though I labelled everything clearly.

Experts are suggesting that the virus may have been carried long distances on the wind.

We might have met at that party in 2010?

- To express impossibility about something in the past, the modal verbs can't or couldn't are used with have and a past participle.

You can't have got to Leeds yet – it's a four-hour drive at least!

James couldn't have played cricket last week as he was away.

Using the passive in the past

- The passive is formed with the verb be and a past participle.

The telephone was invented by Alexander Graham Bell.

Repairs were being made to the bridge at first light this morning.

Fork-like implements have been used for over 2,000 years.

Both sides had been advised to seek fresh legal representation before the trial.

- There are only two passive infinitives that are commonly used in English, the present and the perfect forms.

This yoghurt needs to be eaten before the 25th.

Radical cuts to the budget seem to have been made by the Managing Director.

Note that passive infinitives are often used after the verbs appear, prove and seem, as in the second example above.

Unit 5

Nouns

Nouns can be countable or uncountable.

- Countable nouns can:
use a/an or the or some
be used in the plural take the following determiners: many, a large number of, several, a few, few, a lot of
- Uncountable nouns:
can use the or some or nothing are used only in a singular form can take the following determiners: much, a great deal of, a large amount of, little, a little, a lot of
- Common uncountable nouns include:
most substances – coal, china, flour, etc.
abstract nouns – happiness, admiration, freedom
all sports
most nouns ending in -ing – shopping, sightseeing, accommodation, information, traffic, advice, luggage, luck, weather, work, homework, furniture, evidence
- Some nouns can be countable and uncountable with a slight change of meaning.
She has grey hair. There are hairs on your jumper.
The bridge is built of stone. I've got a stone in my shoe.
- Some nouns can be countable and uncountable but completely change their meaning.
What's the capital of your country?
The company has very little capital to work with.
- The majority of uncountable nouns can be made singular or plural by adding a bit/piece of or bits/pieces of. However, there are sometimes specific words which should be used instead.
a lump of sugar
a shaft of sunlight
- Some nouns with a singular form can be treated as singular or plural, depending on whether the noun is seen as a unit or a collection of people.
The class is/are doing exams at present.
The committee is/are looking into the matter of vandalism.
- Some nouns look plural but take a singular verb.
The news is on at 8.00 pm.
Athletics is an important part of the Olympics.
- Some nouns like police look singular but take a plural verb.
The police are involved in trying to catch the thief.

Possessive forms

Possession can be signalled in English in three different ways – using an apostrophe, using of and using a noun as an adjective.

- For people and expressions concerning time and distance an apostrophe is generally used.
my uncle's sister
the boy's shoes
a year's salary
- For objects of is generally used.
the back of the room
the cover of the book
- A noun is often used as an adjective to indicate kind, use or place.
a table leg
a night flight
a shop window

Unit 6

Degrees of likelihood

- Can is used to express possibility without reference to past, present or future.
He can sound off-key at times when he sings.
- Could, may and might express present possibility with reference to the future, present or past.
It may/might/could be a good concert/ have been a good concert.
- May not and might not express possibility negatively.
Get your ticket for the concert today; there may/might not be many left.
He may/might not have bought the album you wanted.
- Deduction is expressed by must be / must have been, will be / will have been and should be / should have been.
You must be tired after your performance.
That'll be my guitar teacher; I heard him ring the door bell.
She should have been able to sing at the concert, her sore throat was much better.
- Impossibility is expressed by cannot/can't and could not.
It can't be a flute; it sounds more like a clarinet.
You couldn't have seen the new film – it hasn't been released yet.
- Could and might can be used to imply criticism or irritation. Intonation is very important in carrying meaning with these modals.
You might have told me you'd be coming late.
You could practise a bit more.
- Various expressions can be used to express likelihood:
it's a foregone conclusion the chances are there's every likelihood he's bound to there's a slim/faint chance it's doubtful

Unit 7

Participle clauses

Participle clauses give more information about someone or something. In many ways, their function in a sentence is similar to defining relative clauses.

The man dancing over there is my brother. (The man who is dancing over there is my brother.)

The painting sold at auction yesterday has already been shipped to New York. (The painting that was sold at auction yesterday has already been shipped to New York.)

- The position of the clause can affect meaning.
Standing at the top of the hill, I could just see the village.
(refers to the subject, 'I')
I could just see the village standing at the top of the hill.
(refers to the object, 'the village')
- Having + past participle refers to previous action.
Having reached the top of the hill, I could just see the village.
- Being + past participle is used to express a passive.
The report being published today will force local governments back to the drawing board.
- Past participle -ed clauses are used in a similar way.
The images provided by the Hubble Space Telescope have given astronomers fresh insights.

Unit 8

Inversion

In the normal word order of a sentence, a subject is followed by a verb.

Madrid offers its visitors an excellent choice of restaurants and some wonderful bars too.

However, sometimes this word order is changed, or inverted. This is usually done to give emphasis within the sentence. For example, the sentence above could be rewritten as:

Not only does Madrid offer its visitors an excellent choice of restaurants, but there are also some wonderful bars.

- The broad negative adverbs barely, hardly, rarely, scarcely, seldom can be used like this.
Barely were we into our costumes when it was time to go on stage.
Seldom does a day go by without someone ringing up to complain about the product.

- Never and nowhere are used in a similar way.
Never had I felt more relaxed than that first week on Corsica.
Nowhere could we find fresh vegetables, and some dairy products were in short supply too.
- Other negative words and expressions like this are little, no sooner, not.
Little did we realise what we were letting ourselves in for.
No sooner had Phoebe arrived than she helped herself to a drink without asking.
Not a single word of thanks did they hear from her.
- The fixed expression Had it not been for ... is used to talk about the reasons for changed results.
Had it not been for supportive friends and family, she could not have handled the constant intrusion of the media.
- Inversion also occurs at the end of sentences with neither, nor and so.
Tim didn't feel like facing the press and neither did Lucy.
Students haven't welcomed the new syllabus and nor have their teachers.
Karl will be pleased to finish work and so will I.
- Sometimes a time clause precedes inversion.
Not until two days later did we remember to call the school.
Only once before have I felt like this about a project.
- Sometimes an adjunct of place precedes inversion.
At the end of the path lay the meadows.
In the distance stood the foothills of the Himalayas.
- Inversion occurs with certain prepositional phrases.
On no account are you to leave this room!
Under no circumstances can a replacement card be issued.
In no way does that imply defeat.
At no time did you give me an accurate picture of what was going on.
- Inversion can occur with so + an adjective.
So loud was the music that we couldn't attempt to chat.
So consistent has John's performance been that he has earned the nickname 'Strongman'.
- Such is used in a similar way to emphasise the extent of something.
Such is the demand for tickets that they are selling at double their face value.

See also Unit 3 on page 179 for information about inversion in conditional clauses.

Unit 9

Gerunds and infinitives

Verb + object + to-infinitive

- Some verbs include an object before a to-infinitive: consider, warn, allow, believe, encourage, etc.
I encouraged her to wear her school uniform.
- Some verbs don't require an object: decide, refuse, hope, fail, agree, start, etc.
I decided to throw out all the clothes I hadn't worn for a year.
- Some verbs sometimes take an object and sometimes don't: hate, help, like, love, want, prefer, need.
I like to swim every morning.
I like you to swim so that you get some exercise.

Verb + (object) + bare infinitive

- Some verbs are followed by a bare infinitive after an object: hear, feel, make, notice, see, watch, let, etc.
I made him shave his beard off.
Her parents let her choose the shoes she wanted.

Verb + to-infinitive or -ing?

- Some verbs are followed by a to-infinitive: agree, aim, ask, demand, prepare, hope, manage, wish, etc.
I agreed to wear the uniform.
- Some verbs are followed by -ing: consider, avoid, envisage, miss, imagine, etc. and all phrasal verbs.
Liz couldn't imagine wearing an evening dress.
- Some verbs take either a to-infinitive or -ing with little or no change in meaning: begin, start, cease, continue.
They began singing/to sing early in the programme.
- Some verbs take a to-infinitive or -ing but change their meaning: go on, stop, try, remember, forget, regret, mean, come, hear, etc.
They came to accept her opinions. (gradual change)
He came running into the room. (way of moving)
He went on to talk about the dress code. (next topic)
He went on talking even when everyone started yawning. (continue)
I mean to wear jeans to the barbecue. (intend)
It means buying a new pair of shoes. (involves)

Try to stand up straight. (attempt)

If you can't get the car going, try ringing the garage. (experiment)

I hear the birds singing every morning. (repeated action)

Verb + -ing

- Some verbs must have an object before an -ing when they are in the active: catch, discover, observe, see, watch, etc.
I overheard them talking about the new manager.
but
They were overheard talking about the new manager.
- Some verbs don't have an object before -ing: admit, advise, consider, deny, face, finish, suggest, etc.
I suggested going to the party early.

Unit 10

Expressing wishes and preferences

Wish and if only

- To talk about the present a past tense is used.
I wish I could speak Spanish.
- To talk about the past a past perfect is used.
If only they had listened to their teacher.
- To express irritation or criticism of something happening now would is used.
I wish he would stop answering me in English when I want to practise French.

Note: would isn't used if the object and subject are the same.

- If only is perhaps slightly stronger than I wish.

Would rather / It's time, etc.

- are followed by a past tense to express a present idea with an object.
It's time the government invested in language training.
I'd rather you learned Spanish at school.
- are followed by an infinitive when making a general statement.
It's time to leave.
I'd rather learn Chinese than Russian.

Unit 11

Gradability

A gradable adjective can be combined with an adverb like reasonably or extremely to quantify that adjective. So, for example, you can be fairly happy or very happy. This cannot happen with an ungradable adjective, as the adjective itself already holds some notion of quantity or degree. These adjectives can be combined with adverbs like absolutely or totally to add emphasis.

We all feel slightly frustrated by the lack of communication on this project.

Charlotte was absolutely furious when she heard the decision.

adverbs	gradable adjectives
deeply	angry
extremely	cheerful
fairly	happy
immensely	hurt
rather	irritable
very	upset
adverbs	ungradable adjectives
absolutely	awful
completely	broken-hearted
entirely	impossible
totally	terrible
utterly	wonderful

- Pretty can be combined with both gradable and ungradable adjectives in informal English.
Tom finds it pretty quiet around here in the evenings, so he often shoots off to town on his motorbike.
It's pretty amazing that someone who was at death's door three months ago has just run the London marathon!
- Really can also be combined with both types of adjective, though with ungradable adjectives, the use can only be informal.
For a really comfortable night's sleep, choose Maxton's mattresses every time.
I've just had a really awful run-in with Duncan over his marketing plan.
- Quite can be combined with both gradable and ungradable adjectives, but there is a change of meaning.
I'm quite busy at work at the moment, but I've known it much worse. (= fairly)
You're quite impossible at times – sweet wrappers go in the bin not on the floor! (= completely)

Some adjectives can be both gradable and ungradable, and this is often accompanied by a change in meaning from literal to more figurative use.

Jake has been blind since an accident in childhood.
Our consumer society is fairly blind to the issue of poverty.

Unit 12

Passive structures

Formation

The passive is formed with the verb be and a past participle. For modals it is formed with the modal + be + past participle.

An unmanned submarine has been developed to automatically track down and follow whales and tuna, alarming many conservationists.

Miniature versions can now be produced at minimal cost.

This table shows the formation of all passive tenses. Those crossed through do not normally occur in English.

Simple present	It is made.
Present continuous	It is being made.
Present perfect	It has been made.
Present perfect continuous	It has been being made.
Simple past	It was made.
Past continuous	It was being made.
Past perfect	It had been made.
Past perfect continuous	It had been being made.
Future	It will be made.
Future continuous	It will be being made.
Future perfect	It will have been made.
Future perfect continuous	It will have been being made.

Use

The choice of active or passive voice often defines the focus of the sentence. Compare:

Massive waves destroyed the harbour wall. (Active voice, the focus is on the waves and what they did.)

The harbour wall was destroyed by massive waves. (Passive voice, the focus is on the harbour wall and what happened to it.)

In the second sentence, the waves are the agent. The agent is typically introduced with the preposition by.

The passive is used without an agent:

- when the action is more important than the person doing it
It's going to be quite some time before car body panels are cast from titanium.
- when the person or thing that performed the action is not known
In separate incidents across the city, shop windows were smashed and goods taken.
The oily stain had been hidden from view until now.

The passive voice can be used to produce an official or impersonal tone.

Visitors must be accompanied by a member of staff at all times.

Each solution was heated to boiling point prior to lab analysis.

Unit 13

Reported speech

- As reported speech is used to tell someone else of what happened, all pronouns change, almost all verb tenses, except second and third conditionals and past perfects, change and all words referring to a particular time or place change.
'I saw this film two weeks ago.'
→ She said she had seen that film two weeks before.
- Some changes are not quite so straightforward. Must changes to had to and mustn't becomes was not to for obligation. If must is used to talk about laws or general truths then it doesn't change.
'I must buy a new bicycle.'
→ She said she had to buy a new bicycle.
'You mustn't tell my mother.'
→ She said I was not to tell her mother.
'You must not go more than 40 kph.'
→ He said you mustn't go more than 40 kph.
- With the first conditional, the verb tenses in the If clause backshift in the usual way and will changes to would in the main clause.
'If you don't hurry up, you'll miss your flight.'
→ She said that if we didn't hurry up, we would miss our flight.
- As a general rule, the second conditional doesn't change.
'He would be pleased if you visited him.'
→ She said he would be pleased if she visited him.
- Often a verb or a verb and adverb are used which contain many of the elements of what is being reported.
'What about picking up the litter?' she said.
→ She suggested picking up the litter.
'Goodness! Look at that rubbish tip!' he said.
→ He exclaimed in horror when he saw the rubbish tip.
'I had absolutely nothing to do with it,' he said.
→ He categorically denied having anything to do with it.

Unit 14

Articles

- Plural, abstract and uncountable nouns do not need an article if they are used to talk about things in general. To limit these nouns a definite article is required.
Sport is good for you.
The sport played the most is football.

- Singular, concrete nouns require an article, except for some idioms. The definite article is precise and refers to something, while the indefinite article is vague and more general, or is used when something is mentioned for the first time.
The runner in first place came from Kenya.
Steve is going to be a runner in the New York marathon.
- No article is used with: certain countries; names of mountains; meals, unless they are formal ones; bed, school, hospital, prison if they are being used for their intended purpose.
I intend to visit Australia.
She's in prison for stealing.
Come down for breakfast!
- The definite article is used with: rivers, seas, oceans, chains of mountains, gulfs and bays; newspapers; before musical instruments; before a superlative adjective; when we know there is only one of something.
Tessa plays the violin.
I read The Times.
The Sierra Nevada is a beautiful mountain range.
The sky is very blue.
- The indefinite article is used when we mean 'one' of something unless we want to emphasise the amount.
I'd like a cup of coffee.
Just one cup, not two.

Unit 15

Purpose and reason clauses

- A purpose clause normally comes after a main clause.
I keep my mobile switched off when I'm working, so as not to be distracted.
- Purpose clauses are introduced by the following conjunctions:
for fear that (formal) lest (formal) in order to in order not to so as to so as not to so that
- A reason clause can come before or after the main clause.
As it was late, Jenny went straight to bed.
I'd shut the window in case it rains.
- Reason clauses are introduced by:
as because in case since

Unit 16

Concessive clauses

These are used to give contrasting information to that given in the rest of the sentence. A concessive clause can come before or after the main clause.

Although Moravia had more than thirty books published in his lifetime, his first novel is undoubtedly the best.

Shakespeare remains on the syllabus, even though many British teenagers find his plays inaccessible.

- Concessive clauses are introduced by the following conjunctions:
although despite even if even though in spite of much as though whereas while
- Much as and whereas are less commonly used and occur mainly in formal written English.
- With though and although, it is possible to omit the verb in the concessive clause.
Although (we were) exhausted, we stayed up to watch the end of the film.
- Despite and in spite of cannot be followed by a verb, but take a gerund or noun.
Despite running all the way to the station, we missed the train.
In spite of the weather, we had a good time.
- It is possible to add the fact that to these conjunctions and then include a verb.
Despite the fact that Jess had very little money, her trip to Lisbon was a great success.

Unit 17

Comparison

There are various ways of making comparisons in English.

- Using a comparative or superlative adjective
I'm happier now than I've ever been.
That is the most outrageous suggestion you've made today!
- Using the structure not as ... as
Holly is not as fast on the tennis court as she used to be.
Note that the variant not so ... as is less common nowadays.

- Other related expressions are nowhere near as ... as, not nearly as ... as and nothing like as ... as.
The new sports commentator is nowhere near as good as John Motson.
This album is not nearly as good as their last one.
- Including an adverb of degree gives added emphasis. The nouns a bit, a good deal, a great deal, a little, a lot are also used in this way.
You're by far the cleverest person in this class, you know.
Sally is a great deal younger than her brother.
- Using a sentence with two comparatives shows that as one thing changes, another thing also changes:
The sooner we get home, the happier I'll be.
The more you practise the violin, the easier it will become.

Unit 18

Modals review

Here are further examples of the many different functions of modal verbs. See also Unit 3 Conditional clauses and Unit 6 Degrees of likelihood.

Strong obligation

All passengers must observe the no smoking policy on board.

You'll have to wait in line like everyone else, I'm afraid.

I had to walk to school when I was young.

Weak obligation

I ought to save a bit more money each month.

You really should try to keep on top of your homework.

Unfulfilled obligation (past)

George should have gone to visit his parents more often than he did.

We ought to have done more to this house.

Prohibition

Students must not bring any personal belongings into the examination room.

I don't care what you say, you can't stay out later than midnight.

No necessity

We don't need to buy the cinema tickets in advance.

You needn't have bothered to come and see me off at the station.

Speculation

Could it have been the right answer after all?

There might be some money in it for you.

Deduction

*That must be the turning just beyond the garage.
It must have been Mike's girlfriend you met.*

Ability

*I can get by on my forehand, but I can't play a backhand shot to save my life.
Everyone in the class could understand sign language perfectly.*

Impossibility

*Andrew can't play squash tonight.
There couldn't have been a power failure – the computer's still on.*

Advice

*You should cut down on chocolate if you want to lose weight.
Jerry really ought to see a doctor about his back problem.*

Permission

*You can have a break now.
You may leave if you wish. (formal)*

Unit 19

Word order and adverbs

There are three normal positions for adverbs:

- at the beginning of a sentence – Last night I saw a ghost.
- in the mid-position – I have never had a paranormal experience.
- at the end – She left work in a hurry.

It is important to remember that there are exceptions to the following general rules regarding the position of adverbs, usually depending on what the speaker is emphasising or sees as most important. Note that some types of adverb can go in more than one position.

Initial position adverbs

- Connecting adverbs – However, Then
- Adverbs of time – Last night, Tomorrow
- Some adverbs of frequency – Usually, Once a year, Occasionally
- Some adverbs of certainty – Maybe, Perhaps, Naturally
- Negative adverbials with inversion – Seldom, Rarely
Seldom have I seen him so angry.
- Adverbs of manner, for emphasis – carefully, terribly, easily
Carefully he placed the slide under the microscope.

Mid-position adverbs

The rule here is that these go before a main verb, between an auxiliary and main verb and after the verb to be.

- Adverbs of certainty – definitely, certainly
He will definitely win the cup.
- Adverbs of indefinite frequency – often, seldom, rarely, never, usually, occasionally
She often loses her keys.
- Adverbs of manner – quickly, slowly, carefully
He quickly dived into the water.
- Adverbs of completeness – almost, partly, nearly
I have nearly finished the washing.
- Adverbs of degree – completely, quite
She was quite convinced that she was right.
- Focus adverbs – just, even
*He didn't even apologise for forgetting my birthday.
They just appeared out of nowhere.*

End position adverbs

- Adverbs of manner – quickly, slowly, carefully
She crossed the lane slowly. He dived into the water quickly.
- Adverbs of place
She walked into the park.
- Adverbs of time – last night, tomorrow, yesterday
We saw her only last week.
- Adverbs of definite frequency – yearly, every hour
I go to the gym twice a week.

If there is more than one end position adverb in a sentence or clause, the general rule is to put them in the following order: manner – place – time, though this order can vary for reasons of emphasis.

*We were walking peacefully along the beach yesterday, when we got a terrible fright.
She walked hurriedly out of the room.
She ran out of the room in a frenzy.
I met him for the first time at a concert last week.*

Any position adverbs

- Comment adverbs – personally, in theory, foolishly, in my opinion, undoubtedly *Personally, I'm very annoyed with him.
I'm personally very annoyed with him.
I'm very annoyed with him, personally.*
- Sometimes
*I'm sometimes late with work.
Sometimes I'm late with work.
I'm late with work sometimes.*

hard/hardly, etc.

In some cases there is a difference in the meaning of an adverb which sometimes uses -ly and sometimes doesn't. Adverbs that change meanings include: hard, direct, short, wide, late, free, wrong, right.

I saw the UFO high over the mountains.

He thinks highly of the research done on Aboriginal beliefs.

Unit 20

Uses of have, get and go

- We use the structure of have + object + past participle when we talk about other people doing things for us, for example I have my hair cut every three weeks.
- Another use of have + object + participle is of 'experience', for example I had my car stolen last night. This is something that happened to me. I didn't organise it. The following are similar examples.
It's good to have the birds singing in the morning now it's spring.
I had a dog follow me home yesterday.
- Have + object + infinitive or -ing form is also quite common.
I won't have you coming home late every night!
Have Mrs Jones sit down and wait please.
The teacher had us all running round the field in the rain.
- Look at the following uses of get + object + participle.
I got the car repaired. – This is a more informal way of saying I had the car repaired. She got herself lost on the underground. – It was her own fault.

Answers and recording scripts

The following pages contain all the answers to the exercises, sample answers for the writing tasks, the recording scripts, and lots of additional notes, including useful background information on the texts and topics. The Map of Objective Proficiency Student's Book on pages 3–5 gives full details of the language and exam skills covered in each unit. The Content of the Proficiency Examination on pages 6–7 provides information about the exam, with links to the relevant Exam folder, Writing folder or Unit.

Unit 1

1.1 pages 8–9

Speaking

- 1 The two idioms are a change for the better and a change of heart. Ring the changes, the unit title, is also an idiom. Note that you can also say a change for the worse.

Possible answers

When my family moved to a new house, it was definitely a change for the better. That is also the earliest change I can remember. I had my own large bedroom for the first time, instead of having to share with my sister, and there was a much bigger garden too.

When I left home and went to university, I moved to the opposite side of the country, which was very different from where I had grown up.

I used to have a stressful job in investment banking, but two months ago I resigned and went off travelling. This new experience made me think seriously about my future and when I came back, I decided to retrain as a teacher. I found some old letters the other day, which I had kept for more than twenty years – but I had a sudden change of heart and burnt the lot!

Idiom spot

Idioms are an important area of vocabulary at Proficiency level. Try to record new ones you come across in a vocabulary notebook, and use them in your writing. However, use them sparingly! Too many idioms in a text will sound unnatural.

Speaker 1: I've had a really fantastic year. It all started last November, when I was dragged along to a party by a friend. I was in a terrible mood, I remember, and nearly didn't go. Anyway, I was wearing an outfit I'd made myself – in soft black leather and antique lace, quite an unusual combination! Kelly Johns, the presenter of a big daytime TV show, was there and my little number caught her eye. We got chatting and she asked whether I could come up with something original for her to wear on the show. I jumped at the opportunity. That was a real turning point for me and I was soon able to quit my day job and concentrate on the clothes side full time. Through Kelly's show, I've had lots of orders. I've just finished an exclusive range for a top designer and I've even taken on an assistant to help me. Just think if I'd stayed at home that night!

Speaker 2: People often ask me how I got to be where I am today, with sell-out concerts in big stadiums around the world, thinking that I've spent years playing in local clubs, but the truth is, I'm literally an overnight sensation! I don't mean that arrogantly. It was just one lucky break, all down to being in the right place at the right time. There I was, an absolute nobody, hanging around backstage with Arrowhead, when their lead guitarist tripped over a pile of speakers and broke his arm, five minutes before they were due on. I'd been telling them about my awesome guitar style, so naturally, they all turned to me and said 'Kid, help us out here ...' and I did. The place was packed and I can still feel my hands shaking as I played that very first solo. It went OK though, and the rest is ... history.

Speaker 3: I was in Milan visiting friends, trying to cheer myself up after a dismal few months – my long-term boyfriend and I had broken up, plus I'd left a job without another to go to. My money was running out and I was planning to leave a few days later. Anyway, my friends suggested that I should take a look at Verona before going back home and told me what time train I could get from Milan. Well, for some reason, I ended up on a slow train going south, without realising my mistake – both trains had left at the same time. I fell asleep in the compartment and woke just as the train arrived in Bologna! I had a wander round and fell in love with the place, and knew it was where I wanted to be. Everything just fell into place – I found a teaching job, took a room in a beautiful flat and settled in immediately. I lived there for six years and I go back regularly.

Speaker 4: It's funny how you can hit a run of bad luck: one moment, things are moving along quite normally in your life and then, bam, something comes out of the blue and knocks you sideways and then, wham, something else. I'm OK now, but I've had a difficult couple of years. My problem was quite simply that I'd been living beyond my means for a long time and some debts finally caught up with me. Even then, I thought I'd be OK; I arranged to pay them off little by little from my salary, monthly, you know. But then, the place where I was working cut back on its workforce, and they let me go. Well, that was it, I suppose I panicked, I wasn't thinking straight, you know. So I just packed a bag, got on a coach and left town for London, where my life went downhill fast. I got in with a bad crowd, and one thing led to another. It's a miracle my brother ever tracked me down, but he's got me back and sorted, with a roof over my head and a new job on the cards.

Speaker 5: It could be a story in True Romance, but it really happened just like this. Almost twenty years ago to the day, I was waiting for a bus after another mind-numbingly awful day at work, no bus in sight, of course. I was in a rut, my job was going nowhere. Anyway, there I was, staring gloomily at my reflection in a puddle, feeling utterly sorry for myself and thinking: is this really all there is to life? Then I saw two things in that puddle, one imperceptibly after the other. The first was no surprise, huge splashes of rain, as the heavens opened yet again, but then, this enormous red umbrella, appearing behind my head as if by magic! A gorgeous gravelly voice to my left said did I mind, it was big enough for two and he didn't want my hair to get wet. Very fortunately, it was another fifteen minutes before the bus finally turned up and hooray, it didn't stop raining! His name was Terence, though he's been Terry to me ever since – and Dad to our three wonderful children.

Vocabulary: Phrasal verbs

- 4 Keep a list of new phrasal verbs in a vocabulary notebook. You can record them by main verb, by particle or by topic. Be careful with word order when using phrasal verbs. The verb and particle cannot be separated:
- when it is a three-part phrasal verb
I caught up with Jack further down the road.
 - if the phrasal verb is used intransitively (without an object)
All my hard work paid off.
 - when the particle is a preposition
Sally jumped at the chance of visiting Rome.

Grammar clinic

- 1 Think about areas of grammar that remain problematic for you. This lesson concentrates on perfect tenses.
- Yellow = Perfect tenses
Blue = Passive forms
Pink = Relative clauses
Green = Reported speech
- 2 Refer to the Grammar folder on pages 178–188 if you are unsure of a point covered in any unit. Even at Proficiency level, you need to spend time studying grammar and you should check your written work for grammatical accuracy. Here is a checklist of things to watch out for:
- subject–verb agreement
 - choice of modal verb
 - tense in conditional structures
 - choice of past/present/future tense
 - choice of preposition
 - punctuation in relative clauses
 - structure with reporting verbs, e.g. insist on doing, urge someone to will have done = future forecast, e.g. 'I'm writing up our annual report – is there anything else we will have done (by the end of the year)?'

- h No difference in meaning, though the future perfect continuous tense is more common, as 'living here' is continuous and ongoing.

Reading into Writing: Summarising ideas

- 1 The pictures on the left show the same location in New Orleans during and after Hurricane Katrina in 2005 and the ones on the right show school children working in an IT suite and school children using tablets in a class.

Background information

Hurricane Katrina is the costliest natural disaster to take place in the USA to date. New Orleans suffered huge devastation and most of its major roads were damaged. A 2007 report found design flaws in its flood protection levees.

Suggested answers

The pictures on the left show a natural disaster that has caused a change in the environment. The road is flooded in one picture and people are using small boats to get around, so they may have lost their homes. In the other picture, things are back to normal although the road is still wet so the weather conditions must be bad. Other environmental changes include the effects of global warming – flooding again, or dry river valleys – and the results of deforestation, although that could also come under the commercial category?

The pictures on the right show technological change, in the space of only a few years I suspect? The children in the computer room are working with clunky big machines, whereas the kids using tablets are working in their normal classroom. There are countless other recent technological changes in the world around us, for example wind turbines and solar panels for generating electricity would not have been prevalent twenty years ago.

Vocabulary: Word formation

Using the English Vocabulary Profile you can run an advanced search for words containing individual prefixes and suffixes at each level of the Common European framework. The Word family panels within English Vocabulary Profile entries also indicate the level at which members of a word family are likely to be known – anything in italics is probably restricted to learners at C1 and C2 level. commerce – ial (drop the 'e' and add 'ial') technology – ical (drop the 'y' and add 'ical') create – ive (drop the 'e' and add 'ive') vary – iable (change 'y' to 'i' and add 'able')
Examples of -ous: ambitious, luxurious, monotonous, nutritious, rebellious, suspicious
Examples of -ful: doubtful, eventful, fruitful, pitiful, resourceful, thoughtful
Examples of -less: countless, faultless, helpless, priceless, tactless, tasteless

a predictable b alternative c hopeful d philosophical e experimental f speechless g noticeable h flawless
i disposable j disastrous Adjectives formed from four remaining words:
adventurous, identifiable, massive, understandable

4 Underlining important information is an important first step in planning a summary, as it shows which ideas must be included.

Extract 3

Rather than burgers and fries being a product of the social changes seen over the last fifty years in America, the author suggests that fast food brands were to a large extent responsible for these changes, as they profoundly affected both lifestyle and diet.

Extract 4

Tiny holes found in human teeth estimated to be over 8,000 years old are now believed to be the earliest evidence of dentistry, for when these holes were examined with an electron microscope, researchers found their sides were too perfectly rounded to be caused by bacteria and have therefore proposed that they were drilled by prehistoric dentists.

1 The sentence summarises the general idea that people pick up on things through facial features, but it omits any reference to health and social status, which means it is less clear than the original text.

2 The word judge could be replaced with assess or evaluate.

3 The underlined words in text 2 that could be replaced are: produced (developed, concocted, made); chance (accident); revolutionised (changed, updated, modernised); innovations (new techniques/inventions); significantly (notably, importantly). A word like mauve or aspirin cannot be paraphrased, as it is something very specific.

c is the best choice, as it captures all the important information, uses new words not in the text where possible, is written in a suitably neutral register and is concise (13 words).

Comments on the other sentences:

- a Omits reference to Perkin and does not highlight the fact that aspirin was the most significant innovation.
- b Unduly informal, with use of phrasal verbs; quite wordy.
- d Unnecessary reformulation of mauve leads to lack of clarity and wordiness; other words are lifted from the text, e.g. revolutionary, innovation; too long a sentence.
- e Wrong focus of information (aspirin); incomplete.
- f Good attempt at reformulating, but lacks precision due to omission of mauve; register slightly too informal – better if sentence started 'Commercially' rather than 'Commercially-speaking'.

Suggested answers

- 3 According to the author, fast food has caused social change recently, by influencing how Americans live and changing their diet. (20 words)
- 4 Research has uncovered evidence of prehistoric dentistry, as minute, round holes in 8,000-year-old teeth cannot have been caused by bacteria. (20 words)

Barbados is an island in the Caribbean.

Machu Picchu is a 15th-century Inca site located in a mountainous region in Peru, South America. It is often referred to as the 'Lost City of the Incas'.

Possible answers

Beach scene: be able to chill out; end up spending a fortune; be in the lap of luxury

Machu Picchu: possibly have to rough it; get by on a shoestring budget; enjoy being a culture vulture; get back to nature

Campsite: get off the beaten track; possibly have to rough it; get by on a shoestring budget; get back to nature

Expensive hotel: end up spending a fortune; be in the lap of luxury

Reading

The writer thinks that holidays away from home are overrated and that thinking about them is probably better than actually going on one.

Vocabulary: Collocations with traveller

4 Use an English–English dictionary to help you. Decide which of the two options collocates with traveller/travellers.

a frequent b independent c Seasoned d intrepid e weary f discerning g an armchair h inveterate i unwary

Possible answers

I don't totally agree with the writer. I really enjoy my holidays and I think you can get more out of meeting people and being immersed in a different culture, than from just reading a book. I do understand what he means though, especially, when I've arrived at a resort, only to find that the hotel is a building site.

Aspects of the future

1 Refer to the Grammar folder on pages 178–179 if you are unsure about which tense is used to express a particular aspect.

Possible answers

- To talk about arranged plans for this evening; things you have already organised or booked, e.g. a cinema or theatre visit or friends for dinner.
- To talk about plans which are not organised and maybe are just ideas or spur of the moment plans. These could include plans which might change depending on circumstances, e.g. If it rains, I'll watch TV instead of playing tennis.
- To talk about your intentions this evening; something which you are thinking of doing but haven't quite got around to booking/planning in detail.
- Usually used to talk about a specific time in the future, e.g. What will you be doing at 8.00 this evening? I'll be washing my hair.
- To talk about what will have happened by a certain time in the future. You are looking into the future and saying 'this will have happened', e.g. I will have finished all my homework by 10 tonight.
- To talk about plans which have been abandoned for one reason or another, e.g. I was going to play tennis tonight, but now I have to stay in to babysit my little sister.

- g The flight to Singapore leaves at 6.00 on Fridays.

4 To be bound to expresses a strong feeling of certainty. It is often tested at Proficiency level.

Possible answers

- a I expect that we will be able to travel to the USA in less than a couple of hours and to the other side of the world in a maximum of four hours. Travel within a country will be very rapid, which will mean that you will be able to live quite a distance away from your work.

Extract One

There was a mad excitement about standing in front of a world map and tracing a circumnavigation with my fingertip. Everything seemed possible and my family's nagging doubts really got my goat. I'd say you can't really go wrong when choosing the stops on a round-the-world trip, but I found that some routes worked out better than others. You need a good variety of destinations. You might love the beach, but a trip that stops in California, Australia and Thailand, all for the sun and sand, does get a bit repetitive. At the same time, I didn't want to get carried away trying to see the whole world.

Next, I knew I would have to fork out a pretty hefty sum for the plane ticket as I didn't intend to be thumbing lifts. My budget was tight so I had to play around with my route to get the best value for money. I also had to research my destinations to see what the average daily costs would be and figure out a budget (adding a good 10 or 20 per cent buffer to be on the safe side). I decided to spend longer in cheaper countries and have a relatively short stay in more expensive places, which was sometimes quite a difficult decision as there were so many things I wanted to see. In fact, planning the trip was just as much fun as the actual travelling. I really let my imagination run wild and the trip itself was everything I'd expected.

Extract Two

I really hope to make it as an entrepreneur and I guess the person who's influenced me most has been a well-known British businessman. I was given a copy of his autobiography for my fourteenth birthday and it really made a huge impression on me. He had an amazing childhood. Apparently, when he was just four years old his mother stopped the car a few kilometres from their house and made him find his own way home. Then when he was eleven or twelve his mum decided that he should cycle seventy kilometres to another town to teach him the importance of stamina and to learn a sense of direction! He said he felt great when he'd done it but his mum wasn't worried or relieved or anything – just acted calm as you like and told him to go and help someone in the village chop some logs. His family seemed to thrive on challenges – physical ones rather than educational, which I think's quite unusual. I know my family are dead set on my getting a degree but quite a few entrepreneurs start out without one and look at them!

Anyway, there was another occasion he mentions when his aunt had promised him some money if he learnt to swim. He spent a holiday trying desperately, but just couldn't do it. Then, on the way home in the car, he spotted a river. He made his father stop the car and just dived into the river in his underpants. The river was quite fast-flowing and it seemed like he was going to drown, but then he pushed really hard and actually managed to swim. My childhood was nothing like that, but I guess what I read has made me realise I need to take on challenges and try to fulfil my hopes and aspirations.

Extract Three

According to the latest survey, commissioned by one of our leading banks, over three-quarters of 12- to 19-year-olds said they kept track of their money, up from twelve months ago. Half of young people said they were content that they had enough money, something only 46 per cent said a year earlier, while the amount that those who were unhappy said they would need to be happy has fallen. However, the 9,000 young people questioned continued to have unrealistic salary expectations. The average teenager said they thought they would be earning double what is actually the current average salary for a 35-year-old. Not only this, but nearly three-quarters of those interviewed thought they would have a car by the time they were 21, while more than half hoped to own their own home by the age of 25. Overall, the bank calculates that the average expectation gap between where people thought they would be financially, and where they would actually be, was around £72,133, a small drop compared with last year's figure. Interestingly, although the figures differ somewhat, the findings are very much in line with previous surveys done over the past twenty years.

Part 1 Essay

The compulsory task in Paper 2 Part 1 involves reading two short texts in order to summarise and evaluate the ideas they contain. Objective Proficiency develops the language and skills needed for this task in the Reading into Writing lessons, which occur in alternate Student's Book units. In this Writing folder, there is specific advice on how to answer Part 1.

The texts contain opposing points of view with regard to the use of technology: Text 1 sees this as an appropriate way of widening the audience, while Text 2 suggests that it undermines a museum's primary role, that of educating its visitors.

- 2 In the exam, there will be four main points covered across the two texts. If you underline the key ideas in the texts, this will help you to plan your answer. The relevant parts of the texts are given below and in the next column.

Text 1

- b '... museums have become more community-orientated ...'; '... museum curators have looked to modern technology to breathe more life into exhibits, ...'
- e 'Over the last decade in particular, ... the majority seek to be inclusive rather than elitist, reaching out to everyone.'

Text 2

- c 'The dumbing down of exhibitions is widespread – in short, the medium has become more important than the message'; 'Learning is all too often compromised by technological wizardry, which may impress on a superficial level but essentially trivialises, and provides a content-lite "experience"'.
f 'The purpose of a museum is to stimulate learning and broaden the horizons of its visitors, yet many museums nowadays appear to neglect this responsibility ...'; 'Whether this is in response to government cuts or merely reflects a trend among museum directors, it is undoubtedly a change for the worse.'
- 3 Try to vary the beginning of sentences to demonstrate your language knowledge and remember to use your own words where possible – if you copy words and phrases from the texts, you may be penalised in the exam. You can include occasional quotes from a text but make sure this is limited to a short phrase.

Text 1

- b The first text suggests that the policy of introducing new technology into museum displays has been of benefit to visitors because it is more meaningful and 'hands-on'.
- e The writer is of the opinion that in the last ten years in particular, museums have tried to engage a broader cross-section of the public.

Text 2

- c The second text raises the issue of 'dumbing down', claiming that insufficient content is conveyed in 'modern' museums, due to the implementation of these creative effects.
- f Additionally, it is argued that many museums are ignoring their original function, to educate and inform, which the writer sees as regrettable.

All four points from the texts are summarised. Only the points in Text 1 are evaluated. The writer has copied a considerable amount of input from Text 2 rather than using their own words. The writer has not included any of their own ideas.

- 5 Think of how you could represent the ideas in the second text in your own words. Use a dictionary if necessary.

Suggested answer

Many museum curators seem to have forgotten that their institutions exist in order to promote the transfer of knowledge and the writer sees the introduction of new technology as a bad thing, because the actual subject matter has become subservient to the method of delivery.

- 6 In the exam, it will not matter if you go a little beyond the upper word limit – it is much more important to bring your piece of writing to a suitable close. However, you should not exceed 300 words on the Part 1 task – if an answer is substantially longer than this, it is likely to include some repetition or irrelevance.

Suggested answer

These texts present different reactions to what museums are offering in the 21st century. To my mind, their curators have acted appropriately in embracing the new technology at their disposal. The current reality where I live is that many more people are going to museums than before and the majority of them benefit from this experience. Any transfer of knowledge is a positive outcome and museums definitely contribute to a better-educated society. (72 words)

Recording script 1.04

Sue: Good morning. Now, the huge growth of interest in environmental issues has led to a careful re-examination of all kinds of traditional lore. With me today, I have Peter Watkins. He's written a best-selling book The History of Weather Folklore, which explains country sayings and the role of animals and birds in forecasting the weather. Sayings my granny used to come out with, like Birds flying low, expect rain and a blow, which I've always felt rather sceptical about.

Peter: Well, Sue, the way in which animals and birds can apparently predict changes in the weather before we can has always fascinated people and, for that matter, still does. If it didn't, the sayings wouldn't still be in current use, and of course, nowadays the weather is anxiously studied because of climate change.

Sue: But is there any truth in these old sayings? Given that there are so many, apparently 500 at the last count, and they've been around a while, presumably they should be fairly accurate?

Peter: Mm, well generally, there's a better chance of their being right for short-term weather forecasting rather than long-term. Of course, the most interesting natural weather forecasters are the birds, which is why there are so many sayings relating to them. Birds depend on the right weather conditions for flying and, in particular, birds that fly very high, like swifts and swallows, stand very little chance of survival if they get caught in a bad storm. They are also insect feeders and when the weather is fine the insects are high and the birds will follow them. Insects have good reason to dive for cover if rain is imminent as they are covered with water-repellent hairs. It actually doesn't take much for them to get completely soaked, so they respond quite rapidly if there's a drop in temperature or a rise in humidity.

Sue: Oh, so there's an element of truth in that one. Now, I used to live off the coast of Scotland and they had a saying on the islands about a bird called the red-throated diver. They used to call this bird the rain goose, and the saying went pretty much like this: If the rain goose flies to the hill, you can put your boat where you will, but if she flies to the sea, you must draw your boat and flee. I must say that I used to be rather puzzled by this saying, as I didn't understand why it would fly out to sea when the weather was getting worse. Anyway, one time when I was out in a boat the wind started to get up. We tuned into the radio and it said a gale was due from the north. We saw the geese everywhere flying around and heading out to sea. Despite common sense telling you otherwise, the saying of the local people seemed to be true.

Peter: Yes, and we still don't know the reasons for its strange behaviour. But you know, not all weather lore is about misery. Some birds can predict when things are about to brighten up. Certain geese set off for their breeding grounds in Iceland when the weather is fine – you just have to wait and watch and then plan your harvesting or house painting!

Sue: Not very practical! However, if there is some truth behind these weather sayings, do they ever have any practical use?

Peter: Obviously, weather lore had a very important application in the farmer's world. Farming and weather are intrinsically linked and the ability to predict, or at least think you could predict, was very important to them, although of course, they weren't the only ones with a vested interest in weather forecasting. One of the things about human beings is that we do not like to feel that things are happening with no purpose whatsoever. Weather lore makes a connection between something that is happening and something that is going to happen – we need to feel we're not simply the victims of chance and circumstance. Although it's very difficult to put dates on these sayings, many of them probably go back thousands of years. Some of them work and some of them don't, and some of them don't even make sense. Many actually negate each other.

Sue: Quite. So, how reliable are sayings which predict the year ahead, if we can't even rely on ones predicting the weather the next day?

Peter: Mm, well, I find it very difficult to believe that you can tell the rest of the winter from the way birds are flying or how your cat behaves in the autumn. By putting our own interpretations on how nature works we can get it completely wrong. For our ancestors the weather was a life and death situation – not just an inconvenience – and I think that had they had anything more reliable, they wouldn't have had to base their predictions on this kind of thing. They were really clutching at straws when they observed animal and bird behaviour and linked it to the weather, but they really had no other choice.

Sue: My thanks to Peter Watkins. Next week we'll ...

I'm fairly certain that 'Early to bed, early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise' – and women too, of course. Going to bed early would mean that you would avoid the temptations of late-night clubbing and so would be able to get up fresh and keen to get on with the day's business. The harder you work, the more you earn and therefore you would end up healthier and wealthier.

Review of conditional clauses

Possible answer

I'm not sure that the personality of people in a country is influenced by the type of weather they have. They say the British are reserved because it's so cold and rainy, but there are many British people who are quite jolly! Again, not all Latin types are easy-going and lazy. People from hot countries work equally hard and I'm sure worry just as much about life as people from cold countries. I don't agree with reinforcing stereotypes.

2 The sentences are all conditional.

Suggested answers

- a there are 50% more traffic accidents and 20% more industrial injuries.
 - b the air will make you feel invigorated.
 - c the number of murders would rise.
 - d if there hadn't been a Santa Ana blowing.
 - e you leave Switzerland during a Föhn.
 - f I would go to California if I wanted to murder my husband.
- 3 You should be able to explain what kind of conditional sentence each is. They are all examples of basic forms. Check in the Grammar folder on pages 179–180 if you have any problems with this.

- a Zero conditional used for general truths.
- b First conditional used when something is possible.
- c Second conditional used to talk about something that is unreal and is improbable.
- d Third conditional to talk about something impossible.
- e Zero conditional to talk about a general truth.
- f Second conditional to talk about something which is unreal or improbable.

Before the meal: phone calls to relations, preparation of lots of food

On the day itself: eating, praising the food, criticism of family members, family disputes, more general arguments about politics, coffee, senior member leaves, end of event

Recording script 1.06

Unlike many modern families, mine still holds to the tradition of large family meals at times of celebration or crisis. I use the word 'large' of both the group and the amount of food on offer. The pattern is always the same: endless phone calls weeks ahead of the occasion to mobilise distant cousins and elderly aunts; on the eve of the event, the preparation of excessive amounts of food by the host family member, which never fails to be stress-inducing for all concerned; and then, on the day itself, we slip into our well-established roles, devouring all that is set before us and expressing the joy and contentment that convention demands. Once the wine has started to flow, the praise of succulent dishes gives way to another, more sinister part of the ritual: snide comments on family members not present, the surfacing of ancient grudges and petty family rivalries. This in turn leads to the more general but equally predictable debates on politics and the world at large.

Manners always prevent us from actual bodily assault, but the verbal gloves are certainly off at this late stage in the proceedings. As the insults start to fly, the host hurries away to prepare coffee, hunting out chocolates and jugs of ice-cold water, in a valiant attempt to restore calm. Ritual behaviour dictates that all hostilities cease at this point and so, finally, peace prevails. After his second cup of coffee, handing down a final blessing to the assembled group, the most senior member takes his leave, signalling that it is time for others to do the same. Another memorable family occasion draws to a close.

Possible answer

In Melbourne last Christmas, I was invited to Christmas lunch with my brother-in-law's Armenian family by marriage. There were over thirty people present, ranging from young children to grandparents. We started off in the garden, eating appetisers and toasting everyone's good health – including the health of the entire Liverpool football team. Eventually we all went inside and sat down together, at the longest table I have ever seen! There were so many succulent things to eat, including huge trays of sliced roast lamb and pork, different types of potato dishes, vegetarian salads and roasted vegetables. The meal was a leisurely affair, punctuated every so often by fresh supplies of warm bread. A tempting selection of desserts was then wheeled out and we were allowed to help ourselves and adjourn once more to the garden, where the sun was shining. Later still we came inside again, for the children to be given their presents. It was a truly splendid day.

Reading

3 The narrator, Triton, is Mister Salgado's cook.

Background information

Romesh Gunesequera has been favourably compared to Chekhov and Graham Greene. Much of his writing portrays the dilemma of living in Sri Lanka during the long period of civil war (1983–2009), where violence and political unrest were a part of daily life. Reef, his first novel, was shortlisted for the Booker prize in 1994 and won the Italian Premio Mondello in 1997. His other books include Monkfish Moon, a set of short stories, and other novels, The Sandglass and The Match.

4

1 B 2 C 3 A 4 D 5 A 6 C

Detailed explanation:

- The answer, B, can be found in the sentence He was concerned to make sure there was plenty of time to prepare, even though he acted so nonchalant. A is ruled out because the narrator says it had never happened before in his life. C is wrong as Mr Salgado did give his cook advance warning. D is plausible though the first paragraph shows that Triton has plenty of culinary experience.
- The answer, C, is supported by the references Triton makes to Miss Nili's manner of eating in the second half of the first paragraph: she ate like a horse, so hungry-looking and I expected her to bulge out as she ate .... A, though plausible, is not stated in the text. B is falsely suggested by the words I don't know where she put it. As with A, Triton does not pass judgement on Miss Nili, so D is ruled out.
- The answer, A, is rooted in the whole paragraph that begins Triton made it, where Triton talks of his 'coming of age'. B is wrong, as it was the one phrase Mister Salgado would say ... again and again. C is ruled out by Miss Nili's words in the next paragraph, where she says that Triton makes a lovely cake. D is not suggested by the text, apart from Triton's general comment on the petrified morass of all our lives, which is beyond the scope of the tea party.
- The answer, D, lies in the words I rode in it like a prince. A is wrong, as although Triton implies that the taxi is slow, a black tortoise, there is no suggestion that he is annoyed by this. B is not suggested by the text and it would be inappropriate for Triton, a servant, to have such feelings. C is wrong, as it is Miss Nili who is helped into the taxi by Mister Salgado.
- The penultimate paragraph (the one before the final paragraph) shows that Triton feels positive about life when his work goes well: Suddenly everything becomes possible and the whole world ... pulls together, so the answer is A. B is the opposite of Triton's view, for he felt stupid to need the praise. C is not suggested by the text; in fact Triton appears to prefer being the sole owner of the kitchen. D is not suggested by the paragraph.
- The answer, C, is rooted in the sentence It was as if he couldn't believe his eyes, seeing Nili sitting there in front of him. A is wrong, as, although Mister Salgado drank lots of tea, he ate nothing. There is no evidence in the paragraph for B, as it was Nili who would murmur her approval. D, though plausible in view of Mister Salgado's nervousness before her arrival, is not suggested in the paragraph and Triton is the one who orchestrates the delivery of each part of the meal, with the exception of Mister Salgado's words No, bring the cake now.

Style extra

Using similes sparingly in your own writing will demonstrate your range. Another useful device is to replace a standard colour adjective with a noun phrase – for example, instead of ‘brown’, you could say coffee-coloured or the colour of mud. You can also supplement the adjective with a noun, to give a more vivid description – for example mint green, ice blue.

The animals associated with Miss Nili are:

a horse she ate like a horse

a snake like a snake swallowing a bird ... one leg coiled under her a cow She made a lowing sound between bites.

The effect is to accentuate her appetite and unconventional behaviour.

By referring to the taxi as having a butter-coloured top, the author brings his own writing to life and also skilfully reminds us that Triton the narrator is also Triton the cook, who sees life through his cooking (see the answer 5A in the multiple-choice questions above).

Review of past tenses

- 1 The picture shows a selection of old and new forks. The top fork is the oldest and is around 500 years old. Some plastic ‘sporks’ are shown at the end of the text.

Possible answers

People would certainly have been using some form of knife to cut up meat and other foodstuffs 2,000 years ago – not metal knives of course, but some kind of sharp cutting implement. People could have been using basic forks, too, though metal ones must be a more recent phenomenon, probably only dating back a thousand years or so. The ancient Egyptians used spoons made of ivory, wood and other materials.

The design of the spork is very clever, as it gives you a spoon, a fork and a serrated ‘knife’ all in the one implement. Produced in bright colours, it looks very attractive too – just the thing for a picnic or camping trip.

Suggested answer

Appearance: three longer prongs became four shorter ones in the nineteenth century.

Use: ‘shared’ forks became less common in the nineteenth century; one-handed eating in the nineteenth century gave way to holding the fork in the left hand and the knife in the right, introduced by the English towards the end of the nineteenth century.

- 1 The fruit shown, from top left, includes grapes, a lime, a grapefruit, an apple, a mango, a pineapple, a lemon, a nectarine, redcurrants, bananas, pomegranates, passion fruit, a kiwi fruit, a melon, a watermelon, a coconut, a peach and oranges.

Suggested answers

A mango is fleshy, juicy when ripe, and rather sensuous. Redcurrants are quite sharp but they are appetising, and look exquisite as a garnish – like bright, red beads. Lemons can be quite fibrous and their juice is sour.

- 2 The main points below are also underlined in the recording script. Play the recording twice.

Ideal temperature for ripening: over 40 °C
 Chief mango-growing area: to the north of Calcutta (Eastern India)
 Facts about the mango tree: up to 60 feet (about 18 metres) tall, has a massive trunk, shiny green leaves
 History of mango-growing in India: established by the Moghuls in the seventeenth century and taken up by the Nawabs, who diversified the varieties grown

Recording script 1.07

For the last two months, across much of India, temperatures have soared daily to over 40 degrees Celsius – perfect ripening weather for the mango, perfect wilting weather for humans. The thing about India, and Calcutta in particular, is that everyone here eats seasonally and mangoes are everywhere – in every home, on every hotel menu, and sold on every street corner. In the markets, they're beautifully arranged, stacked up according to variety on big wide wicker baskets.

The main mango-growing areas are situated to the north of the city. I headed out to an old family estate where they still have a number of the original orchards. This estate, laid out around an old indigo-planter's house, is wonderfully peaceful and the air so clean – a million miles from Calcutta. Against the exotic foliage of the coconut palm and the banana plant, the mango tree looks like a shiny-leaved evergreen oak. It has a massive, gnarled trunk and can easily grow to a height of sixty feet. Many trees were planted over a hundred years ago.

Indians today have the Moghul dynasties of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries to thank for the amazing diversity of mangoes available now. They established large plantations across the northern states of Uttar Pradesh and Bihar. It was the Muslim leaders – the Nawabs – who cultivated the fruit in Bengal. They were great fruit-loving people and they missed their apricots and their melons. They cross-pollinated the mango, they got 101 varieties, and these are the sophisticated mangoes that grow mainly in eastern India. When the Moghul empire was in its decline, the Nawabs moved southward and here they cultivated their mangoes, planting them according to their different varieties in orchards – they gave them the most romantic and poetic names, names like 'passari', the loved one, 'begum pasan', the Nawab's wife's favourite ...

- a The speaker uses the word 'perfect' ironically: although the high temperature is perfect for ripening the mango, it causes people to 'wilt', that is, become tired and without energy.
- b The mangoes are arranged in piles according to their varieties.
- c leaves that grow in the tropics or another faraway place from the speaker's point of view
- d the Moghul Empire or royal families
- e incredible variety (101 different types)

- 4 Remember that the adverb seasonally comes from the noun season. There is also a related adjective seasonal. Note that the verb season and the noun seasoning belong to a different word family within the topic of food:
- season (verb) = add salt, pepper or other spices to food to improve the taste
- seasoning (noun) = the spices that you use to add flavour

Suggested answer

Buying produce out of season appears to offer maximum choice and flexibility, but can be very disappointing in terms of flavour because the fruit in question has been flown halfway around the world in chilled conditions. Fresh soft fruit like strawberries and raspberries, or vegetables such as asparagus, taste so delicious when they have been freshly picked. Also, because they are only available at a set time of year, you look forward to eating them and savour them during their short season.

bread and butter (the main part of your income)

that's the way the cookie crumbles (that's life) doesn't cut the mustard (is not up to the job) talk turkey (have a frank discussion: used mainly in American English)

- 5 As the Exam spot explains, Part 2 of the Speaking Test has two stages: an introductory task followed by a discussion. Read the Suggested answer aloud and time yourself doing this – it should last for approximately one minute.

Suggested answer

The two photos illustrate different aspects of food consumption that are somewhat problematic. The green beans in Picture A have been grown in Egypt but are being sold in the UK, so the supermarket concerned has incurred air miles. The buying power of large supermarkets is such that they can afford to pay these transport costs and they know that people will buy them when they are not in season in the UK. It would be much better for the environment if shoppers restricted their buying of fruit and vegetables to local seasonal produce. All the bananas for sale in Picture B have been shrink-wrapped, which is just so unnecessary! Excessive packaging like this causes so many issues, including rubbish disposal – the landfill sites cannot cope with the quantity of rubbish that is generated. Some shrink-wrapping has health implications too – take the way meat is packaged for example, with chemical treatment to extend the sell-by dates.

- 6 The discussion stage in Part 2 involves all the visual material. In the exam, you should give the other candidate opportunities to speak and comment on his/her ideas. You have read about Pictures A and B above. Now read the Suggested answer below about Pictures C and D. Then think about how you would comment on the topic in relation to all four pictures – you may not agree with the views expressed here!

Suggested answer

Picture C shows appalling waste – a rubbish skip being inundated with loaves of bread that cannot be sold by the supermarket because they are a day beyond their 'best before' date! For me that picture suggests something totally unacceptable. We need to seriously rethink our food consumption and it has to start with the supermarkets. Maybe they should restrict the choice on offer? Or perhaps it is down to us – we should begin to make our own bread alongside growing our own vegetables like the lady in Picture D? That big, fat leek she has just pulled out of the ground looks fantastic, plus it has been grown in season and so hasn't created any air miles. We all need to do what she is doing, even if it is just tending a window box on a balcony.

Part 2 Review

If you decide to write a review in Part 2, remember to address the question rather than merely describe what happens in the book or film you are reviewing. Make early reference to the title for clarity.

- 1 The picture is a 'still' from the film The Perfect Storm, showing the fishing boat amidst massive waves.

Possible answers

The steel grey sea looks bitterly cold and very sinister. The huge waves tower menacingly over the fishing boat. Such a vast amount of heaving water threatens the lives of everyone on board the vessel.

- 2 The paragraph plan covers all parts of the exam task, including the general aspect at the end.

Suggested answers

The review is not very successful. There is only a minimal lead-in. The film is not named. The third paragraph is all plot, most of which should have been omitted. There is insufficient description of the special effects in the fourth paragraph. The evaluation is barely attempted.

To improve the review, the balance of the content needs to be addressed: there should be less plot, more reference to the special effects used, and some expansion of the general evaluation at the end.

- 4 The exercise focuses on how you can extend your range of vocabulary and expression.

- g through the eye of the storm (worst weather)
- h the special effects kick in (start)
- i really outstanding (very good)
- j clever use of digital imaging (computers)
- k those gigantic (big) waves
- l the film also stars (has) Mark Wahlberg
- m the film cuts to (shows)
- n the girlfriend, scanning the horizon (looking out to sea)
- o a prerequisite (essential part) of all films
- p its best feature (thing)

Corrected and improved answer

As part of the feature on special effects, the film The Perfect Storm is a very good example to consider. In one way, it is not a typical Hollywood blockbuster, as there is no happy ending, but in other ways – the actors used, the budget, the special effects – it is.

Why is it 'perfect'? It is actually a weatherman who uses this word. As he tracks the worsening weather out at sea, we see him getting genuinely excited about the unique set of weather conditions. This was an interesting sub-plot for me.

The captain of the fishing boat, portrayed by George Clooney, does not care about the safety of his crew and only wants to find more fish and make money. His irresponsible risk-taking eventually leads the tiny boat into the very eye of the storm, which is brought vividly to the screen by really outstanding use of special effects, including some clever use of digital imaging. When the special effects kick in, you feel as though you are in the boat with the crew, facing those gigantic waves. At the end, the ship goes down and we see one of the sailors – the film also stars Mark Wahlberg – drifting on an empty sea. The huge waves tower menacingly over the poor fisherman. Somewhat unbelievably, he is shown thinking beautiful thoughts about his girlfriend. Then the film cuts to the girlfriend, scanning the horizon with an anxious look on her face.

Are special effects a prerequisite of all films today? In my own opinion, it depends on the type of film – a psychological drama has no need of special effects to heighten the tension between characters. However, most of today's younger cinema-goers choose action films and they do expect special effects to be an integral part of the entertainment. In The Perfect Storm, they were probably its best feature. (309 words)

- Para 1 Introduction to review/advert chosen
- Para 2 Brief description of the advert
- Para 3 Visual effects
- Para 4 Other features – music, actors, voice-over, etc.
- Para 5 Assessment of influence adverts have on us

Sample answer

It is true that advertising has become an art form in its own right. Nowadays, some of the very best film directors are employed to produce a visually impressive fifty or sixty seconds of footage that we will remember and associate ever afterwards with the product being sold. My own favourite is a recent Guinness advert, which lives up to the high standards set by earlier adverts for this dark beer from Ireland.

The product becomes part of a visual extravaganza, set somewhere in South America or the Caribbean. At the outset, you are unsure what you are witnessing. Tension is in the air and you realise that a race is about to start – incredibly, a snails' race! Each snail lines up in its own lane, with a number on its shell, and bets are taken on which one will be the winner. Snails being what they are, the race gets off to a slow start, but then, one snail finds its way into an almost-empty glass of Guinness, takes in the necessary sustenance and streaks home, to the wild cheers of the crowd.

One striking image follows another and special effects are judiciously used to accentuate the snail's speed. The film is also shot from unusual angles – a snail's eye view, you might say, where human faces become slightly distorted and more unusual. At the end, we are almost participants in the vibrant celebration, which is fuelled by Guinness and exudes only good humour and love of life.

Characteristically of a Guinness advert, loud music alternates with silence, busy scenes with stillness. There is no need for a voice-over, which would only labour the point. The overwhelming impression created is that you are watching something utterly unique, a message that you will then associate with the product itself.

In general, I believe adverts have a huge effect on our lifestyle and aspirations. If they didn't, far less money would be spent on them. (324 words)

Writing

4

The review originally appeared in the Guardian newspaper, in a slightly longer version. The writer is fairly negative about the book, dismissing it as 'publishing froth'.

Punctuated and paragraphed review

No one has yet written 'Froth: the Trend that Changed History' but Universal Foam comes pretty close to being the definitive example of publishing froth. The book blends two recent publishing trends, the newer of which is the wacky science subject. If there is a market for books on cryptography, chronometry or cod - / , and books on all these subjects have sold well in the last decade - / , then there is no reason why any subject should seem boring.

Once you have discovered a subject so obscure that no other publisher has come across it before, all that remains is to prove that it holds the key to universal understanding. 'Cod: / - a Biography of the Fish that Changed the World' / "Cod: / - a Biography of the Fish that Changed the World" / Cod: / - a Biography of the Fish that Changed the World is a pretty good example, but 'Universal Foam: / - the Story of Bubbles from Cappuccino to the Cosmos' / "Universal Foam: / - the Story of Bubbles from Cappuccino to the Cosmos" / Universal Foam: / - the Story of Bubbles from Cappuccino to the Cosmos outdoes it, since it permeates the universe from the smallest to the largest scale. After all, there aren't any galaxies stretched on the skin of unimaginably vast cod ; / , nor do physicists speak of the world arising from fluctuations in the quantum codfish. So "The Boys' Bumper Book of Froth" / "The Boys' Bumper Book of Froth" / The Boys' Bumper Book of Froth might contain - / , / (as every bestseller should - / , /) everything you need to know about the universe. Then again, / [no punctuation] it might contain everything else. That's pretty frothy too.

In fact, 'Universal Foam' / "Universal Foam" / Universal Foam runs into another current publishing style: / – the book of lists. Among the subjects covered here are: / [no punctuation] volcanoes, shaving-foam, champagne, fire-fighting / firefighting equipment and meringues. Then you list everything you know about everything in the first list: / – 101 important facts about galaxies ; / – then 20 things you never knew about the cappuccino, / [no punctuation] and so on.

Finally, all this is wrapped up in the academic style, / – / (as old as exams, / – /) where you simply cram in all the knowledge that you can possibly get hold of and regurgitate it, / [no punctuation] with the echoing solemnity of a TV anchorman on 'The Simpsons' / "The Simpsons" / The Simpsons, suggesting a rhetorical question: / – 'Can everyday foams like milk foam ever be fully understood and controlled?' / "Can everyday foams like milk foam ever be fully understood and controlled?" At which point, / [no punctuation] there is foam flecking this reviewer's lips.

You can't really blame the author, / [no punctuation] / (Sidney Perkowitz, /) who has worked hard and writes clearly. It is not his fault that he has nothing particular to say after he has got through the bits that particularly interest him: / – the fairly technical discussions of how to measure foams and describe them mathematically. However, the fact is there is no sound reason for this book to have been written in the first place.

I would probably be a shopaholic if I had enough money. As it is, I do tend to buy too many shoes. I hardly ever wear some of them, so I guess I am wasting my money. Designer labels are important to me as well. I really adore Armani, but it's a little expensive. I think it's important to keep in fashion. I always make a point of complaining if I buy something which has a fault. I take it right back to the manager and ask for my money back. I never want an exchange. I know my rights and if I had a real problem I would have no hesitation in getting a lawyer in to plead my case.

Recording script 108

Paula: Good morning. On the programme today we have Mike James, a familiar face on television as the champion of consumers' rights. Mike, you've been doing Pricewise a long time now, is it something you set out to do?

Mike: Far from it Paula. It all began in 2002, when I was a reporter on a nightly news programme. They wanted a consumer slot, so I took it on. It wasn't until nearly ten years later that it became a programme in its own right. Now, we regularly get more than ten million viewers.

Paula: Where do the stories you look into come from?

Mike: Well, from you, the public. We get thousands of letters, phone calls and emails that tell us about poor service, ridiculous small print, malpractice and the need for information. We actually read all the correspondence and we follow up some stories immediately but most are filed for future use on our database.

Paula: What happens when you get a particularly juicy story?

Mike: We check it out thoroughly of course, and then we contact everyone involved, write the script and arrange filming. Sometimes we use actors and sometimes real people. Of course, it's essential that our lawyers check the script over. It's all done to very tight deadlines.

Paula: Do any particular stories stand out in your memory?

Mike: Oh, yes, many. There was one about an advert which promised to give you a title for anything up to £1,000. So, Bob and Trace became Lord Robert and Lady Tracy de Vere. You also get a piece of land but that only measures 20 cm by 20 cm. One of our researchers handed over the cash and tried to find out if being a lord would help him out in London.

Paula: And did it?

Mike: He went to Harrods, the department store, and they were very nice to him, but then they're nice to everyone. He then tried to book a table in a trendy restaurant and he got one – but not in a prime position next to the window – but by the kitchen door! So, really, it won't do you a lot of good being a lord nowadays.

Paula: Any other interesting stories?

Mike: Well, we did a programme not long ago about shopping on the Internet. The big supermarkets will deliver to your door if you order online, as you know.

Paula: Yes, it's a great idea, but I've not actually tried it out.

Mike: Well, it does usually work well. However, we did find that some customers hadn't received quite what they'd ordered. One poor man had asked for apples and got hairspray! The supermarket was very apologetic when we pointed out these problems and sent the customer some shopping vouchers.

Paula: Do you think consumers are more ready to complain these days?

Mike: Oh, yes. Research has been done that shows that attitudes have changed remarkably in the last forty years. Take a well-known brand of trainer. You could understand if they leaked, but actually these particular ones squeaked. Now, as they cost upwards of £100, people weren't prepared to put up with this, but when they returned them to the shop, the shop didn't want to know.

Paula: So they wrote to you for help.

Mike: Yes. We bought a pair of the trainers and sent them to be inspected by an expert who said that some of the glue inside the shoe had come unstuck. We contacted the manufacturer with evidence of the problem and they were more than happy to back down and refund the money paid by the purchasers.

Paula: Another success then.

Mike: Yes, it's funny how quickly manufacturers and retailers react when they think they might attract bad publicity.

Paula: Indeed! It just shows what a good job you're doing. Now next week ...

I prefer to shop in a town centre because there are more independent stores. I hate out-of-town shopping centres or malls because they are just full of the big chain stores, all selling similar things.

I think it's terrible that there are so few small independent shops in my town. I can quite understand why people go out of town to do their shopping – after all, it's probably more convenient and possibly the prices are lower – but I prefer the variety that small independent shops provide. Parking provision is probably the main reason why shopping centres or malls are so popular. Added to that is the fact that, in some cold, rainy climates, it is more comfortable to shop in a warm, indoor mall rather than having to battle against the elements on the High Street.

And light years ahead of the competition.'

- 4 Students are often confused as to how to use the apostrophe s in English. As a result they tend to use of, which is often not correct. Use the notes in your book to justify your answers.

a back seat b boss's wife / wife's boss – depending on whether the boss is male or female c corner of a/ the room d pay day e week's holiday f wine glass g moment's delay h Anne's best friend i door handle j sports field

Vocabulary: Prepositions

- 5 Prepositions are often a problem in English for students of all levels. Make sure that you learn which preposition goes with a word when you put it in your vocabulary notebook.

1 in 2 with 3 of 4 by/into 5 in 6 of 7 with/in 8 to 9 in/at 10 of 11 into/on 12 with 13 towards/to 14 on 15 without 16 at

Reading into Writing: Working with two texts

Possible answer

I have really liked an advertisement that uses model animals to advertise car insurance. It is clever because the animals are cute and cuddly and have nothing to do with car insurance at all. The advertisement is like a soap opera and is worth watching for itself.

I think children are more vulnerable than adults to advertising because they lack judgement when it comes to what they are presented with. I think that junk food, for example, should never be advertised during children's TV programmes.

- 2 Spend about five minutes reading the two texts and then answer the questions.

Text 1 is possibly from a newspaper. The style is fairly informal, e.g. shell out, dawn on, nagging, even down to Text 2 is possibly from a research paper. The style is academic, e.g. cognitive ability, embedded within, inherently

3

Text 1: occur to – dawn on; pester – nagging; including – down to; whim – impulse, evaluate – weigh up
Text 2: assess – evaluate; extent – scope; claim – contention; essentially – inherently; exaggerated – overstated

- 4 You will need to find the two main points in each text in the examination.

Text 1: b, d
Text 2: a, c

Suggested answer

The two texts discuss the pros and cons of advertising to young people. Text 1 claims that young people have an enormous impact on what the people around them, friends and family, decide to spend their money on, even affecting decisions normally made by adults. Not only this, but young people, unlike older ones, do not spend time carefully considering their purchases or asking around to get advice.

Text 2 argues that, even though there is some unease about targeting young people with advertising, in fact, this group have some immunity to it as they have been subjected to it over a long period of time. There is also the point that advertising can enable young people to make sensible decisions about their purchases by giving them the facts they need about the goods advertised. (135 words)

Vocabulary: Abstract nouns

- 6 As you have seen in Unit 3, it is important to be able to manipulate words, both for the word formation task on Paper 1 and in answering Paper 2 writing tasks.

a boredom b obsolescence c awareness d pride

 i inefficiency j insecurity k meanness l individualism, responsibility m aspirations n scepticism

The photograph is of a fresco by Giovanni Stradano (1523–1603) of the Piazza del Mercato Vecchio in Florence.

You need to get used to organising your vocabulary systematically. This will help when you come to do this type of exercise. It's important to read through the text from beginning to end to get a good idea of what it is about and also the register it is in. Some answers may depend on register rather than meaning.

Speaking

- 1 The photos are of:
- a young woman student listening to an MP3 player and studying
 - a teenage boy playing an electric guitar

Possible answers

I'm afraid I find it very hard to concentrate if music is playing – it doesn't matter what type it is, I still find it very distracting.

It's quite true that every child should learn to play an instrument, although getting them to practise may be a problem. Learning how to read music is very good.

I think the piano is much easier to learn than the violin. Your playing can sound fairly reasonable much faster on the piano than on the violin.

Pop music can improve my mood, but it depends – sometimes it just makes it worse!

I don't believe that classical music is superior to pop music. They both have their positive aspects.

Reading

- 2 This part of the Reading and Use of English paper is the one students often have the most trouble with. Read all of the base text and then all the extra paragraphs before doing the exercise. Some of the important references have been highlighted in bold as this is the first example of this type of task. They are not in bold in the examination. Read both sides of the gap to make sure you have the right answer. Just reading the paragraph before the gap will not always help.

1 F 2 D 3 B 4 G 5 A 6 E 7 H

Links to underline:

- 3 'statistical connection' (para 2); 'truly convincing study' (para B); 'musical ability enhances mathematical ability' (para B); 'the two are interestingly related' (para 3)
- 4 'piano' (para 3); 'are mathematicians more drawn to this rather than to other instruments' (para G); 'can we at least argue' (para G); 'Indeed, yes, we can' (para 4)
- 5 'not the kind of obscure connection' (para 4); 'the straightforward link' (para A);
- 6 'we don't ... mysterious connection between mathematical ability and linguistic ability' (para 5); 'because the link exists but not the uncertainty: grammar feels mathematical' (para E); 'paradoxical' (para E); 'contradiction' (para 6)
- 7 'solve problems of the "A is to B as C is to D" kind' (para 6); 'Music is full of little puzzles like this' (para H)

- 1 Use an English–English dictionary to help you with this exercise if you are unsure of the answers.

brass: trumpet electronic: synthesizer keyboard: piano
percussion: triangle; drum; xylophone string: violin; guitar; cello woodwind: clarinet; flute; saxophone

- 2 Read through the questions before listening to the recording. Try to predict the answers. Write down what you think the answer is going to be and check whether you were right after you have heard the recording. Play the recording twice, as in the exam. The underlined parts of the recording script confirm the answers.

1 carved 2 cold 3 flexibility 4 wastage/waste 5 ribs
6 glue 7 neck 8 varnish 9 tone

Recording script 1.09

Interviewer: Any string player will tell you that no instrument is identical to another. Thirty violins may look the same, but each has a characteristic, however subtle, all of its own. Middleton College runs a violin-making course for students of all ages. And I must say that to see a violin in its stages of development, and especially the intricately carved wood, really fascinated me. The head of the violin school is one of its ex-students, Sue Pearson. I met her in the violin workshop. Sue, before you start to make a violin into the instrument we all know and love, where do you go to find your wood?

Sue: Various places. The pine really needs to come from places where the weather is cold enough for the tree to have grown fairly slowly, so that it grows straight and has close, uniform grain lines.

Interviewer: Why is that – that you need such finely grained wood?

Sue: It's all relating to flexibility, and it needs to be incredibly strong too, of course. We make the front of the violin from pine and the back from maple. These two woods have the qualities we're looking for.

Interviewer: What we've got here are basically just blocks of wood, aren't they? As with any great piece of woodwork, you can never believe for a moment that you could just produce something out of a boring block of wood.

Sue: This piece here is basically for just one part of the violin. In any operation in violin-making, I think you're looking at 80–85% wastage.

Interviewer: And you've got some other bits as well. Very thin pieces.

Sue: These are what we call the ribs. These are about one and a half to one and three-quarter millimetres wide, and before they can go onto the instrument, they'll be reduced in thickness.

Interviewer: We've got the shape of the body here. What happens next?

Sue: Basically we shape the top and bottom and then we use glue to stick them together. We don't use a nail or machine for this. We've still got the neck to do and this is easily the most elaborate part of the instrument. It's always quite difficult for a novice student to undertake. We're really dealing in three dimensions.

Interviewer: There's an instrument that looks finished over there, but it's an unusual colour. Why is that?

Sue: Well, it's not finished yet. It needs a good clean – it can get a bit grubby when it's being made. It needs to have varnish applied and this can affect the sound – makes it more mellow in my opinion.

Interviewer: Some of the greatest violins are fairly old. Are you expecting when you make these instruments that they might still be around a couple of hundred years hence?

Sue: That's one of the things that always interests us. We're all mortal and it would be nice to think one of your instruments was still being played in two to three hundred years and that it would even improve in tone. Obviously it will increase in value too, but that's not something that worries me too much.

Style extra

Collocations are often tested in the examination and you can gain more marks if you use them in your compositions.

Suggested answers

- a A monster is widely believed to live in Loch Ness.
- b She gave her boyfriend a carefully chosen birthday present.
- c Designer clothes are more keenly priced in out-of-town retail outlets.
- d The seats for the rock concert were staggeringly expensive.
- e The new album has been singularly successful and has reached number one.

Idiom spot

The idioms here all derive from words to do with music. One word is used more than once.

a note b tune c song d string e score f note
g chord

3 Refer to the Exam spot.

The photos are of:

- a classical concert
- a man and his grandchild listening to an MP3 player
- an outdoor music festival
- a rock concert

Possible answer

(These are ideas for one side of a conversation.)
I think that the person listening to music on an MP3 player is probably the most representative of the way people listen to music today. Since its introduction the iPod® and similar devices have really become popular as they mean that you can listen to whatever music you want, wherever you are, without annoying anyone else. At one time, it was possible to overhear a tinny noise when someone was using an MP3 player, but with the new types of earphone, this is no longer the case. I'm sure that even better devices will be invented very soon as well.

Pronunciation

4 This exercise looks at contrastive stress. This is particularly important for the modal auxiliaries you have seen in this unit as the meaning can change depending on how they are said.

Part 1 Essay

Look back at Writing folder 1 for basic facts about this compulsory question. This Writing folder helps you to express ideas from the texts in your own words, add variety to your sentences, and paragraph your ideas.

1 Try to write four sentences summarising the ideas in the texts.

Suggested answers

Text 1

Although music is all around us, it does not enjoy a high status in contemporary society. It is challenging for talented musicians to survive in their chosen profession.

Text 2

Music is often cut from the school curriculum so that more resources can be given to mathematics and science. There are unforeseen benefits to children from the study of music in school.

- 2 Underline useful vocabulary in the sentences that convey the ideas in the texts.

Sentences b and e do not reflect the content of the texts.

- 3 Remember that in the exam, you must use your own words wherever possible.
- 4 Notice that the sentence openers are all impersonal in tone.
- 5 Write around 50–60 words.

Suggested answer

Nobody can deny that music features in our lives and yet, as the texts point out, it is undervalued in society. The first text considers the plight of professional musicians, while the second focuses on the low prestige of music in schools. This essay argues that music is important and requires investment to secure its presence in education and culture. (60 words)

- 6 Follow the Exam advice given.

Sample answer

Nobody can deny that music features in our lives and yet, as the texts point out, it is undervalued in society. The first text considers the plight of professional musicians, while the second focuses on the low prestige of music in schools. This essay argues that music is important and requires investment to secure its presence in education and culture.

What then is the role of music today? Professional musicians are sometimes highly regarded yet earn a pittance. From the classical performer's point of view, the reality is that it is very hard to find orchestral positions nowadays. This must be disheartening after so many years of study. Perhaps more should be done by the state to support young musicians who are embarking on their working life?

Similarly, on the question of teaching music in school, not enough is done. People tend to regard music as a less essential part of the school curriculum than mathematics or science. At the same time, there are unforeseen advantages for children who learn music from a young age, as it encourages creativity and allows them to develop social skills through participation in a group event. This is not to say that everyone should be able to read music, but they should have access to it.

Music plays a fundamental role in both the educational and cultural spheres, and its beneficial contribution to shaping our lives needs to be better understood by all members of society. If more resources were made available to schools and young musicians were given adequate financial support through government subsidy or other means, society would profit significantly. (268 words)

Unit 7

7.1 pages 58–59

Listening

- 1 The pictures all have the word 'eye' in common. They show:
- a 'macrophoto' of the human eye, showing the dark central pupil surrounded by a blue iris
 - the eye of a needle with thread
 - a cat's eye, the device used on main roads to guide drivers at night
- 2 As the Exam spot mentions, there are three short extracts in Paper 3 Part 1. In the exam, you will have 15 seconds before each extract to read through the questions. In this time, try to predict what you might hear. Play each extract twice. The underlined parts of the recording script confirm the answers.

1 B 2 A 3 C 4 B 5 B 6 A

Recording script 1 12

Extract One

Interviewer: Dr Joanna Walters, your new book The Complex Eye has been featured in many newspapers this week. In it, you remind us that the eye is not only a passive receiver of information, but a great communicator too.

Joanna: Um, I should point out that I collaborated on the book with a leading zoologist – it's the human communication side that's my field.

Interviewer: Sorry. That's journalism for you. I've been misinformed. Anyway, we all remember being told by our mothers that it's rude to stare.

Joanna: Right. Staring is the most aggressive facial expression with which to threaten a rival and in the animal kingdom, those species that can't frighten off their would-be attackers in this way, from moths to fish to birds, have evolved false eye spots, which fulfil the same function.

Interviewer: And you draw parallels with human beings here.

Joanna: Absolutely. Because it's taboo for us to physically stare someone out, other, subtler, strategies are often in play. Look in your rear-view mirror late at night and you may see a pair of dazzling headlights eyeballing you. What do you do?

Interviewer: Let them overtake?

Joanna: That's right, avoid confrontation, especially in these days of road rage. Once we're behind the wheel, those headlights become an extension of our persona, whether aggressively so, or in self-defence.

Extract Two

Woman: When Sam was two and a bit, he began to use one of the living room walls, which was unfortunately white at the time, as a drawing surface. It was always the same wall and he appeared to be attempting pictures, as well as showing a definite sense of colour. I had no wish to stifle any artistic genius he might have, so I tended to turn a blind eye to what he was doing, making sure that he was armed with washable felt-tips and cleaning up after him without delay. But one weekend I was out and my husband caught him at it ... a boat with two funnels, as I recall, and he hit the roof, both with Sam and with me. In the end we compromised: I bought some huge rolls of white paper and taped it to the wall, all the way along. As soon as Sam completed one magnum opus I would take it down and replace it with a fresh canvas, so to speak. It cost me a fortune, but I've never regretted it. In fact I feel proud of myself, as I believe it helped to make him the way he is. But Sam loves to wind me up about it. You see, he has absolutely no leanings towards art, being heavily into information technology!

Extract Three

Man: Percy Shaw always had an eye for practical solutions. Driving home through the unlit outskirts of Halifax at night, he found the perfect substitute for night vision, following the glint of his headlights in the metal tramlines. But he ran into a problem: no longer in use, these rails were soon taken up for good. With this serious setback, Shaw decided it was time to come up with something that would help him – and others – to steer in the dark. His now ubiquitous invention, modelled on the eye of a cat, consists of a mirror and a spherical lens mounted on a rubber pad. Each time a vehicle runs over it, the assembly is forced into its iron base and the lens is wiped clean by the rubber, which acts like an eyelid. Shaw patented his invention in 1934 when he was only 23 and, thanks to the cat's eye, became a very rich man.

- 3 Read the two extracts from the recording script and explain the meaning of the phrases in your own words.

Suggested answers

Extract Two

sense of colour – a feeling for how colours work together magnum opus – major work (of art, here) no leanings towards – without any interest in

Extract Three

the perfect substitute – the ideal replacement serious setback – a problem that affects your ability to do something ubiquitous invention – an invention that is in use everywhere

Idiom spot

The idiom used in the recording was: turn a blind eye to.

Catch someone's eye means to be attractive or different enough to be noticed by people; there is a related compound adjective: eye-catching. (Catch someone's eye also means 'get someone's attention by looking at them'.)

Look someone in the eye/eyes means to look at someone in a direct way, without showing fear or shame.

Have an eye for means to be good at noticing a particular type of thing

See eye to eye (with) means that two people agree with each other.

Be in the public eye means to be famous and often featured in the media.

Possible answers

- a ... that pair of orange silk pyjamas hanging out of the school window.
- b ... the child's petty stealing of sweets from the shop counter: he needed to be taught what was right and wrong.
- c ... 'I'm afraid we're going to have to let you go.'
- d ... my younger sister, but her decision to quit college is her stupidest yet.
- e ... interesting accessories – I love those earrings.
- f ... behave responsibly and always tell the truth.

- 4 Look back at Exam folder 1 on pages 14–15 before doing this word formation task.

Background information

Georges Seurat was a highly innovative artist, responsible for the whole Pointillist movement. He was not really appreciated by the Parisian art establishment during his lifetime. His most famous painting is Un dimanche après-midi à l'île de la Grande Jatte (Sunday afternoon on the island of Grande Jatte), shown on page 59. This painting took three years to complete (1884–1886) and is now on permanent exhibition in the Art Institute of Chicago, USA. The painting was the subject of a successful musical by Stephen Sondheim, Sunday in the Park with George.

- 1 essence 2 Hitherto 3 unpredictable 4 intuitively
5 stability 6 incomparable 7 influential 8 interaction

Style extra

Using extended noun phrases is an effective way of varying the beginning of sentences. It would be particularly appropriate to use them in an article or review.

Possible answers

- a A highly-regarded and ground-breaking film-maker, Werner Herzog has now produced a film in 3D about some ancient cave paintings in France.
- b Best-known for their awe-inspiring poetry, Byron, Keats and Shelley formed part of the English Romantic movement in the early nineteenth century.
- c The most significant political thinker of his generation, James Harrington recognised the fundamental link between economic distribution and political power.
- d A leading innovator in her field of expertise, Amanda Wixted has developed some of the best-selling computer games of all time.

7.2 pages 60–61

Participles

- 1 a In the example, dazzling is an adjective; eyeballing is a participle.

b

- i The participle Driving is active and refers to Percy Shaw.
- ii The participle modelled is passive and refers to his invention (the cat's eye); the clause could be rewritten as a defining relative clause: His invention, which is modelled on the eye of a cat, ...

c

- i The cat is sitting on the roof.
- ii The person is sitting on the roof.

- 2 The two pictures show:

- Fort Vimieux (oil on canvas) painted by Joseph Mallord William Turner (1775–1851)
- an image taken by the Hubble Space Telescope of gas pillars in the Eagle Nebula, which is about 7,000 light years from Earth.

Possible answer

The painting by Turner is a spectacular interpretation of sunset and is indeed beautiful. The space image also has beauty and the gas clouds are almost flamboyant in their towering grandeur. There is something very awe-inspiring about this image.

- 3 Read the article quickly to be able to answer the question about art and beauty.

Suggested answer

In the nineteenth century and earlier, the artistic tradition was to paint the beauty of nature, but modern artists rarely represent nature on canvas, so their works are not usually described as 'beautiful'. The writer refers to Ruskin's views on art and beauty in connection with images from the Hubble Space Telescope, seeing them as contemporary examples of beauty derived from nature.

Reading into Writing: Exemplifying your ideas

- 1 The pictures show:

- a twee picture of a kitten
- a clichéd image of two people dressed as punks
- a hackneyed picture of the global business handshake

Possible answer

I find the kitten all in pink to be the most clichéd image. You see the same thing all the time in magazines and on cards. It's so posed too – when would a kitten sit like that of its own accord?

- 2 This Reading into Writing lesson focuses on how to include relevant examples of your own ideas in response to the points made in the two input texts in Paper 2 Part 1.

Suggested answer

The two texts are complementary in their ideas, both focusing on when and how original images become clichéd.

Suggested answer

The second text includes specific examples – squat greetings card, popular poster, radiant sunset over a tranquil sea – in order to support the argument and make the contrast between originality and cliché more understandable.

4

Reference to specific examples underlined:

'... such as those by Irving Penn and Diane Arbus among others'

'Take for instance the cliché-ridden use of visuals like the business handshake or the world as a globe'

Unit 8

8.1 pages 66–67

- 1 The pictures show the cities of:
- Sydney – the Opera House and harbour
 - Rome – a square with open-air restaurants
 - Delhi – a hectic street scene

Possible answer

Factors ranked 1–5:

- 1 effortless access to amenities
- 2 sufficient open spaces
- 3 diverse employment opportunities
- 4 low levels of pollution
- 5 spacious living accommodation

For me, the best thing about city living is the easy access to entertainment and culture – having a choice of concerts and galleries on your doorstep is a real plus, which makes up for possibly having to live in a small high-rise apartment.

Think about the advantages and disadvantages of city living as opposed to living in a small town or village. Use the five phrases to contrast these two lifestyles.

Possible answer

Obviously a big city has diverse employment opportunities, not to mention good access to many cultural amenities, such as an opera house, and plenty of nightlife. Cities often have historical buildings too. There is usually a lively atmosphere, with so many people. On the other hand, big cities are noisy and polluted, usually without many green areas for recreational use, and it often takes a long time to travel from one district to another. Smaller towns and villages have lower levels of pollution and can offer more spacious living accommodation, together with sufficient open spaces.

Reading

- 2 In Paper 1 Part 7 of the exam you will have to process a text or set of texts at speed to find specific information. Look back at the advice given in Exam folder 4 on pages 64–65 before you do the task here.

This text is taken from an academic journal article, and evaluates a particular approach to city architecture in the USA called the New Urbanism.

- 3 Underline the parts of the texts where you find the answers to 1–10 (see answers below).

Possible answer

- 1 B They give some priority to accessible public spaces, community institutions and a variety of parks and other green spaces, in order to foster exemplary civic behaviour.
- 2 A However, during the grim California recession of the 1990s, the original developer for this scheme went bankrupt and the entire project was taken over by a less sympathetic developer, who contravened virtually all of CNU's principles. Had Laguna West been completed as Calthorpe planned it, it would have been one of the great visionary new towns of the late 20th century.
- 3 D The US government-sponsored company Fannie Mae's research into housing preferences shows that up to 80% of US households would prefer to live in a single-family dwelling with a garden, regardless of income, race or current tenure status.
- 4 A As things have turned out, it is just another conventional, car-dependent suburb.
- 5 B They have a strong preference for 'infill' development – that is, the use of land within a built-up area, especially as part of a community redevelopment project – rather than the endless expansion of cities sometimes referred to as 'urban sprawl'.
- 6 E Most NU communities are being built on green field sites some distance away from the central city...
- 7 C The same idea of 'self-containment' was one of the principles behind the creation of the British new towns of the 1960s, such as Milton Keynes and Telford.

Possible answer

Sally is Meg's daughter and they currently live in Wales. Kevin works in London but is disenchanted with the rat race and plans to swap living accommodation with Meg and Sally temporarily.

It does sound very unusual. I suppose the success of the lifeplan will depend on how well the three of them get on – and on how well they look after each other's properties. It does give Kevin an escape from city living and gives Sally and Meg more flexibility. The downside is that they will all lack a permanent base and it might be difficult to make long-term plans.

Recording script 1B

Interviewer: OK, well there are three people sitting in the studio with me now – Sally, Meg and Kevin – who are about to embark on a rather unusual 'lifeplan' as they call it, something that will bring about a change of gear for all three of them. By way of introduction, we need to go through some recent history, and I'm going to start with you, Sally, because it's your discontent about where you're living now that has played a large part in all this. Sally, tell us where you and Meg call home at the moment.

Sally: It's a tiny village in the Welsh hills, which no one will have heard of. Last November we quit London and headed for the border. Mum and Dad decided to go their separate ways, you see – I think Mum took this literally, she wanted to get as far away as possible from Dad at the time.

Meg: It wasn't quite like that, but yes, the divorce had a lot to do with needing to get out of the city and start again.

Interviewer: So out of the blue you chose a remote Welsh village?

Meg: Not quite, I had good friends there ...

Sally: Who have since left.

Meg: Yes, but, well, anyway, as Sally will tell you, it hasn't quite worked out for her, though for me at the beginning, winding down was a godsend, it gave me the chance to rethink my life and decide on priorities.

Interviewer: Mm, so, Sally, why has it been less than perfect for you?

Sally: I'm 15 now and I left really good friends behind me, some I'd known my whole life. Plus, I've had to learn Welsh to even function at school and that's been hard. And as you can imagine, there isn't exactly a lot to do where we are – most people of my age just hang around the village green or go to each others' houses. It's not that great. Fortunately, I've been staying some weekends at my Dad's place – so I can meet up with some of my old friends, go to clubs, you know.

Interviewer: Mmm ... so the country idyll, not such good news for you, but for you, Meg, you're content with your life there?

Meg: Yes and no-o. I have to confess that once the honeymoon period was over (a rather unfortunate term in my case) well, you know after a while I woke up and realised that this wasn't right for me either. It's hard to pin down exactly why – I don't suffer from boredom, and I still get a rush out of the sheer beauty and calm that surrounds us, but I ... I feel that I'm missing out too, that I should be working, socialising more, going to exhibitions, all those things I used to take for granted, but which are totally out of the frame at the moment.

Interviewer: And that's where Kevin comes in ...

Kevin: One lucky break all round ...

Sally: Well, it's pretty flukey. Basically Mum and I sat down one night and agreed we had to get back somehow ... but we realised that there was no way we could expect to move back to London as easily as we'd left.

Meg: Selling the cottage wouldn't be easy, and nor would finding somewhere in our price range in London.

Sally: Mum had this real brainwave. She decided to look for anyone who might be interested in changing places, house swaps, that sort of thing.

Kevin: And thanks to the power of the Internet, they tracked me down.

Interviewer: And everything's fallen into place. But what's in it for you, Kevin? You've already told me you have a large flat in a very desirable part of London, a good job, ...

Kevin: What I've got is a nice flat I hardly ever see, a high-profile, high-stress job in share-dealing, no girlfriend, 'cos she dumped me a month ago, so life's not exactly a bed of roses. But I've been very successful and can afford to negotiate my future. Well, I want to get out for a while but not burn my boats completely, so Meg's proposal is perfect.

Interviewer: And how is this lifeplan going to unfold now?

Meg: In a nutshell, we've agreed to change places for three months initially, swapping everything – we leave the car, the furniture, the tins of soup in the kitchen ...

Kevin: Not the clothes though!

Meg: If we're all happy, then we'll extend to a year, which will give Sally and I a wonderful base in London and Kevin some peace and quiet to realise his dream.

Interviewer: Which is?

Kevin: I've got an idea for the next bestseller, a racy paperback on city slickers.

Interviewer: Ah, plenty of first-hand experience to draw on – sounds promising! And Sally, you'll get back your social life, but isn't it potentially disruptive, to your schooling and so on?

Sally: We're going to be moving at the start of a new school year, so there's a natural break anyway. And if things don't pan out, I can always move in with Dad.

Meg: But I think we're all quietly confident that it will work out.

Kevin: Yeah, 'cos it's what we all want deep down. And if I make it as a writer, well it might end up a permanent arrangement, you know, six months on, six off, the best of both worlds.

Interviewer: Well, they say the grass is always greener, but you seem to have things pretty much sorted out. Meg, Sally, Kevin, the very best of luck.

All: Thank you.

Background information

Key dates: African-American Civil Rights Movement

1955 Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on a public bus for a white passenger and was arrested. The ensuing protest made Martin Luther King a national figure.

1957 Nine African-American students won the legal right to attend Little Rock Central High School, but were harassed by white students all year. The local school system then closed public schools rather than continue to integrate.

1961 Freedom rides organised by activists on interstate buses travelling to the American South tested an earlier Supreme Court decision that had supposedly ended segregation on buses. By the end of summer, more than 300 freedom riders had been arrested in Jackson, Mississippi, held in tiny cells and beaten. Public sympathy and support for the freedom riders led President John F. Kennedy's administration to issue a new desegregation order.

1964 Almost 1,000 activists, most of them white college students, travelled to Mississippi to help register voters and teach in 'Freedom Schools'. Through this action, some 17,000 black people attempted to register to vote, though less than 10% succeeded. More than 80,000 African-Americans joined the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party at this time, to show their desire to vote. On 2 July, President Johnson signed the Civil Rights Act into US law.

- 3 If you have seen the film, make some notes in answer to questions 1–5.

Possible answers

- 1 Having been brought up in Georgia, Dakota Fanning would have been very familiar with the accents and dialect of the Deep South, as well as with the agricultural setting in which the events of the film take place. In the film, Lily 'comes of age' – that is, she begins her journey from childhood to adulthood – leaving home and experiencing her first love. As a 'real' fourteen-year-old, Dakota Fanning embodies that transitory period between childhood and adulthood.
- 2 In the film, Rosaleen does not appear to be much older than Lily. We see how differently the young black woman and the young white woman are treated by society, even though they are both victims of abuse. When Rosaleen and Lily escape, it is Lily who is in charge and this is credible, given their proximity in age in the film. As a younger woman, it also seems natural for Rosaleen to take May's place in the Pink House after May's death. It would have seemed less plausible for an older woman to have been accepted so easily by May's older sisters.
- 3 The bee theme provides a narrative framework for the story. It is auspicious that Lily is visited by bees at the beginning of the film and that her father does not see them. When she conquers her fear of them and keeps one as a pet in her father's house, we know that bees will be important symbolically for her in her story. It is the honey label that she finds in her mother's possessions which leads Lily to Tiburon and ultimately to the Pink House. While she is there, August teaches Lily how to care for the bees and this is a metaphor for the nurturing which Lily has lacked since her mother's death. The community of industrious bees is a reflection of the ordered and successful community in which the sisters live.

- 4 August is the most maternal of the three sisters, and in addition to being the bee-keeper, she makes all the big decisions in the household, such as deciding that Rosaleen and Lily can stay for a while, even though June is suspicious. June is more 'cold' than August – she is wary of the unexpected visitors and nervous of committing to marriage with her long-term boyfriend – although she can express herself more freely through her music. May is the most emotional and sensitive of the three. She is very prone to tears and extreme feelings, due in large part to the death of her twin sister, April, during childhood. Eventually, she feels unable to continue bearing the weight of the world on her shoulders.
- 5 Objects in the Pink House look as though they have come directly from 1964, even down to the smallest piece of kitchen equipment. The same is true of the clothing – whether it is the immaculately-turned-out attire that the three sisters and their friends wear, or the shabby clothes in which Rosaleen and Lily arrive. In Tiburon, the cars, the shops and the movie theater all look convincingly like they belong in the early 1960s.

Speaking

1 The photos show:

- a female Goth
- a man in overalls and a hard hat
- a woman in a sari
- a man in a business suit
- three UN peacekeepers

Possible answer

These people are in clothes which identify them as part of a certain group. The girl in black wants to be accepted by Goths. The man wears his overalls to protect his clothing from damage and also possibly to protect himself from being injured by machinery. The woman in a sari wishes to conform to Indian traditions. The man in a business suit is presumably expected to conform to office policy. The UN peacekeepers wear their uniforms so that they are easily identified by members of the public.

Possible answer

I would wear whatever I fancied to a classical concert. I don't think people bother too much about formality these days.
For a rock festival I would wear comfortable clothes – jeans and a T-shirt.
On a long-distance plane trip I would wear a tracksuit as you really need to be as comfortable as possible on a plane.
On a first date it's really difficult. Perhaps something that reflects what your date was wearing when you first met? At a club, definitely not jeans. Possibly chinos and trainers. Ties are out generally – you get so hot in clubs.
At a job interview, a very smart suit, absolutely. Polished shoes, new haircut and briefcase.
I'd wear a hat and something stylish to a wedding. A summer dress or a good suit.
To the gym, I'd wear my trainers, shorts and a T-shirt.

Speaker 1

When I left school, I was taken on by an environmental charity. I turned up in a suit, but instead of being stuck behind a desk, I was out on the streets, fundraising. My boss at that time was a bit of a rebel. She had quite a funky hairdo and tended to wear ethnic stuff she'd picked up on her travels. I guess she came across as something of a hippie. We got on really well and I thought I'd opt for the same kind of outfits – I can't remember anyone saying anything to make me do that but, to be honest, I think the others at work saw me more as one of them. But I do remember my mother not recognising me when she saw me in the street!

Speaker 2

I play in a metal band called Zandroid. I have a dragon tattoo on my face and wear a leather jacket with a dragon on it. It does mean that people can spot me immediately and I'm constantly getting asked for autographs when I'm out which is great! It makes me feel loved by the fans I guess! I had the tattoo done properly by this guy who I really respect and it wasn't cheap, I can tell you. It was funny how my look came about – I was on the train to a music festival and I picked up one of those free papers. There was a whole thing about dragons in it. I was hooked on the idea in a flash.

Speaker 3

The dress code at my school is fairly formal so I have to wear smart clothes, but I go for tops and trousers rather than suits and high heels. I wouldn't want to raise too many eyebrows among the other staff members so no jeans. Not that the school is super posh or anything, but very casual clothes wouldn't go down too well. What I wear is great really because I have to spend quite a bit of time delving into cupboards. I tend to go for high-end clothes which aren't skin tight – ones that move with me. And they should last – if they were cheap, they'd soon come apart.

Speaker 4

When I left university, I had long hair and wore old jeans. Job interviews were coming up and I didn't want to get up any interviewer's nose and lose out on a good job. There was this job advertised which seemed perfect as a designer at this factory making cars, so I got myself a suit and tie and landed the job. I realised later that I'd got hold of the wrong end of the stick as no one was the least bit bothered, but there you go, better safe than sorry. Anyway, one thing

I've found is that suits are good as there's only a minimum outlay and now we have dress-down Friday I can still wear my jeans then.

Speaker 5

I'm Indian, but I live in the US, doing research in a university. For years, I've worn western clothes, mainly skirts and blouses. I'd always steered clear of the sari as it seemed to me to be not quite right for the workplace, although some other colleagues wear them. Something changed for me last year when I went back to India to see my relatives. The women in saris looked so elegant and I realised that the only person who was stopping me wear one was myself. Now, when I put on my sari, I feel pride in my heritage and realise that what I wear is not going to come between me and promotion or being accepted by others.

4 The woman is talking about the uniform she had to wear when she was at school and how she felt about it.

Suggested answer

The uniform was bottle green for the girls with a shirt and tie. The rules were very strict. The English teacher was inspirational and wore interesting clothes.

Recording script 1/15

Woman: What do I remember about being at school? Well, it was some time ago now – in the 1990s in fact. I was at a posh private school. I do remember the uniform – it was bottle green, rather dingy, and all the girls had to wear a shirt and tie, which was a pain, I can tell you. The uniform was really uncomfortable and I often felt self-conscious, especially when I was walking down the street. The girls' skirts had to be the right length. If one of the teachers thought you were wearing a skirt which was too short, then they'd make you kneel down and measure the length from the hem of the skirt to your knees. You had to go home and change if it was too short. Some teachers were worse than others of course. I remember my English teacher, in particular. She used to wear the most amazing clothes – red swirly skirts and purple and silver shoes. She had blonde hair tied back in a ponytail and large glasses with a range of different coloured frames, over which she could peer. I guess she brought a bit of colour into our lives. I thought she was undervalued though by the rest of the staff. I guess they thought she was a bit flashy. She really inspired me though. She gave us a book list once and said: 'Read these.' The books were brilliant, not fuddy-duddy at all. I used to go to the library every Saturday and hunt them out.

Possible answer

I didn't have to wear a uniform at school, but I suppose wearing jeans and a T-shirt was some sort of uniform. Many of the girls wore dresses but I never did. We only had school in the morning – we started at 7.00 and finished at 1.00 because in the afternoon it got too hot for class. I remember going home and spending about an hour doing homework and then going to the swimming pool to meet my friends. Once a week I had dance class and also my piano lessons.

Vocabulary: Prefixes

- a refers to person talking – conscious of themselves
- b wrongly heard
- c going against something, not productive
- d for something, in favour
- e too much of something
- f under/below
- g more than – here it is more than human
- h against something
- i before – arranged before

- k less – the idea that something isn't given its true worth

- 6 It is important to know how prefixes are used, although you will never be asked to form a word in the Reading and Use of English paper which has a hyphen. Take care, as dictionaries often do not agree on the use of hyphens. Use the prefixes you looked at in exercise 5 to complete this exercise.

a self-contained b sub-tropical c has outlived d underestimate e misunderstanding f pre-packed g super-concentrated h anti-lock i overhear j counter-argument k pro-American

Possible answer

I think clothes aren't as important as personality. Clothing is important but not to the extent that you wouldn't be friends with someone who was, in your eyes, badly dressed. I think that people in the public eye should take more care with what they wear than ordinary people and that also applies to people who work in certain environments such as an office.

Reading into Writing: Linking

Speaking

- 1 The photos are of:
- a boy with a pierced lip
 - a makeover – when someone is either digitally enhanced or make-up/cosmetic surgery/botox is used to make someone look younger

Possible answers

I don't think it is important to look attractive, although society nowadays seems to think it is. An attractive face means having symmetrical features and good skin. I think cosmetic surgery is slightly weird unless it is done for really good reasons, like someone who has a cleft palate. Any facial piercing is dangerous in my opinion. Make-up is fine as long as it isn't too heavy and wigs are also acceptable.

A politician should get a vote because of his or her policies not his or her looks.

I would describe myself as fairly tidy and tending towards the casual when it comes to dress. I would never look scruffy or unkempt.

In Text 1 the points made are:

- people are unconsciously attracted by the way a candidate looks
- people believe that looks equate with trustworthiness, intelligence, likeability and ability.

In Text 2 the points made are:

- it may be necessary to stop people using modern technology to make people look better in photos than they are
- the tendency to make people look better is something that has always happened.

3

1 B 2 A 3 C 4 B 5 A

- 4 Refer to the Phrase spot. Use suitable phrases from here to link your sentences effectively. This exercise will also give you practice in giving your own opinion.

Possible answer

First of all, I believe that the use of modern technology to make politicians more attractive is just another way that politicians can bribe the public into voting for them. It does not seem sufficient for people in politics to have suitable policies to attract the voters; they additionally need to use psychological methods. However, I do think that the majority of people are able to see through these tricks and are able to come to their decisions independently. Moreover, it is highly unlikely that someone will vote for a 'pretty boy' or 'proto-Barbie doll' if they don't have a strategy for improving the economy or creating more jobs. To my mind, it would be incredible if the general public were that credulous.

Personally, I believe that today people are much more aware of the use of digital enhancement than in the past. Consequently, people nowadays are more likely to take any picture of their favourite star of stage or screen looking amazingly thin or curvy, with a pinch of salt. Then again, we have actually been enhancing people's looks for longer than the advent of digital airbrushing. After all, didn't Henry VIII of England receive a painting of Anne of Cleves, only to find that, disappointingly, it bore little resemblance to the real woman? Portrait painters in the past knew that it was part of their job to make people look a bit better than they actually were and I believe that everyone was aware of this. (248 words)

Paper 1 Part 6 Gapped text

This type of reading comprehension requires the reader to understand what is happening both in terms of content and also in terms of reference. Sometimes the links between the paragraphs are not obvious and it will require some skill to sort them out. Read the base text first and then the gapped paragraphs. Think about the scenario, i.e. what the passage is about. Are there any references, e.g. it/she/they or moreover/secondly/however which might give a clue?

This text on lying has some clues to help you with the first few questions.

1 E 2 B 3 F 4 A this sort of background (i.e. university qualifications) – a smooth-talking lawyer and consummate liar – lying in corporate culture 5 C body language – visual clues – shifty eyes 6 H more reliable than body movements 7 D doesn't take too much mental planning ... make up a story about something they know well

Unit 10

Speaking

1

The languages (from left to right) are: Chinese, Hungarian, Bulgarian, Greek, Polish, Turkish. There are about 6,000 languages in the world. A language dies about every two weeks. The language spoken more than any other is Chinese.

Possible answer

I think my language, Portuguese, is definitely worth learning. It really helps you to understand your own language if you learn another one. Also Portuguese is a beautiful language and is spoken in Brazil as well as Portugal.

Reading

2 Scan the text to find the answers to the questions.

- a It is a pun (play on words). A 'death sentence' is the words used by a judge to condemn someone to death. The use of the word 'sentence', which is connected with language, also relates to the topic of the article, the death of languages.
- b He seems ambivalent/undecided. (Or so they think.)

3 Ignore the words in italics when you read through the article at this stage.

4 Reference devices are often tested in the Reading and Use of English paper.

- a the death of a language b Kasabe c the 6,000 languages d the fact that half are going to die out
- e languages f language death g language death h what we learn from a language i some people

5 These questions test understanding of points in the text.

- a made an impact / been considered a matter of some importance
- b People start out by being forced to speak the majority language. Then there is a period when both languages are spoken and finally the old language is totally forgotten and the majority language takes over.
- c You need to have a wide range of species of animals for a healthy environment. The same is true of different cultures.
- d If you lose a language you lose more than just a method of communication.
- e medical treatments, early civilisations, new ideas about language itself
- f One language is not enough to hold all human/world knowledge.

6 The cartoon is someone asking in Esperanto if the shop accepts credit cards.

Possible answer

I think Esperanto never became popular because it was based on European languages. It is quite an easy language to learn, but only if you already speak a romance language. People from Japan, for example, would have as much difficulty with it as they do with German or Spanish. My language, Hungarian, could never be a world language because so few people speak it.

Background information

Esperanto is the best known of the world's auxiliary languages and was invented by Ludwig Zamenhof in 1887. It was designed to overcome problems of international communication. Newspapers and journals are published in Esperanto, together with the Bible and the Koran. It is also taught as a school subject in many countries.

7 This text is taken from an encyclopaedia. It is written in an impersonal and informative style.

- 1 D is correct. A is used for a piece of guesswork; B is for a person who you only know slightly; C is also used with between but in the sense of two things having something in common.
- 2 D is correct. A, B and C all have the idea of come from. An idea can stem from or spring from. A declaration is issued.
- 3 A is correct. B takes the preposition from and C and D don't collocate with the idea of language.
- 4 A is correct. Only A takes the word on in this context.
- 5 D is correct as it collocates with rely on.
- 6 C is correct. Once here has the meaning of when.
- 7 B is correct. A language may expand, feet swell when they are hot, you can enlarge a photograph and increase is a general word which can't be used here.
- 8 A is correct as it takes the preposition from.

If only and I wish have more or less the same meaning. Some people believe If only is slightly stronger / more formal in tone.

Possible answers

For my family, there is nothing more I could wish for – we are all quite happy as we are. However, for my studies, I wish I could concentrate in class more and also that I had a photographic memory. I wish my country had a better public transport system and also that everyone went to a state school and we had a fully socialist system. I wish the world were a happier place and that poverty had been eradicated, along with wars and disasters.

Would rather, It's time, etc.

5 It's about time and It's high time are slightly stronger than It's time. Note that I'd rather is never used with prefer as in I'd rather prefer.

- a to go b you went c spend d left / had left e had given f he did g she took 6 The sentence transformations practise the structures reviewed in this unit.

- 1 you stood up for your rights / for yourself

Listening and Speaking

- The photos are of:
 - McDonald's in Marrakech
 - a Mongolian yurt with satellite dish
 - someone skydiving
- The photos are supposed to reinforce the idea that things are global and that everyone nowadays sees/eats/enjoys similar things.

Possible answer

I think the term 'global village' is very depressing in many ways. It would be better to highlight differences between people rather than to make everyone the same, with the same interests, culture and so on.

I think that globalisation permeates all aspects of life in my country, from food to clothes to films. This is accelerating at an alarming rate, due, I believe, to the influence of the Internet.

Global culture is making inroads into the generation gap. Old people are often the very people who are checking for the best deals on their car insurance on the Internet or booking their holidays with budget airlines online. They don't, perhaps, feel so much in need of a Smartphone as younger people though.

Extract One

F: There is much heated debate about the true effects of globalisation and if it is really such a good thing. Good or bad though, there isn't much debate about whether it's happening or not. Today we have Steven Bright, MP, in the studio. Mr Bright, what exactly are your objections to globalisation?

M: Well, on the one hand, there's greater access to foreign culture now which can't be bad, but then again some people think that we've ended up as one big superculture. And then there's that awful word, 'outsourcing', which can be detrimental to the economy, but not always. Fundamentally, however, I believe that countries are becoming too dependent on each other to thrive. Governments are becoming less influential in the face of an increasingly market-driven world.

F: But, surely, helping developing countries to succeed by giving them loans is a good thing, isn't it?

M: You'd think so, wouldn't you? It may look that way on the face of it, but actually if you get a large organisation handing out money, it is usually with strings attached and those strings often want a particular path to be followed. A solution to, for example, an African problem is often thought up in New York or London. It can be disastrous.

Extract Two

F: I've spent the last twenty years researching into how being bilingual sharpens the mind, but I didn't set out to find out whether bilingualism was good or bad. I did my doctorate in psychology, on how children acquire language. When I finished, there was a job shortage in the US. The only position I could find was with a research project studying second language acquisition in schoolchildren. It wasn't my area but it was close enough. As a psychologist, I brought neuroscience to the study, like 'How does the acquisition of a second language change thought?' It was these types of questions that led me to the bilingualism research. The way research works is, it takes you down a road. You then follow that road.

One interesting thing is that bilingualism helps with multitasking. It was something I'd always had a sneaking suspicion about, but as a result of one experiment, there's now no question. Now, I don't advise anyone to try this at home but we put monolinguals and bilinguals into a driving simulator. Through headphones, we gave them extra tasks to do – as if they were driving and talking on their cellphones. We then measured how much worse their driving got. Everyone's driving got worse, but with the bilinguals, their driving wasn't quite so bad. This is because the bilingual brain has had more practice at multitasking.

Extract Three

Bob: One summer my sister Elena talked me into spending ten weeks learning Chinese with her. I have to say I hadn't covered myself with glory during my previous forays into language learning at school, so I wasn't exactly chomping at the bit to go through it all again, especially with a language which is widely seen as difficult. But Elena convinced me to give it a go and, as she'd previously studied Spanish very successfully, she had quite a few language learning techniques I'd never thought of up her sleeve.

Of course we did the assigned homework, but we didn't spend any extra time quizzing each other on grammar points or vocabulary, which you may think was a bit rash. Instead, we used post-it notes to put a Chinese label on everything in our house we could think of.

The fridge, the bookshelves, the walls, the cooker, the doors, nothing escaped a post-it note naming the object in question in Chinese. Then, whenever we could, we'd make lame observations in Chinese. 'The chair's brown; I don't want to be old; Where's my favourite pencil?' You might laugh, but that really worked. We also rented as many Chinese movies with English subtitles as we could. Ten weeks later we finished the course and we got 'A's. I enjoyed it so much I decided to do Chinese at university.

Part 2 Article

1 a Google b Coca-Cola c Apple iPod® d BMW

- 2 Remember to include a title when you write an article.

The best title is c.
Title a doesn't reflect the argument expressed; b is uninformative; c is catchy and in the spirit of the article.

- 3 Look back at Unit 10 for useful vocabulary. The sample answer in exercise 7 includes further ideas on globalisation.
4 Try to use some of these expressions in your writing, as they offer further ways of linking and reinforcing ideas. However, it would be inappropriate to use them in an essay, due to their journalistic style. They are best used in articles, reviews and letters (to newspapers).

a end b all c come d cold/clear e all

- 5 Rhetorical questions are appropriate to both articles and essays (they were used in the essay on art in Units 5–8 Revision on page 75).

Possible answers

- a Don't American products impose a way of life on us that many regard as alien at the end of the day?
b All things considered, mightn't globalisation bring more equality to the world?
c When you come to think of it, isn't it rather depressing to find a McDonald's in every town?
All in all, is it so disastrous that everyone can link up to the Internet?
In the cold light of day, won't these transnational companies bring much-needed investment to poorer countries?
Do we all want to wear the same branded clothes, in the final analysis?

Sample 'balancing' paragraph

Although, when you come to think of it, isn't it rather depressing to find a McDonald's in every town? The 'invasion' of global fast food chains sometimes creates problems at the local level too, driving down the takings in established cafés and even forcing closure. That can't be good news for the community at large.

- 7 When you write your article, follow the advice given in the Exam advice on page 91.

Sample answer

Are we living in one big, happy global village? Or are we currently witnessing, as one journalist so neatly put it, 'global pillage'? Globalisation is a complex issue, but one thing is certain: it is irreversible. Many transnational corporations are now more powerful than national governments; they will not give up their dominance, as too much is at stake economically.
Yet at the same time, the decline of the centralised nation-state is allowing more independence at local level. Regions (which were often countries in their own right formerly) are re-asserting themselves, from Scotland and Wales to Catalunya. Far from mourning the loss of tradition, these parts of the world are strengthening their cultural identities. Take the speaking of Catalan in north-east Spain, for example. Banned for decades, it has resurfaced stronger than ever in the last 25 years, and is now the medium of instruction in schools, the language of local government and often of business too.
However, in the cold light of day, it cannot be denied that global pillage is going on. Doesn't every town boast a McDonald's? Isn't everyone dressed in Nike trainers and Tommy Hilfiger sweatshirts? Companies such as these have made huge profits from our desire to conform. Nevertheless, if people want to make those choices, that is their decision.

My own reaction to globalisation is to take it with a pinch of salt. I do not see any evidence of regional differences dying out and, as I have argued above, the opposite is actually true. There are many positive aspects to the new world order. Not least of these is the Internet, which has revolutionised communication and encourages a political openness that may serve to prevent world war rather than instigate it. All in all, we have much to look forward to in the 21st century, if we concentrate on dealing with the real threat to our individual survival: environmental change. (319 words)

Speaking

Possible answer

The couple on the left look as though they've been together for decades! They seem to have a good relationship, and are very close, whereas the couple on the right are clearly going through some sort of communication breakdown. I think you need to respect your partner and be willing to support them whenever necessary. There will be good times and bad, after all. The external factors that can impinge on a relationship are many: stress at work, lack of money, poor living conditions, or other family members' influence.

- 2 Think about the seven attributes in turn and decide which one is the most important in a relationship.

Possible answer

What counts above all in a relationship is the ability to compromise – both partners need to show some give and take, because otherwise there will inevitably be friction in the relationship and unpleasant arguments.

Listening

- 3 The Paper 3 Part 3 multiple-choice task requires careful listening 'between the lines' for inferred meaning, so spend some time working through this one – it is the first full-length Part 3 task in the course. Play the recording twice, as in the exam. The underlined parts of the recording script confirm the answers.

Recording script 1 17

Interviewer: Last week, Steve came into the studio to prove to us that life still has some happy endings. Here's his story ... So, Steve, your relationship with Abby has been through some ups and downs but is definitely on a high now?

Steve: That's right, and we're finally tying the knot next month. Just over five years ago, I met this bubbly little lady – Abby. We went out, shared some laughs, and pretty soon, I knew she was the one for me.

Interviewer: And was it love at first sight for her too?

Steve: She was happy enough to spend lots of time with me, but treated me more like a big brother, if anything – she even told me about another guy she was hoping to get together with. At which point, realising I would get nowhere romantically, I decided I'd better cast my net elsewhere. I met a nice girl called Samantha, very down-to-earth – the opposite of Abby – and we started seeing each other once in a while. We had well-paid jobs and money to burn. After a good holiday in Spain, we decided to move in together. I think we both understood that it wasn't true love, but we rubbed along fairly well. Unfortunately, quite soon after that, Abby made up her mind that I was Mr Right after all, and made this very plain to me, though not to Samantha.

Interviewer: How did you take this bolt from the blue?

Steve: It was baffling. I actually wondered whether she was joking, she used to do that, but I knew deep down she wouldn't pull that trick any more. I rationalised it as her whipping up a fleeting fantasy – she had time on her hands, as she'd been fired from her job and was on her own a lot – her then current boyfriend worked long hours.

Interviewer: And there were displays of obvious jealousy, weren't there?

Steve: Yeah, we'd be at the same pubs and there would be anguished looks from Abby across the room, deep sighs if she was ever standing next to me at the bar, that sort of thing – I misread the situation for ages – she's always had a streak of theatricality.

Interviewer: What was your reaction once you realised it was genuine?

Steve: Well, it dawned on me that I was calling the tune now; if I wanted it, Abby and I would have a life together – otherwise, things would stay the same. It wasn't straightforward, there was Samantha to consider. She'd always been very supportive and loyal. For a while, I couldn't decide what to do. To fend off the problem, I threw myself into my job.

Interviewer: And did colleagues at work pick up on anything different about you?

Steve: Very much so – I'd never been that keen and efficient before! Although my daily routine was much the same, I was glad to get to work, because it distracted me – but I made sure I kept my private life out of our usual conversations. As time went on, there was growing pressure on me to do something – for all I knew, Abby might give up in disgust.

Interviewer: Then, one summer's day ...

Steve: Yes, one beautiful morning last June, I couldn't keep up the pretence any longer. I sat Samantha down at the kitchen table and blurted everything out. She was terrific, far from holding back tears, she didn't even seem mildly phased by the revelation that I'd been carrying a torch for someone else and it was over. Just rolled up her sleeves and started sorting out my life for me: phoned my office to say that I was at death's door and wouldn't be coming in, then told me to get round to Abby's place pronto, preferably with a big bunch of flowers – she let me buy those myself.

Interviewer: And so Samantha walked out of your life and Abby walked in.

Steve: Yeah. Abby and I rented a cottage out in the country. Last summer was idyllic, and, well, it matched our mood. We got to know each other properly, spent every evening gazing into each other's eyes at sunset and ... well, I'm sure you can picture the rest.

Interviewer: Absolute rapture, straight out of True Romance ... how wonderfully slushy! So when did you finally pop the question, Steve?

Steve: I was at a big family wedding, one of my cousins, and Abby hadn't come, I think she had flu. Anyway everything seemed to fall into place at that event. I managed to sit down with my mother and talk about Abby – Mum'd been giving me the cold shoulder, as she'd really liked Samantha and, social norms being what they are, had seen her as a prospective daughter-in-law. Anyway, she came round after our heart-to-heart and I went off to offer a lift to my cousin's old schoolfriend, who lives in the States – I hadn't seen him for five years. Well, he looked me between the eyes and said, 'You've always loved Abby, so how come you're not married yet – get a grip, Steve.' So I did, leapt in the car without him, drove back and proposed. It's funny though, it had taken someone at one stage removed from my life to state the obvious.

Interviewer: Well, Steve, I wish you and Abby every happiness – you certainly deserve it.

Steve: Thank you.

4

Possible answer

It's got as good a chance as any marriage. At least Abby knows what she really wants now, and Steve seems pretty keen.

5

Steve means that Abby sometimes likes to behave in a dramatic way.

Gradability

1 The picture shows a girl using a social networking site.

Possible answer

Facebook is great. I couldn't plan my social life without it and it means I can keep in touch with people I don't get to see very often. I guess there are disadvantages to do with privacy and security, but it doesn't actually worry me that much.

3 Refer to the Grammar folder on page 184 if necessary.

You cannot say 'completely affectionate', as 'affectionate' is a gradable adjective; conversely, 'devastating' is an ungradable adjective, so you cannot say 'extremely devastating'.
The adverbs deeply, fairly, immensely, rather, very go with A (gradable adjectives) and the adverbs absolutely, entirely, utterly go with B (ungradable adjectives). The three adverbs that can go with both are pretty, quite, really but there are register restrictions.

The first use is ungradable – nationality is an absolute. In the second use, the degree adverb very can be used – here, the adjective is gradable, as 'Britishness' exists on a scale from mild to very strong, or stereotypical.

Second example: having no meaning or value

Reading into Writing: Reformulation 2

- 1 The pictures show members of a street gang on a housing estate and team bonding at a business meeting.

Possible answers

People conform in society by wearing similar clothes, having similar tastes in entertainment and leisure activities and by behaving in the same way. Being part of a group offers security and the feeling of belonging, rather than being an outsider. People may join a sports club to play sport, but they often want to make new friendships too. Being accepted into a gang is also a form of conformism.

- 2 There is overlap in the discussion of belonging to a group, but the contexts are very different.
- 3 Statements 1 and 3 reflect ideas in the first text.
- 4 As said earlier in the course, it is extremely important that you use your own words in Paper 2 Part 1 as you will lose marks if you copy the wording of the texts.

Suggested answers

- a people's biased attitudes and failings
b there is a trend of extreme behaviour c members are inclined to inflate the group's worth / regard the group as better than it is d the belief that the group is invincible e a rigidity in outlook
f a desire for homogeneity
g the suppression of individual views h any opposition is firmly dealt with
- 5 The answer has a strong introduction that puts the topic into context and includes own language. The remaining paragraphs concentrate on the second text – the first text is only summarised briefly and there is no evaluation of it. In the rewriting, most phrases can be used from exercise 4; 'disregarding' can be replaced by 'ignoring'.

- 2 Play the extract for Speaker 1 twice. Underline the information containing the answers and look for where the distraction is occurring.

Answers and Recording script 1 18

You are going to hear Speaker One. Look at both Task One and Task Two and decide which answers are true for the first speaker. You will hear the recording twice.

Speaker 1

I was at a twenty-first birthday 'do'. I'd just broken up with a beautiful girl who I'd been head over heels in love with and my loyal friends thought it was time to find me someone else. I'm quite shy but I was instantly taken with this girl they introduced me to, called Sarah. She struck me as really fun and sparkling, ready to chat to anyone, even me! Anyway, we were married a year later. She's a wonderful person – she must be to have stayed married to me all these years! She's been there through thick and thin, and I can tell you there have been times when money's been extremely tight.

Speaker 2

I'm a bit of a workaholic and so actually finding someone to have a relationship with was always tricky. I'm at the top of my game, head of a large fashion house, and I've found that men find me a bit intimidating because I'm so determined to succeed. I guess that's why I've always liked older men – they're usually less insecure. My partner is great, so shrewd about people, much better than me, although when I first met him, even though he was as stylish as everyone around me, it was his intellect that drew me to him. I like to think we're really well matched.

Speaker 3

I'm a writer and I'd lived alone for years. Anyway, I went to a friend's party and there was this woman there surrounded by admiring men – someone told me they thought she was 'gorgeous' but I didn't think she was my type. Anyway, when I did get to talk to her we got on like a house on fire. She just seemed to be so full of stamina, so dynamic. We married six weeks later – a whirlwind romance! Anyway, we've had our ups and downs obviously over the years but it's her warm personality that keeps me close. We do have rows, mainly about money, and I get very impatient with her, but we always soon make up.

Speaker 4

I started online dating when I moved to London. I didn't know anyone so I was determined to give it a go, and it was cheap! That's how I met my husband. We're kindred spirits really and I really like the fact that he's such a perfectionist – everything has to be just right – I guess I am too really. Some people say it would drive them mad but not me. Of course, I didn't notice that about him when we first met. Most people see the handsome face first but it was his attitude to people that attracted me. He was so broadminded and really opened my eyes to the problems some people have in society.

Speaker 5

I went on quite a few dates when I first moved to New York. My workmates fixed me up with people. One was this model with not a hair out of place who looked terrific, but was extremely dull. Not long after her, I met this wonderful girl on a plane to Tokyo. She wasn't conventionally pretty, I guess, but she just managed to see the funny side of everything. We got married soon after and we're still in love. What I love about her is that she's happy to spend ages reading to our kids and, not only that, she can find time to sit and chat to my elderly parents and that's not easy as my mother's beginning to forget things.

Unit 12

12.1 pages 100–101

- 1 The three questions are typical ways in which an examiner might ask you to extend topic discussion with the other candidate after the individual long turns in Paper 4 Part 3.

Possible answers

Ordinary people have greater life expectancy due to improvements in medicine. DNA analysis has led to better crime detection and conviction of criminals.

This area of genetics and biotechnology is bound to give rise to new discoveries, as further work is done on the human genome.

Multinational companies are very powerful and the attempt to introduce GM (genetically modified) food illustrates that government ministers need to keep a close eye on what they are doing. Current legislation and governmental controls may be inadequate.

Reading

- 2 The photo shows the minuscule guitar from Cornell University that is referred to in the opening sentence of the text.

Suggested answer

The writer has tried to simplify the difficult subject matter by referring to things from the real world – parts of cells are likened to scissors, motors, pipes and so on, and the DNA helix is compared to a ladder. Atoms and molecules become busy commuters, rushing around the body. The A, T, C, G base pairings in DNA are 'just a string of four-letter words' (almost certainly included to raise a laugh from the reader, as 'four-letter words' is a common euphemism for swear words, and is rather appropriate to a discussion of life as these tend to refer to the sexual organs and the act of reproduction!).

- 3 You must spend enough time reading the text and missing paragraphs, in order to work out the links involved. In the exam, underline key phrases in both as you read.

The parts of the text which link to the underlined phrases in paragraphs A–H are given alongside the answers below. Notice that there isn't always a link both before and after a gap.

- 1 D before gap: tweezers, scissors, etc.;
after gap: collectively
- 2 H after gap: urban environment, commuting
- 3 A before gap: no overseer supervises their activities;
after gap: nowadays, convincing explanation
- 4 F before gap: they say
- 5 C before gap: more than the sum of its parts, the job of explaining life;
after gap: with the discovery of DNA, early 1950s
- 6 G before gap: handrails, rungs
after gap: A, T, C, G
- 7 B before gap: slot together snugly, complementary projecting arms;
after gap: this is guaranteed to be identical to the original

Interlocutor: Now, in this part of the test you're each going to talk on your own for about two minutes. You need to listen while your partner is speaking because you'll be asked to comment afterwards.

So Jana, I'm going to give you a card with a question written on it and I'd like you to tell us what you think. There are also some ideas on the card for you to use if you like.

All right? Here is your card.

Jana: Well, I don't have a scientific background, but I think science is something that affects us all nowadays. You can't afford to ignore what's going on in advanced science. There's a lot of media interest right now in the latest developments in, say, genetics and DNA profiling.

Er, I do think it's worrying how genetic testing can be used, actually. For example, if you have a genetic disorder of some kind, you may not be able to take out life insurance ... or get a job even. But then, on the other hand, DNA analysis is helping to solve crimes, and that's good for society, so it's good and bad, I suppose. The main problem centres around information. Most people don't know the facts and so naturally they're worried. So what is needed is more information in simple language for ordinary people to understand – and perhaps this needs to come from the government. Because I think the biggest worry of all is that the whole area of genetics is being driven by the business world. Much of the research going on today is backed by big companies – drugs co..., pharma... pharmaceutical companies and so on – and they're going to want something back from their investment. Which means that the research is not being done just as research, it's not pure, not independent. ... I think too, that they're not controlling this research.

The public needs to be properly informed. There are potential benefits, yes, but we must be told what's happening and why. You know, things are being pushed ahead at such an alarming rate and ... mm, I don't know, it seems to me, it's maybe not always going to be helpful for society.

Interlocutor: Thank you. Erik, what is your view on current career opportunities in science?

Erik: I'm actually in the final year of a biology degree so I can comment on that personally. We're always being told by our lecturers that more progress will be made in biology in the next five to ten years than has occurred in the last fifty. It's a fast-moving field. As Jana said, there are many new companies ... biotech companies springing up, so yes, job prospects are good for someone like me, I think, plenty of different directions to go in. So it's not all doom and gloom, far from it.

Interlocutor: What do you think, Jana?

Jana: Well, Erik is speaking from experience! It's good to hear his positive take on things.

Interlocutor: Thank you.

Part 2 Report

- 1 The work you have done on passive structures in Unit 12 can now be used in your writing. Notice how passives are used in the report.

Improved answer with sub-headings and bullets

This report summarises the current career opportunities for science graduates, drawing largely on the experiences of past and present students. Many final-year students have already been invited to interviews and some have even been offered jobs, conditional on graduation.

A broad scope of employment

The first point to stress is that interesting opportunities exist outside the specialist scientific fields. This is dealt with in the final section of the report.

Academic research

Returning to pure science, it has been estimated that there will be over a thousand post-graduate posts available for the next academic year, countrywide. Students should consult their tutor for advice in the first instance.

High-achievers should contemplate applying for scholarships to the U.S.A., where so much research is at the cutting edge. Students wishing to follow up on specific research possibilities in the States are advised to consult Professor Grimbleton.

Exciting new opportunities

The fast-moving developments in biotechnology and genetics look set to provide good job opportunities, as many companies are being expanded in their bids to become market leader. Four local companies have specifically requested graduate trainees from this college. They are:

- Bio-futures
- Genotech
- PJF Seed Research
- Railton Systems.

Application forms can be obtained from the Administration Secretary.

Education as a career

Several past students have opted for jobs in teaching and it is recommended that anyone considering such a career should attend the information day planned by this department. At this event, it will not only be possible to meet Head Teachers and Science Coordinators from schools in the region, but also former college students who are now qualified and practising teachers.

A more unconventional path

As indicated above, any report on current opportunities would be incomplete without mentioning other non-scientific jobs that past students have taken up with relish. While none of these jobs can be said to demand the recall of actual science, the generic skills that students have been given through their undergraduate courses are directly relevant.

Here are some of the more unusual career moves:

- accountancy
- stockmarket brokering
- counselling
- air-traffic control
- casino management.

Next steps

More details can be found on the student website. A booklet is also in preparation. (360 words)

KELVINGTON FILM CLUB ANNUAL REPORT

Following another successful year, the club is able to make ambitious plans for the coming twelve months. This report will summarise its current financial situation, review recent events, and outline future plans.

Financial affairs

The club has seen a slight rise in expenses: film rental costs were increased last July and mailing costs have also risen, due to a notable increase in membership: 32 new members have joined and their fees have contributed to the club's healthy bank balance. Moreover, in March, the club was awarded a grant of £500 from the Princefield Film Institute, due to the impressive bid submitted by the Chair.

Main events

The highlights of last year's programme are given below:

- Welcome for new members, February
- Short season of Bertolucci's films, March
- Talk by screenwriter Todd Grafton, April
- Visit to the Cannes Film Festival, June
- Summer barbecue and party, August
- Lecture series on animation techniques, October
- Annual club dinner, December

Of these, the Cannes visit was particularly popular and thanks must be given to Joy Wellman for organising everything so well. In contrast, the lecture series in October was poorly attended, and enrolments barely covered the costs of the venue and speaker. It would be appreciated if members could give the committee feedback about this event, so that the same mistakes are not repeated.

Future plans

As always, the film programme is defined largely by members' requests. While the booking secretary already has a potential list of screenings, it is not too late for further films to be proposed.

One exciting development is the imminent setting up of a DVD library, which has been requested by many members. The scheme will allow members to rent up to two films at a time, for periods of three to five days.

Finally, the club is proud to confirm that the Canadian director Brad Eastwood has accepted the invitation to give a talk to members, date to be confirmed. This event promises to be both informative and exciting, as Brad is known to be a lively and controversial speaker. (340 words)

Writing

4 Using compound adjectives in your writing will show your range of language.

Here is my report on our club's recent exchange visit to Australia. Without exception, members who participated in this trip were highly appreciative of the meticulously-planned itinerary, not to mention the warm welcome extended by our easy-going Australian hosts. This long-standing relationship continues to flourish and we will be hosting a record-breaking number of visitors this summer (see below).

Travel

The inter-continental flights went smoothly and we arrived in Melbourne on schedule. A coach had been organised to transport us to the civic reception, where our individual hosts awaited us. Travel within Australia was mostly by plane – unfortunately, our visit coincided with industrial action, so our transfers were not entirely trouble-free.

Trips

The highpoint was the Great Barrier Reef, where two exhilarating days were spent deep-sea diving. Those members who chose not to dive were given the alternative of a half-day cruise in a glass-bottomed boat, which was said to be very enjoyable for all concerned. Some members have suggested that the visit to the Kakadu National Park could have been extended, as it was rather rushed. In subsequent years, it might also be more informative to visit during the dry season, which would allow wider-ranging access to the park.

Return visit

There will be 48 visitors to us in July, including six families with young children. In view of this, it will be necessary to find extra hosts. Strategies for achieving this should be agreed at the next club meeting. In anticipation, could the following suggestions be tabled:

- advertising in relevant journals
- feature in local newspaper
- posters in public places, e.g. library
- mailshot to schools and colleges
- interview on KJY radio
- club website?

Perhaps other members should be asked for further suggestions in advance of the meeting.

Extract One

Kids love it when I say I talk rubbish for a living, but it's the truth. As a recycling officer, I'm pretty obsessed with cutting down on consumption and waste. People come into this field from a mix of backgrounds. Mine is teaching, which is ideal, and most days during term time I'll have some contact with schools. Kids are very receptive to the 'save the planet' message and they're actually natural collectors of everything from bottle tops to newspapers, which is useful. If it's a keen school, I'll ask questions and they'll bombard me with questions of their own, which is great. But if I ask, 'What's recycling?' and someone answers 'Riding your bike' I know I've got a long morning ahead of me. Usually they're completely spellbound, they've a rough idea of what the local 'dump' is, but with a video and descriptions and the occasional trip, I can really spell out what landfill means. The cost of burying rubbish is enormous. Even taking into account the roller coaster changes in price for recycled plastics, glass and paper, it's still worth recycling, and children are receptive to that. What really gets me is the lack of local initiatives – there is often no direct link between policy and action.

Extract Two

Interviewer: Now, Professor Dean, the greenhouse effect has made finding alternative sources of energy all the more urgent, hasn't it?

Professor: Indeed. If not for the greenhouse effect, we may have been able to postpone finding a replacement for fossil fuels for some time. Places like India and China, for example, have huge quantities of cheap coal at their disposal, but with the greenhouse effect we need to make the transition earlier. But renewables, such as solar and wind power, all tend to be very episodic and the power density is low. Investment and take-up of renewables has been variable.

Interviewer: And what about biomass energy?

Professor: Well, that brings you to the inevitable land-use issue. Say that by 2050 you wanted to supply ten terawatts of power, which equals the current total energy consumption of all humankind, and you wanted to do it with biomass energy, you would need an area equal approximately to ten per cent of the Earth's land surface area. Eventually you'd have people and you'd have wheat but nothing else. I'm not sure how popular that policy would make a government.

Extract Three

Presenter: With me to talk about environmental issues today is Dr Jane Dove, of the University of Melchester. Welcome, Jane.

Woman: Good morning.

Presenter: Today we're discussing the Gaia hypothesis, a theory about the Earth put forward in 1965 by James Lovelock. Now Lovelock was a scientist outside the British establishment. He took issue with the accepted view that the Earth was just a passive host to millions of species of plants and animals, and that these living organisms simply adapted to the environment they found themselves in. Jane, nowadays Lovelock's theory that denuding forests will ravage delicate ecosystems is generally accepted, isn't it?

Woman: Indeed, but you know, even in the 1960s he was thought of as a tree-hugger – someone who goes around hugging and worshipping trees. A bit of a weirdo really. Of course, it didn't help that he called his idea the Gaia hypothesis.

Presenter: Yes, in fact this name, after the Greek goddess of the Earth, pushed Lovelock even further away from his peers.

Woman: I guess to them it seemed to represent the very opposite of rigid scientific enquiry.

Presenter: True, more a 'holistic' view of the Earth – that's as a whole rather than its individual components. He wasn't an amateur though, and his ideas have since gained acceptance.

Recording script 1 25

Presenter: Nowadays we're all aware of the need for biodiversity. Without a range of animals and plants our planet would be a poorer place. Well, I've recently been to southern Africa, which is the last truly wild home of endangered black rhinos. Here something is being done, albeit in a small way, to encourage biodiversity. In most other places black rhinos live either in fenced enclosures or under armed guard. But here in this out of the way desert landscape they are completely free to roam.

And yet the fact that any rhinos survive in that part of the world at all is partly due to our guest today, Susan Newhall. Susan, how did you come to get involved?

Susan: I was in the desert collecting plants and painting and I came across a rhino footprint. That was how I first found out that there were rhinos in the area. I didn't realise that this was unusual until I met up with geologists who were working there, and they said there was a terrible slaughter going on and showed me places where dead rhinos were lying around. So I launched ahead and used the media to help me expose what was going on.

Presenter: It's amazing to think that if you hadn't found that footprint, things could've been different.

Susan: Yes, that's right. It's extraordinary you know. Thanks to one rhino which I didn't even see.

Presenter: That was back in 1980, and after her discovery Susan got together with a group of other people to help form an organisation to help the rhinos. At the time, poaching in the region was so rife it seemed unlikely the rhinos could be saved, but Susan and her dedicated supporters refused to admit defeat and today rhinos are not just surviving in their harsh desert home, they're positively thriving.

- 2 Use your notes to report what was said. Refer to the Grammar folder on page 185 if you are unclear about how sentences in reported speech are formed. The reporting doesn't have to be word for word as long as the gist of what is said is there.

Southern Africa is the last truly wild home of endangered black rhinos. In most other places they live in either fenced enclosures or under armed guard. The man said that in the desert they are/were completely free to roam. He stated that rhinos were helped to survive in southern Africa because of Susan Newhall.

She eventually met up with / had eventually met up with geologists who were working / had been working in the area and they told / had told her about the terrible slaughter and took / had taken her to see the dead bodies. As a result she used / had used the media to expose what was / had been going on.

The man congratulated her on finding the footprint, as things would have turned out differently if she hadn't found it. She agreed and said that it was an amazing story, especially as she hadn't actually seen a rhino.

The man went on to say that Susan had got together with some friends and started an organisation to protect the rhino. He said that poaching in the country had been rife and if it hadn't been for Susan there wouldn't be any rhinos today.

I believe that animals shouldn't be kept in zoos. The best way to preserve endangered species is to have a sperm bank and then to try to organise national parks in the animal's country of origin with the aim of re-introducing native species back into their own habitat.

Text 1

- Large animals are very important to the ecology of their habitat.
- Helping an animal to survive will, generally, have far-reaching effects on other animals and lead to greater recognition of dangers to the planet.

Text 2

- It is not worth trying to save certain types of animal.
- Trying to decide which animal to protect is often not practical, as the nature of the Earth's eco-system is so complex.

Possible answer

I think tigers and polar bears are very useful in the sense that they are very accessible symbols of what is happening to many animal species. However, we mustn't forget that other animals, which aren't so attractive, such as certain types of insect, are also endangered.

Suggested answer

The two texts contrast differing views of what to do about nature conservation. According to the first passage, which gives the example of the tiger, large species are of fundamental importance to the ecology of their habitat. Helping a species such as this to survive will, for the most part, have far-reaching effects on other species and lead to greater recognition of dangers to the planet.

Personally, I believe this argument to be correct. Even though it would appear that we are concentrating too many of our efforts on one 'flagship' species, as a rule, these species are at the top of the food chain and thus are vitally important for the survival of other species. Without them, the balance of nature would be in jeopardy.

The second text puts forward two contrasting ideas. One is that it is not worth trying to save certain types of animal. In the case of the panda, for example, its decline and eventual disappearance seems to be inevitable. The other line of argument is that assessments of this nature are not practical, given the elaborate nature of the Earth's ecology.

I believe that, if we accept the premise that the natural world as we know it today will disappear entirely and that we should do nothing to counter it, then we are also accepting an impoverished future for our own species. For this reason, I cannot agree with one of the ideas put forward in the second text. I do, however, feel that, with respect to certain species, for example the polar bear, perhaps too much effort has been spent highlighting its problems at the expense of smaller, equally endangered animals. In conclusion, I would say that everything should be done to help all species, as this can only help the planet. (299 words)

I think I would much prefer to have a personal trainer who could tailor exercise to my particular needs.  - e ii With nationality words of this type you need an article.
 - f Both could be correct. Generally you don't use an article with meals. The exception is for public events, e.g. the rugby club dinner.
 - g ii I play violin is American usage. British usage is an article before an instrument.
 - h i No article with sports.
 - i i I want a drink of water is more usual. I want one drink of water emphasises how many. You can say I want one more drink of water.
 - j i You always use the with weather unless you are using an attributive adjective, e.g. We won't go out if the weather's bad. BUT Fishing boats don't go out in bad weather.
 - k ii We use the possessive rather than an article for parts of the body unless they are referred to generally in a medical context.
 - l Both are correct. No article if you are talking about the purpose for which the bed exists, i.e. to sleep in. You use the if you are talking about the piece of furniture. Similarly you use an article with prison/hospital/school if you are just referring to the building, but no article if you are referring to the building's purpose.

- 2 Read through the article quickly to find out what it is about. There may be more than one answer, depending on meaning.

- 4 This exercise gives practice in using prepositions accurately. Some words in English – prepositions, pronouns, conjunctions, articles and auxiliary verbs – have two pronunciations: one is used when they are stressed, and the other when they are not. Prepositions are stressed when they come at the end of a question.

For example:

What did he apply for? strong for /fɔːr/

He applied for a grant. weak for /fɔː/

Also remember that, when using a verb with a dependent preposition, the preposition will go at the end when in a question.

Alice: Health scares – don't they make you sick! Or do they challenge your complacency? Every few days a new story appears in the newspaper about, first of all, butter is bad for you, then butter is good for you. Salt is bad for us, salt is good for us. You just have to pick up a cup of coffee and you're engaged in a health debate. With me today to discuss this issue is Professor Robert Atkins. Robert, what do you think about all this?

Robert: Personally, I'd rather have ten false health scares and one of them prove to be serious – then it leads to action, than the cynical sense that somehow all this is just a media confection. That's what I really object to.

Alice: Mm, but how often do health scares come true?

Robert: There are random events in which microbes do emerge. They can be extraordinarily lethal and these account for massive epidemics that have occurred in the past in human history and I think we would be arrogant in the extreme to think that such things may not occur again in the future.

Alice: You're thinking of bubonic plague, of course. But nowadays it seems is the best of times and the worst of times if you want to be healthy. This is a paradox, because, on the one hand, we live in a relatively healthy society. Our longevity is unprecedented. By historical standards communicable lethal disease is exceptionally controlled. Yet we seem to be getting better, but feeling worse. Why, if we're so healthy, are we so easily spooked?

Robert: If you were living two or three hundred years ago, you were in the hands of God or Fate and if you were struck down by a mortal disease you thought you'd been sinful, but you also had your beliefs to console you – you'd go to paradise or heaven or whatever. Nowadays, we have tremendously high expectations about long healthy life continuing and some of us no longer have an expectation of an afterlife. It's partly a matter of a crisis of rising expectations.

Alice: Um, so our health anxiety is like a big eater's gluttony or a rich man's miserliness. Health excites expectations of perfection. It's also an anxiety spread by commercial concerns, isn't it?

Robert: Indeed. The margarine industry, for example, is actually now a very powerful instrument in pushing the line that butter is bad for you and actually there's a strong industrial lobby that has a stake in making sure that we are all anxious and worried about our health.

Alice: And they're not the only players. If health scares sell pills they also sell papers. And what about the research community which keeps the health scare industry supplied with stories?

Robert: Health is always in the news. Sometimes it's the doctors themselves who are maybe responsible. In every branch of life there are people who like a touch of publicity and enjoy the turbulence. Others are often so convinced by their findings that they ignore the critical views of other doctors and have this urge to promulgate their ideas when it may not be appropriate to do so. If I wanted to avoid heart disease, I'd be taking aspirins, reducing my weight, I would probably frequent my local gym a bit more. I would eat this, that and the other and so on. Then there might be another disease I might get. What do I do then?

Alice: Mm, how much difference would it make to you if you made all those changes? Should you just discount what you read and hear?

Robert: Who knows? Some health scares can actually seriously damage your health – they lead to stress, deprive us of the comfort of eating chocolate and clog up doctors' waiting rooms. There is clearly an information overload and unfortunately, when the real thing comes along, people might have difficulty distinguishing it from all the background noise.

Alice: And of course it's difficult to disprove something once a claim has been made, however fallacious that risk is. Thank you, Professor Robert Atkins.

Pronunciation

- 3 The general rule is that when the word is used as a verb the stress is on the last part of the word; when it is used as a noun then the stress is on the first part of the word.

Alice and Robert

say: object frequent discount

This is because these three words are being used as verbs in the listening extract.

- 5 This section gives more practice in Paper 4 Part 2. You should remember not just to describe the photos but to talk about the lifestyles of the people and make comments or give opinions on them. Make sure you time this activity so you get used to being concise and not spending too much time thinking.

The photos are of a group of teenagers slouched on a sofa eating pizza and watching TV and a teenage girl, running outside.

Possible answer

The young people in the photo are obviously very happy to just sit and watch TV. They probably watch far too many DVDs and get very little exercise.

I think that the fit young woman probably gets up fairly early in the morning, doesn't drink, eats moderately healthily, but probably does eat junk food, and takes her training very seriously. She probably doesn't socialise as much as she would like and goes to bed early on nights before an athletics meeting. It's not a lifestyle I would consider personally.

- 6 It might be useful to go through the unit underlining vocabulary connected with health and fitness, and then try to incorporate it into your talk.

Possible answer

Possibly a poster campaign would have the greatest impact. I always remember the campaign for teenage pregnancy with a man looking pregnant. That had a great impact. The posters could be distributed around schools, youth clubs and even in bus shelters – anywhere where young people congregate. I think cigarette smoking and drinking alcohol should be highlighted because of the rising number of teenage girls who smoke and also the problem with under-age drinking in this country.

Improved answer

Dear Sir or Madam

Following the rather negative article on this college's current sports provision, we would like you to reconsider your views and print an apology – the lion's share of your article is inaccurate. We would also like to seek your support regarding a funding application – please see below.

Your article claims that a lack of adequate facilities is affecting the performance of our basketball and swimming teams, yet both have represented the college at the highest levels of competition and excelled themselves over the years. Indeed, your newspaper featured the recent success of the basketball team in an article published in May. This would appear to contradict your claim.

At the same time, there is some truth in your suggestion that the main sports hall requires some work, especially the substandard flooring and inadequate lighting, which occasionally makes it hard to play at one's best.

In connection with this, it has come to our notice that funding is available nationally, which our college would be in a good position to apply for. We estimate that this grant would enable us to undertake the repairs alluded to above, and also allow for an extension of the present changing facilities, whereby separate 'wet' and 'dry' areas could be introduced, to service the pool and hall respectively.

What would be your opinion on this? Would you be willing to run an article in support of our grant application? It would be in the public interest, given that members of the public have daily access to our sports facilities.

We look forward to hearing from you in due course.

Yours faithfully,

Sample answer

To the editor,

I am writing in response to the invitation to readers that featured in the last issue of your magazine. What I am currently most concerned about with regard to the environment is the shipping of hazardous waste around the world, which is sometimes referred to as 'toxic colonialism'.

This practice seems to have grown alarmingly in recent years. The apparent reason for this is that environmental laws on waste disposal have been tightened up in the more developed countries, whereas the governments of many poorer developing countries are willing to accept hazardous material as a source of revenue. In reality, these 'host' countries may not be able to process or store toxic waste safely and there have been several cases of contamination on farms and other areas of land in Africa, for example.

Not only does this state of affairs threaten the health of ordinary people in the developing world but it also poses a serious threat to marine life while any toxic cargo is in transit. If a ship carrying radioactive waste were to run aground or be damaged in some way while on the high seas, the leakage of lethal material could pollute a huge expanse of ocean and cause widespread loss of wildlife. To my mind, an international campaign to stop this unnecessary movement of harmful substances should be set in motion immediately. Governments worldwide should give priority to this environmental issue. Countries belonging to the G20 group of nations could back the establishment of a global investigation into the actual amount of transportation that is going on and would ideally sanction major investment in safe methods of disposal in the countries of origin.

We must take the initiative now to protect our planet. I urge your readers to join me in seeking an immediate end to toxic colonialism.

Yours faithfully,

- 1 The pictures show a blacksmith working in his forge and office workers in a call centre – the office workers' jobs will have changed more due to modern technology. In contrast, a blacksmith crafts metal artefacts by hand and the skills needed will not have changed much in hundreds of years.

Possible answers

It depends – I'd like to stay in the same field, but I'm likely to have to move abroad to gain more responsibility.

Probably because the job market is so competitive – it's safer to stick with what you know.

It's crucial, as experienced people know so much more about how things work in an organisation.

I don't expect to stay with the same company, though I believe there will always be opportunities in my field.

Perhaps the workplace will become even more automated and computerised, with more mundane jobs being done by robots.

Interviewer: Diane Webber, you've switched careers more than once during your own working life, and you now run a highly regarded employment agency for media high-fliers, where, above all, you advise your clients, both companies and applicants, to be fully flexible. You seem to see this as a fundamental principle, if your agency slogan – 'Keeping your options open' – is anything to go by. Is that a fair assessment of how you operate?

Diane Webber: Absolutely. I know that not so very long ago we used to see jobs for life as the norm, with unquestioning company loyalty, and a golden handshake at the end of it all – which, nine times out of ten, probably wasn't in actual fact deserved – but things are very different now. And yes, there does seem to be something positive in all this, despite the obvious question mark over security. Successful players in the current job market cut their teeth in one firm, and are willing to step sideways more than once to gain fresh experience. Unlike their predecessors, they may only progress up the rungs when they land their third or fourth job, or even later in their career. This increased movement brings benefits, not just for them, but for the companies they work for, too.

Interviewer: In spite of the instability? Surely it's important to have some continuity?

Diane Webber: Well actually, it's a mixed blessing. Individuals can get terribly stale if they stick in one place for too long, especially if they report to managers who fail to challenge them. That implies a hierarchy riddled with complacency and under-achievement, which can no longer be tolerated in today's fast-moving, dog-eat-dog world. Also, much of today's work consists of fixed-term projects, done in teams, and if one or two members drop out along the way, it really doesn't matter, provided that the team remains an entity. The one exception to this is the team leaders themselves, who are not only the driving force, but the guardians of the project, who hold important historical detail in their heads, so yes, continuity is important there. But even then it's a clearly defined cycle. We're frequently approached by highly-experienced team leaders who, having completed one project, decide they can't face even the slightest whiff of repetition and so come to us seeking fresh challenges.

Interviewer: And they manage to find work?

Diane Webber: Oh, they're snapped up! Because generally speaking, a project-based job can easily demonstrate a track record, it's there in the successful completion of the project.

Interviewer: And these people would have no problem getting references from the employers they're essentially walking out on? I would have thought that that could be an issue ...

Diane Webber: Employers don't view it like that at all. Their mindset is different now, as I said earlier, and companies actually take steps to foster a more dynamic environment, as they feel this yields better productivity, though the jury's still out on this, in my view. Nevertheless, with a flow of people, there's a quantum leap in terms of the ideas generated, not to mention the chance of new ways of problem-solving imported from elsewhere. These effects are tangible and they're often very attractive because they're perceived as lean and efficient, instant solutions, even if they generally turn out to be only quick fixes which later have to be reversed.

Interviewer: Ah, but isn't that the nub of it all, that this shifting and fragmented approach leads to poor decisions? Of course, the perpetrators are never taken to task, as they've already made a quick exit and are knocking on your door for another job!

Diane Webber: That's a bit unfair! For one thing, there've always been bad decisions. No company can rely on its personnel to make the right choices one hundred per cent of the time – even with the help of highly-paid outside consultants, staff will continue to get it wrong from time to time. However, I'd argue that it's the mediocre employees, who just want to keep their heads down, who are far more likely to cause problems than the risk-takers, who, don't forget, are only as employable as their last success.

Interviewer: Ruthless ...

Diane Webber: Pragmatic!

Interviewer: Which brings us neatly back to your slogan, doesn't it? Keeping your options open. How far do you encourage people to go in this?

Diane Webber: With new opportunities opening up all the time, the sky's the limit really. It's certainly never too late to contemplate a move, and so the maxim has to be, don't rule anything in or out.

Interviewer: We'll end on that positive note. Diane Webber, thank you.

Diane Webber: It's been a pleasure.

- 1 An intern is a student or other young person who works in a company for a short period in order to gain experience, generally earning little or no money. The picture is of Keri Hudson.

Possible answer

The judge's ruling makes sense in this case. If an intern is working long hours and genuinely contributing to the company, a fair wage should be paid. On the other hand, if an intern has no experience whatsoever and is merely there to learn from the company, then I don't believe they necessarily need to be paid for the work they do.

2

Suggested answer

For me, the Affiliative Style described in Text 1 is likely to be the more effective as it values staff, consequently promoting harmony and company loyalty. Conversely, the leadership style in Text 2 is bound to lose employees through its demotivating approach.

Sample answer

Leadership styles within companies often vary enormously. The texts provide two contrasting examples – the 'Affiliative Style' and the 'Pacesetter Style'. The former is probably the more appropriate, though it is not without its flaws. Let us consider both approaches here.

The Affiliative Style of leadership treats employees as individuals and they therefore become very committed to the company, whereas the Pacesetter Style doesn't engender any such allegiance and employees don't recognise their role within the organisation. This could be wasteful in terms of human resources.

Under the Pacesetter Style, employees can easily become demotivated as their targets are unrealistic. Conversely, the Affiliative Style ensures that morale is kept high and the company should get more out of its employees because of this.

Affiliative leaders allow employees far greater independence and have faith that they will get the job done in the best way possible. Pacesetters, on the other hand, are reluctant to delegate responsibility and discourage individual creativity. Personally, I would find it impossible to work under such a 'repressive' regime. It seems to be the case that individuals who underperform within the Pacesetter Style of leadership are rapidly detected and measures are taken to either increase their productivity or to get rid of them. In contrast, underachievement may not be addressed within the Affiliative Style. Even so, this might not adversely affect the company performance at large, since the majority of employees would be 'achievers'.

In reality, the optimum leadership style may well be a blend of these approaches, since it cannot be denied that objectives have to be set by the leader and met by the workforce. However, if a company is to succeed in the longer term, it has to rely on its employees. The investment in people shown by the affiliative leader undoubtedly contributes to the greater good and should ensure that the company prospers, unless outside circumstances prevent this. Read through the advice carefully, then look at the questions and try to predict what the answer will be. Time spent looking carefully at the question paper is never wasted, and you have 45 seconds to do this. It is important to read ahead when listening so that, if something is missed, there is no sense of disorientation. There is no need to panic, as the piece will be played again.

Play the recording twice to simulate exam conditions.

The underlined parts of the recording script confirm the key.

Recording script 2.04

You will hear a man called John Farrant talking about his job, working for a car hire company. For question 1, listen to the first part of the recording as far as '... a plastic wallet'. Then, with a partner, decide which is the word you heard which fits in the space.

John Farrant: Good morning. My name is John Farrant and I have the job of reservations manager at a large international car hire company based in London. Dealing with the public can be a tricky business. You get to meet all types from the arrogant and rude to the downright abusive. We aren't expected to reply in kind, of course, or come over all ingratiating and deferential either. It's down to us to be respectful and remember the customer is always right. Sometimes it can be difficult, especially with a real joker. For example, when taking a booking, we have to ask certain questions, one of which is: 'Do you possess a clean driving licence?' To which one man snapped at me, 'Of course I do. I keep it in a plastic wallet!'

You will hear 'rude' and 'deferential', but only 'respectful' is correct. The words 'arrogant' and 'ingratiating' do not fit grammatically.

4 Play the rest of the recording.

2 refresher course 3 roundabouts 4 long-term rental(s)
5 (thick) mud 6 test drive 7 handbrake 8 (best) interest(s) 9 hand controls

Recording script 2.05

Now listen to the rest of the recording and, for Questions 2 to 9, complete the sentences with a word or short phrase.

John Farrant: Sometimes we can hardly believe some of the customers aren't pulling our legs. We once had an elderly gentleman ring up about a car to go to Paris the following morning. We went through the questions and he said he was 69, and it turned out that, although he'd passed his driving test, he hadn't driven for years. He said, 'Is there any way you could give me a refresher course over the phone?' We suggested he let his friend drive.

Travel doesn't always bring out the adventurer in people, though. We had an American tourist ask for a car to drive to Scotland, and who said: 'How many circles are there between London and Scotland?' After some questioning, I realised he meant roundabouts. There are hardly any in the USA – they prefer traffic lights and he'd only ever driven on motorways here before. He only wanted me to work out a route for him!

Now, most people assume that car hire companies make their money from renting out posh, expensive cars like Mercedes and BMWs. This isn't the case – it's the long-term rentals which bring in the money. But of course, it does depend where you go with the car and if you make your intentions clear at the time.

We had one English client book a car for a month. So far, so good. Four weeks later I received a call from him in Spain, saying he was just about to drop off the car. I said, 'Sorry, sir, where are you?' He said, 'Barcelona.' I asked if he'd told the reservations clerk he intended to go abroad with the car, and he said no, really unconcerned. Presumably he didn't realise, or maybe even care, that he hadn't been covered by insurance. I spoke to the supplier afterwards. He said when they got the car back it didn't have any dents or scratches on it but it was so thick with mud it took two days for them to valet it. Then, we had one gentleman who had a medical condition that meant that he was on drugs that made him semi-drowsy, but he had a certificate from his doctor saying that he could drive. I got a call from the depot manager saying, 'I'm not giving him a car. He can hardly stand up.' We decided he should give the customer a test drive round the block. This guy pulled out of the depot and there was a car coming towards them. He didn't even see it. The depot manager didn't even have time to sound the horn, he had to pull on the handbrake. He said he'd never been so scared in his life.

Other people refuse to believe you're genuinely concerned about safeguarding their best interests. I remember it once took me 15 minutes to persuade a customer that it really wasn't worth hiring a small car, with low power, to go over the Alps. He'd just get stuck and it would ruin his holiday. He simply refused to accept that this type of car wouldn't be up to the job. What d'you do?

We can solve most problems though. We had one gentleman who wanted to go to Oxford. Everything was fine until he suddenly said, 'By the way, I've only got one leg.' I had to call in a few favours, but one of my suppliers managed to get me a car with hand controls.

So, although it may not be straightforward, I enjoy my job on the whole – I guess it's the challenge – every day is different after all!

Unit 16

16.1 pages 134–135

Reading

- 1 This unit is all about literature and the printed word. As is often the case in the exam, this Paper 1 Part 5 task is taken from a short story.

Possible answers

A short story has few pages and so there is little space to develop characters or plot. The writing must be succinct and 'lean'.

In a novel it is easier to use flashback and other time reference devices. There is much more scope to include long descriptions and/or sub-plots.

- 2 The significance of the title is that Elizabeth's behaviour and that of her parents shows nothing new or different from previous generations. It is predictable.

Background information

Laurie Colwin wrote five novels and three collections of short stories before she died in 1992. This story appears in her second collection, The Lone Pilgrim, a book that includes many stories to do with early experiences of adult life.

3

1 C 2 B 3 B 4 A 5 D 6 C

Detailed explanation:

- 1 The answer (C) is in the words 'was extraordinarily pretty, and such children are never called difficult'. A is wrong, as the text only refers to one child who was older, Nelson Rodker. B is not suggested: the use of 'original' does not imply great intelligence. D is ruled out as there is no evidence of 'painstaking preparation' and only one relationship is referred to (her parents hoped Nelson and Elizabeth might marry).
- 2 The answer (B) lies in the final sentence of the second paragraph. There is no evidence that she had a 'sense of duty' (A), in fact the reverse is true. C is ruled out as it was Elizabeth who hated the Rodkers, not the other way round. Although it is true that Elizabeth did hide her true feelings ('she learned to turn a cheerful face'), there is no evidence to suggest she disliked doing this (D).
- 3 The answer (B) is rooted in 'none of her friends wanted to entertain at home'. A is ruled out because the careers weren't always successful ('blacklisted movie producers'). There is no evidence to support C; Holly was the only friend who came home and Elizabeth's mother approved of her, so she would have been unlikely to feel uncomfortable. D is not suggested by the text.

- 4 The answer (A) lies in the words 'manure was not on her mother's mind' and 'she was much relieved' – presumably her mother had been imagining an illicit relationship with a man at the stables. There is no evidence that Elizabeth's mother begrudged spending the money on the jodhpurs (B). C, though plausible, is not true: her parents 'who felt riding once a week was quite enough' were mildly interested and the mother did arrange the purchase of the jodhpurs. D is likely, but not stated in the text.
- 5 The answer (D) lies in the final sentence of the fifth paragraph. A is insufficiently rooted in the text: although it implies her parents believed in moderation in reading, we do not know how she was brought up. B is wrong, as Elizabeth's appearance didn't change (only her behaviour at college did). C is wrong as it was other students who 'went wild', while Elizabeth spent time alone in her room.
- 6 The answer (C) lies in the words 'wanted to enjoy it finally on her own terms' and 'refusing to take a cent of their money'. A is wrong, as she used the bracelet 'as collateral' to borrow money – that is, she didn't sell it but named it as an asset that could be set against the loan if she defaulted on her payments. B is not stated, even if implied by the fact that the daughters of her parents' friends were getting engaged. D is wrong as Elizabeth had always loved New York.

The answer is D. A and C are not supported by the reality in the text. B is wrong, as both Nelson and Elizabeth had a good education and in her case, the text shows us it led to other things.

Relevant sentences in the text that support D:

At college, Elizabeth had her first taste of freedom.

Had they known what sort of adult Elizabeth had become, great would have been their dismay.

Elizabeth further puzzled them by refusing to take a cent of their money, although her mother knew the truth: what you dole out to the young binds them to you. To have Elizabeth owing nothing was disconcerting to say the least.

5

- a Elizabeth's mother forced herself to sound positive.
- b Elizabeth pretended to be happy when really she loathed the Rodkers and her parents.
- c Beautiful daughters like Elizabeth are over-protected.
- d It might have adversely affected Elizabeth's social life.
- e Elizabeth's parents regarded 'adult behavior' as important.

Clauses 2

- 1 Do you see anything odd about the poem by Bud Weiser? Look carefully: the poet's name, if put together as one word, is the name of a make of beer, which echoes the content of the final line. The poem is a joke!

Background information

Spike Milligan (1918–2002) is perhaps best known for his collaboration with Harry Secombe and Peter Sellers in the BBC radio comedy series The Goons, which has influenced many other comedians' work. Gary Snyder (born 1930) is an American poet who was part of the 'Beat Generation' and a friend of the writer Jack Kerouac. Snyder has won the Pulitzer Prize for Poetry and has also translated literature from ancient Chinese and modern Japanese.

- 2 If you are interested in poetry, it is worth buying a bilingual edition of a poet you enjoy and comparing the original version with its translation.

Suggested answer

Poetry can be translated, but demands additional skills on the part of the translator. It is sometimes impossible to preserve the original rhyme or rhythm. For this reason, a translator should be able to 'take liberties' that the translator of a novel wouldn't contemplate. The first poem contains some idiomatic language (switch off your face, put your love into neutral) that might be difficult to translate within the same rhythm. The first two poems have tightly defined rhythm and some lines rhyme, so perhaps the free verse of Gary Snyder would be easier to translate. On the other hand, some of its nuances are personal to the poet and might be difficult to understand fully and/or get across in another language.

1 The different genres shown are:

Don't Sweat The Aubergine – cookery/food writing

The Flanders Panel – crime/detective fiction

A Bigger Message: Conversations with David Hockney – art/biography

Matter – science fiction

Mozambique Mysteries – travel writing

Possible answer

The ingredients in a good book depend on the genre – a good novel might have an intriguing plot, a cast of well-developed characters and be expertly crafted. A good biography, on the other hand, would be informative and accurate, with well-researched details and human interest. A book that is hard to put down usually has a fast-moving plot or suspense of some kind, whereby the reader feels compelled to continue to the end without pausing.

The Dumas Club (detective story)

Congo Journey (travel writing)

Qualities:

The Dumas Club: subtle plot (two strands, apparently interlinked), compelling, makes the reader come up with links and suppositions

Congo Journey: more than straight description, brilliant insights into a remote region, meticulous detail on wildlife, superb use of dialogue, funny, moving

Recording script 2.06

Speaker 1: If I had to single out one book from the many I read last year, it would be The Dumas Club, by Arturo Pérez-Reverte – that's in translation from the original Spanish. Although I read the opening couple of chapters quite slowly, I soon got completely immersed in the subtleties of the plot, so much so that I quite literally could not put the book down until I had finished it. Some books have this compelling effect on me, and not just detective stories like this one. What is so skilful about the way The Dumas Club has been constructed is that there are two strands to the plot, and as a reader, you assume these are interwoven and all the time you're engaging with the text on this basis, making links and suppositions of your own. Well, without giving anything away, there is a masterful twist, which makes this an exceptional book.

Speaker 2: I read loads of travel writing, partly because I have a penchant for travelling myself. That said, I do expect a lot more than straight description and first-hand observation from a truly great travel book. Redmond O'Hanlon's masterpiece Congo Journey does not disappoint! Will Self – the author – named it as one of his books of the year and said he felt like starting it again the minute he'd finished it, which is praise indeed! I'll certainly re-read it at some point. It's got brilliant insights into what is a really remote region of our planet. There's meticulous detail on its wildlife and superb use of dialogue ... brings the whole thing to life. And then much more besides – it's funny, moving – so you're reading it on many different levels. Above all, though, you marvel at his sheer guts in enduring such a difficult and dangerous journey. Epic stuff.

Speaker 1

Well, I suppose I would visualise certain snapshots in my life, fleeting moments when I was on cloud nine – the birth of my second child or, more recently, a forest walk on a beautiful morning with the birds singing their hearts out – at times like these, you sort of step outside yourself and think, yes, this is as good as it gets. So it's not about having material possessions or a huge income, though if you have any worries on that front it surely rules out the chance of happiness. It's more to do with personal satisfaction and inner peace.

Speaker 2

For me it's not necessarily a transient feeling. I can recall whole periods of my life when things were basically going right, especially in my career, and I think a positive experience like that works as a catalyst. I suppose I can't have been in the same state of ecstasy from dawn till dusk, but looking back, perhaps through rose-tinted spectacles, it certainly feels that way. But if I had to pick just one event, it would be the elation I felt aged nine on receiving a silver trophy at my first judo contest, something beyond my wildest dreams.

Speaker 3

In my book, it's all to do with shared positive vibes, like infectious laughter rippling through a close family group. Being in a loving relationship is key, as this provides stability. And happiness can be found in small things – the security of a comfortable sofa, curled up with a good book while the wind's howling outside – that's something I remember from my childhood. It may be an old cliché, but it's true, you can't buy it, not at any price.

Speaker 4

Sometimes I've felt a surge of joy in the midst of a perilous situation, and one moment I'll always treasure occurred in the Andes with two fellow-climbers, handling a tricky descent in appalling weather conditions. I hadn't known them that well when we set out, but in that situation, you put yourself on the line and make the impossible happen through mutual trust and cooperation. Others might claim wellbeing is a mental thing, but that's not what really counts. If you're feeling under the weather, you won't experience emotional highs, so it's vital to stay in shape. Well, that's my view, anyway.

Speaker 5

Locations have always been important to me – they seem to contribute so much to a person's mood. A few years ago, I was studying marine activity on a coral reef, part of a close-knit research team on an otherwise unpopulated and stunningly beautiful island. There was one particular day when I'd done three dives, the last at night, and although I was exhausted, I couldn't turn in. So I went back to the beach alone. I lay on the ghostly white sand, gazing at the canopy of stars above me, and saw the most awesome meteor shower – an absolute first for me. It doesn't always take much to tip the balance in favour of happiness, does it?

- 1 The pictures show:
 - a healthy-looking woman riding a horse
 - a family walking along a beach
 - a desirable house in the sun.
- 2 Check your understanding of the words and phrases in the box. Many of them are used in the texts below.
- 3 This lesson looks at a Paper 2 Part 1 task and analyses a sample answer that has lifted some words and phrases from the texts.
- 4 Working through the sample answer will make you more aware of the need to reformulate words and phrases. See the rewritten answer on the next page for suggested changes, which are given in italics.

The 'lifted' words and phrases in the rest of the answer are as follows:

Second paragraph: health and well-being, climate, job satisfaction, aspects, political freedom

Third paragraph: healthy, supported by friends and family

Suggested reformulation

Both texts deal with the concept of 'quality of life' and consider which factors within this umbrella term are the most important in reality. In both cases, healthiness is seen as a crucial attribute, since it dictates whether someone can hold down a job and therefore influences other 'quality of life' indicators.

The first text gives an overview of the factors that go to make up a person's quality of life, mentioning their state of health and general happiness, social involvement, work, the political status quo and the local weather conditions. Not only does it underline the fact that without good health, being able to work and having an active and fulfilling role in society are impossible, but also, it argues that some things cannot be changed by the individual – how their country is governed and any consequent limits on their rights, for example.

The second text focuses on the annual phenomenon of quality-of-life indexes and, while viewing them as informative, questions the value of their having such prominence in the media. For most of us, it is academic which city in the world has the best quality of life, as we have no real opportunity to uproot our existence and rush to start a new life there. Nor is it necessary, argues the writer, as a good quality of life is still possible, provided that the individual is physically fit and enjoys some stability in relationships.

While this may be true up to a point, it is nevertheless going to be far more difficult for people trapped in poverty to gain a quality of life equal to that of people at the other end of the wealth spectrum – especially in our materialist society, where possessions seem to count for so much and we are constantly encouraged to wish for more. Paper 3 Part 1 Multiple-choice questions

1 In the examination there are three different extracts. Here, there are only two. You will hear each extract twice.

1 A 2 B 3 C 4 A

Recording script 2/09

Part 1

You will hear two different extracts. For questions 1–4, choose the answer (A, B or C) which fits best according to what you hear. There are two questions for each extract.

Extract One

Man: Now, from what I can tell from this current album, apparently the singer Lisa Gray is on cloud nine. It's interesting isn't it – the alternative artist who, in her long singing career, has always refused to conform to mainstream notions of musical genres, but who has just made a commercial album which looks set to be a hit. Why the about-face, do you think?

Woman: It looks as if she has now found a kind of fulfilment, after years of swimming against the tide – possibly because of her marriage. After hits like Needing You and Crying Out, Gray seemed hardly likely to make an album celebrating happiness in love. But, with her new album, that is exactly what she has done and it'll get her a lot of new fans.

Man: Well, she certainly seems to have got over her aversion to pop and with this new album she has definitely proved that she can do it.

Extract Two

Critic: The American artist Dorota Kowalska claims to view her homeland with affection, but the fact that she left the USA and has lived in Europe since 2007 suggests that what might be Always Fun in the USA – the title of her latest book of photographs – isn't necessarily something she herself subscribes to. Her images depict largely working-class Americans amusing themselves in ways that only a nation hopelessly committed to the pursuit of pleasure could devise. Aquapark gives a bird's-eye view of trippers aimlessly drifting along the concrete waterways on their huge rubber rings. As with most of the characters in Kowalska's eccentric collection, their quest for enjoyment looks naive or perhaps, at worst, even vulgar and trashy. The documentary style in which the photographs show the people contrives derisively to offer the recreational habits of these individuals for our amusement, rather than suggesting a sentimental reaction to such eccentricity.

Part 3

M: You will hear two people, Darren and Helena, talking about Darren's new career. For questions 1–5, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which fits best according to what you hear.

You now have one minute in which to look at Part 3.

Helena: So, Darren, I hear that you've got a new job working in the voluntary sector. It must have been a bit of a wrench, wasn't it, giving up your high-powered banking job in the City, with those huge annual bonuses and long City lunches? Most people we know thought it was a passing phase, but I always thought you were a bit of a square peg in a round hole, so I've always half expected it. So I guess armed with your degree and a tidy sum put by, you thought you could change careers just like that? But why did it take you two years to make the move?

Darren: I didn't know what I wanted to do; I only knew what I didn't. I was really stuck in a rut until someone I worked with got fed up with me and told me to 'go and do voluntary work or something'. So I decided to take some time off and volunteer for a charity. I reckoned that if I guaranteed them six months, during that time I would be bound to find a proper job, you know a paid one! It wasn't quite as easy as I thought, though. I decided to apply to 12 well-known charities, ranging from overseas aid to homelessness. I put in my applications, but I guess my lack of real conviction and experience was pretty obvious, and they saw straight through me. They didn't even bother to reply.

Helena: Quite right. I don't know why you'd think they would. They need big hitters just like in banking, not people who don't know what they want – I can't imagine why people think that charities should be charitable when it comes to employing people.

Darren: Well, I can see that now obviously. Anyway, I got a lucky break. A friend of a friend had a contact with one of the charities I had applied to. She gave me a name, Anna Rogers, and within days Anna had come back with a proposal. Now, I'm a history graduate and I'd spent two years on a trading floor in the City, so most of her spiel on government research papers went straight over my head, but I did manage to make out that she wanted me to find out about schemes that prevented or alleviated homelessness. I jumped at the chance and handed in my notice at work straightaway. My colleagues told me they'd thought I'd never really do it – they had no idea how desperate I was.

Helena: So how did it go??

Darren: Well, I actually found it a bit on the quiet side, but that was OK. I could hear the tapping of keyboards and conversations on the phone. Even the people were different – they spoke in whole sentences, without the 'yeah, yeah, right, right, offer this, bid that, done' tempo I was used to. I was expecting a collection of meek do-gooders, and I was surprised to find they were OK, and I just got on with things. They were a nice bunch and were only mildly curious as to why I had given up a well-paid job. The biggest surprise, however, was me. I never expected to enjoy it so much.

Helena: So, what about the future?

Darren: Well, that project took five months to complete. That done, I had no real desire to leave and volunteered for another couple of months, writing bits and pieces, even stuffing envelopes. It was novel to be working 14-hour days without moaning for what I once regarded as a pittance. I don't think the City is an easy life. Mind you, this isn't a breeze either – there are still targets here. Equally, the City just wasn't right for me, while this is. I feel pretty stupid that it took me so long to figure that out. I'm just glad I got there in the end and one day I can work on a bigger project where I can start to make a difference to people's lives. Now you will hear Part 3 again.

Possible answer

In general, I believe the future for human rights looks less bleak than it did twenty or thirty years ago. Thanks to the Internet and social media, individuals can find out quickly what is going on around them, and most repressive governments in the world wield less power than they used to because of this 'openness'. Indeed, some regimes have been toppled because they were unable to prevent their citizens from having access to worldwide media coverage. However, it should not be forgotten that human rights abuse still goes on in some parts of the world. And at the same time, increasing globalisation means that we are in danger of losing our cultural identity, which could affect individual freedom too.

- 1 The pictures are taken from two animal welfare campaigns run by PETA and Lush.

Possible answer

We share our planet with animals, but it cannot be denied that human beings are the dominant species. So should animals have the same rights as us? It is a complex issue because of our perceived needs. Many people across the world depend on animals for their livelihoods, and domesticated animals provide sustenance for their families. However, the provision of food is one thing, whereas abusing animals in other unnecessary ways is quite another. For me it is unacceptable to cause an animal suffering in the pursuit of a new cosmetics line or even in the development of potentially life-saving drugs. We humans should treat animals with the respect and compassion they deserve.

- 2 The speaker is against animal testing.

Recording script 2 11

Two-and-a-half million animals are used in Australian medical research every year, half a million in Victoria alone. They justify the obscene waste of life like this: animals must be used in order to trial new drugs and treatments safely. But a growing number of doctors and scientists have challenged this line, saying that in fact, animal research is counterproductive. It could in fact be damaging to human health. This is because animals are not like us – their bodies are different, they suffer from different diseases and obviously their reactions to drugs are also different. So animals cannot be used to find cures for humans. Why does animal testing continue? Answer: it's a huge industry. There are many, many vested interests in animal research, from the big pharmaceutical companies themselves to the manufacturers of the cages that these poor dumb animals end up in. Then, apart from those obvious commercial interests, there are the many scientists who have chosen to base their careers on animal experiments. They would lose their jobs tomorrow if animal testing was stopped, wouldn't they?

Basically, animal research is the ultimate quick fix. In general, it requires many years to monitor the progression of a human disease. Obviously laboratory animals, with their shorter lifespans, tend to decline more rapidly. This means that research projects can be wrapped up quickly. Papers presented, trials successfully concluded, bam, new drugs hit the market. It can't be scientifically sound. But what should have been done – full-scale controlled monitoring within a human population – is ruled out as uneconomic. The hard truth is that just about every medical advance has come about either independently from, or despite, animal research. You shouldn't believe everything you hear, right?

- 1 The pictures show:

- children working in a carpet factory
- someone making a speech at Speaker's Corner in Hyde Park, London

- a demonstration being broken up violently by the police.

Suggested answers

Picture A shows a factory where child labour is being used to produce goods. You might call it a sweatshop and it is preventing these girls from gaining a full education.

Picture B shows a man talking to a crowd of onlookers and he is dressed quite unconventionally! He is probably able to say whatever he wants to in public, but the right to free speech isn't universal and some political regimes would have that man arrested on the spot.

Picture C shows some kind of civil disobedience, perhaps a protest about something, so I suppose it is illustrating the right to demonstrate in public – there is some form of riot control taking place, though, so maybe this illustrates the lack of such freedom.

- 2 Look at the pictures as you listen to the first part of the recording. Notice how the man keeps interrupting the woman and doesn't allow her to give her own opinions. He also challenges what she says quite aggressively, which is rather unfair in an interview situation.

Recording script 2.12

Interlocutor: Now, in this part of the test you're going to do something together. Here are some pictures on the theme of freedom. First, I'd like you to look at pictures A and C and talk together about what might have happened just after these photos were taken. You have about a minute for this, so don't worry if I interrupt you.

Man: Er ... shall I start?

Woman: Sure, go ahead.

Man: Well, I'll choose the easier of the two. So, if we consider what C shows, it's some kind of demonstration which may have started off peacefully but has obviously turned sour. Er, the police are in there, there'll obviously be lots of arrests, and maybe worse, physical abuse of some kind ...

Woman: The ... there's a doctor or someone with a medical training there, the armband has a red cross, it doesn't look good ...

Man: Yes, yes. The police might take away banners, too, that's what often happens in situations like this. Anyway, what about picture A?

Woman: Well, I'm sure the owners of the factory weren't too happy with the photographer, so perhaps they tried to confiscate the film.

Man: Mm, but we're looking at the photo, so what you suggest can't be true!

Woman: I didn't say they succeeded. Yes, obviously the photographer ...

Man: Um, perhaps it was taken in secret? That's what that kind of investigative journalist often does.

Woman: Uh-huh.

Interlocutor: Thank you.

- 3 Now listen to the second part. The candidates decide to include additional photos to do with education and animal rights.

Recording script 2.13

Interlocutor: Now, I'd like you to look at all three pictures.

I'd like you to imagine that they are all going to be used in a book about freedom. Talk together about the aspects of freedom that are shown. Then suggest two other aspects of freedom that you feel should be included in the book. You have about three minutes to talk about this.

Woman: Well, we've already identified political freedom and the rights of children, haven't we? Looking at picture B, I suppose it's illustrating the rights of the individual, isn't it?

Man: Mm, yes. It's taken in Hyde Park in London, the place is called Speaker's Corner and every Sunday ...

Woman: I didn't know that. Anyway, the man is holding forth to the crowd about something, so it's all about free speech. He's rather unusually dressed, he's got a mortar board on his head like teachers used to wear, and look, he's wearing a real dog's collar! That's underlining the message of personal liberty – in a liberal society, you can wear what you want.

Man: Yes, that's an important point – you don't have that freedom of choice everywhere. Well, we have to suggest other aspects of freedom to include in this book ... um ...

Woman: Um, speaking purely for myself, I'd want to include something on education. It's a basic human right. I suppose it's linked to those girls in the factory, they're being deprived of what they should be doing at that age, going to school and learning. If they can't read and write, they'll be trapped for the rest of their lives.

Man: Mm, that's true. But how would you select a photo to show this type of freedom? If you just show a class of schoolchildren, it wouldn't make the point, education's something we take for granted.

Woman: Right, well fortunately, we don't have to worry about which photo is actually chosen, but I do think the book should focus on education.

Man: Oh yes, yes, I, I agree. And then, something else? Mm, freedom of the press maybe? That's part of political freedom, but also the book could focus on how the paparazzi chase after famous people, you'd get a good photo of that!

Woman: I'm not sure that's strictly about freedom, though. And it seems rather flippant, after we've been considering basic human rights like education and freedom of speech. What about including animal rights? It's an important element – we're not the only species on the planet, after all.

Man: But now I'm beginning to wonder what the focus of this book is. I mean, you can't just call it 'Freedom' and put everything in it – there would have to be some limits?

Woman: I don't see why. It would be very interesting. Perhaps a bit long.

Man: Just a little! Er, well, OK, we'll include animal rights. But in my humble opinion, the book will become very unwieldy, an editor's nightmare.

Woman: Maybe ...

Interlocutor: Thank you.

Part 2 Article

- 1 Before reading the task, look back at the advice given in Writing folder 5 on page 91.

Suggested answers

The article will appear in an academic journal and be read by academics, so it must be formal, serious and impersonal in style.

- 2 Start with the title. Does it match your answer in 1? Work through the article, underlining any words and phrases that are informal rather than formal, or not impersonal in style.

All content is relevant to the task.

Inconsistencies in style:

use of an informal phrasal verb and chatty tone in title: Hang on to your rights! – certain phrasal verbs are appropriate in academic writing, for example weigh up in paragraph 1. However, you need to be careful when using phrasal verbs as informal ones stand out and contribute to a negative effect on the examiner (e.g. help [us] out).

several instances of I think ... – an article for an academic audience should avoid use of the first person and adopt an impersonal style.

inappropriate informal use (you rewrite these parts in exercise 4):

really that great (paragraph 1)
the big plus; kids (paragraph 2)
the downside of; 24/7 (paragraph 3)
the Internet gives us the ability to control our lives, right? (paragraph 4)

- 3 'Slips' (box 4) are very minor, unintentional mistakes. To achieve a Band 3 or above for Language in Cambridge English: Proficiency, you will have to show a high level of accuracy.

Tick the boxes that apply to the sample answer.

Boxes that apply:

SOCIAL MEDIA: THE IMPLICATIONS FOR PERSONAL LIBERTY

The prevalence of mobile communication devices together with the widespread use of social networking and the Internet have altered our way of life fundamentally. This article weighs up their impact on individual freedom and assesses whether the outcomes are unequivocally advantageous.

Arguably, the main asset of Smartphones and tablets is that friends and family are always contactable. Parents need not be concerned for the welfare of their teenage children, as they can keep track of them. This may be beneficial to the older generation, but I think it imposes unfair limits on the liberty of their offspring.

One drawback of mobile devices from the working adult's standpoint is that they can be reached at all times and the distinction between work and home life becomes blurred. This again places constraints upon the individual, who has fewer opportunities to shut out the stress of everyday life. At the same time, it is undeniable that the Internet gives us the ability to control our lives. From booking a holiday to selecting a new home, everything can be done direct, without any middleman restricting what is on offer. So that is an example of greater freedom – the freedom of choice.

As for social networking, the chance to share ideas and communicate more effectively means that nobody need feel alone in the modern world. Furthermore, the role played by social media in disseminating information under less tolerant political regimes shows how networking sites can be used for the greater good, contributing to profound social change.

However, the adverse impact of all this is an inevitable erosion of privacy. People seem happy to display their innermost thoughts and aspirations in a way that would have been unheard of in the previous century, but at what cost? It is impossible to turn the clock back, yet it must be acknowledged that through social media, restrictions have been placed on individual freedom, which society at large may come to regret. Sample answerTHE POSITION OF THE INDIVIDUAL WITHIN CONTEMPORARY SOCIETY

How much freedom do we have in modern society? In some ways, we enjoy far more freedom than previous generations, but in other ways, we most definitely do not. This article considers both aspects of this question.

Nowadays, the individual has a strong entitlement to protection under the law, especially in relation to gender and race. Equal rights of this kind seem fundamental to personal freedom. Men and women should earn the same rates of pay for the same job, whatever their age and people of different ethnic backgrounds should be able to attend the school of their choice.

However, at the same time it cannot be denied that some constraints must be placed on the individual if a society is to function properly and these limits are generally enshrined in law. Model citizens recognise that they must abide by the law, in order to protect the weak and vulnerable members of their society, whereas lawless states lack the proper safeguards for these individuals.

In a civilised society, tolerance of others allows free speech and religious freedom. It is vital for individuals to be able to state their beliefs and political views without fear of reprisal. Similarly, everyone should be able to dress as they wish, rather than being attacked for their appearance.

However, there are many limits to personal freedom, not least due to the huge amount of data that exists about us online these days, from our shopping habits to our relationships. Furthermore, in many modern societies, children have less freedom to play unsupervised than in the past and CCTV cameras are everywhere. This undoubtedly affects everybody's freedom in one way, though it undeniably protects us at the same time.

In contemporary society we all carry the notion that we are 'free' but in reality, this isn't always the case. Although 21st-century citizens would probably not want to return to a pre-digital age, the constraints imposed on them are inevitably greater nowadays, largely thanks to the ubiquity of technology. Recording script 2.15

Presenter: Good morning. Today on the programme I'm going to talk about one aspect of the supernatural – ghosts! Now, ghosts have always been with us and are as much of a mystery now as they were in the first century AD, when Athenodorus, a hard-up philosopher, rented a house in Athens which was cheap because of its eerie reputation and noisy neighbours. Sitting working late at night, Athenodorus heard the rattling of chains and, suddenly, the horrifying figure of an old man appeared before him. It beckoned to him and, although Athenodorus tried to ignore it and get on with his work, it refused to let him. So Athenodorus followed the ghost into the garden, where it pointed to a spot on the ground and disappeared. Next day, a hole was dug at the place indicated by the ghost and a human skeleton was discovered. After the remains were given a proper burial and the house purified, the haunting ceased.

This was clearly a ghost with a purpose, but usually the reason for haunting is not clear. There have been a few modern cases where ghosts seemed to have a message, such as a 'crisis apparition' of a person, seen by close friends and relatives at the time of his or her death, an event unknown to them until confirmation came later. However, in many ghost sightings, there seems to be no purpose and the ghost's identity remains unknown. Some people are sceptical and do not believe in the existence of ghosts. It is indeed likely that some witnesses who claim to have seen ghosts out of doors have, in fact, mistaken a patch of mist for a human figure, especially if they have been alone and the place was eerie. Other people may have vivid imaginations and 'see' externally something that is really only in their mind.

One of the most vivid apparitions on record was that seen in 1953 by 18-year-old Harry Martindale. Now a retired gardener, but a plumber at the time of the sighting, Martindale was working in the Treasurer's House in York. One day he was at work in the cellar, when, to his astonishment and fright, he saw a Roman soldier step out of the wall. He instantly dropped his tools. What he did not know at the time was that he had put his ladder on the course of an old Roman road. He later described in detail what he had witnessed.

Harry: I heard a sound – the only way I can describe it is the sound of a musical note. At the same time, a figure came out of the wall. And the head of the figure was in line with my waist, and it had on a shining helmet. I was terrified. I got out of the way and scrambled into the corner. And from there, I got a bird's eye view of what it was. It was the head of a Roman soldier. He crossed the room and disappeared into a pillar. Then another soldier on horseback came by, followed by soldiers walking in pairs, side by side.

You couldn't see through them. They were all about one metre five, in want of a shave! Nothing smart about them. They all had the same helmets on, with the plume coming out of the back, down the neck. They all carried a short sword on the right-hand side. I used to think that Roman soldiers carried a long sword, but this was similar to a dagger. And they went as quick as they came. When they were in the centre of the cellar, I could hear a murmuring – no speech, just a murmuring.

Presenter: When the museum curator found the terrified Harry collapsed at the top of the cellar steps, he immediately knew what had happened because he had seen the soldiers himself seven years before. And he knew Harry didn't know that the soldiers' legs were missing because they were walking on the course of the old Roman road, which was beneath the cellar floor.

Possible answer

I think that Harry's experience was probably the result of, maybe, overwork. I can't believe this actually happened.

Style extra

Using onomatopoeic words will help give life to your writing.

Suggested answers

Chains were described as 'rattling' and the Roman soldiers as 'murmuring'.

creak – wooden floors

tinkle – a bell; broken glass

squelch – mud

rumble – thunder, train on track crunch – gravel or crisp snow when walked on slash – an angry person cutting cloth viciously with a knife slap – waves on the beach, hand against face slam – a door

click – door lock

hiss – steam, a snake

growl – angry dog, people

screech – parrot, brakes

drip – a tap

peal – bells, laughter

slither – snake moving smoothly, person sliding down or across something smooth

a creaked b squelched c slashed d slithered

e crunches f dripping g tinkled h hissed

Possible answer

I was lying in bed at home one night – all alone, except for my dog, as, for once, my family had gone out for the evening to a concert. It was a cold, rainy evening and the shutters had begun to bang against the side of the bedroom wall. I could hear the wind getting up and it howling down the chimney. Suddenly, I heard something tinkle, like glass breaking, then a crunch. I turned over, determined not to be spooked by this. Then, there was a creak. This is when I began to get worried, as I knew the third stair from the bottom always creaked. Betsy began to growl softly and then I knew that something was really wrong. I reached for my mobile phone.

5 Read through the text, which explains what a poltergeist is.

- 1 B is correct. A is when something is written in stone or metal; C is written in a meeting; D is for a course or in school.
- 2 A is correct because the text goes on to give the translation of the word.
- 3 C is correct. Turned over means 'being put upside down'.
- 4 D is correct because it is the only verb here that is reflexive.
- 5 B is correct because it collocates with 'rules'.
- 6 A is correct because 'spontaneous' is the only one which can be used with an object.
- 7 A is correct because it gives the meaning of 'started'. B, C and D need the preposition 'from'.
- 8 D is correct because it has the idea of future ability.

Reading into Writing: Full Task 2

1 The photos are of Abraham Lincoln and John F. Kennedy, both American presidents.

Possible answer

I think that these coincidences are really very interesting. However, it has been shown that, what people think is 'a once in a million chance' of something happening has a good probability. Take, for example the coincidence of people having the same birthday in a small group. It is actually more common for up to three people to have the same birthday in a group of, say, twenty people, than you would think.

2 These are common expressions.

Talk of the devil! – said when you mention someone and they then appear to have a guardian angel – said about the feeling that there is someone you can't see who protects you
It's a small world – said about a coincidence involving people known to both speakers to have second sight – to be able to know what will happen in the future female intuition – a feeling about something that might happen that women are supposed to have a feeling of déjà vu – a feeling of being in a place you've visited before or of experiencing something that has happened before a sixth sense – a feeling that you have that tells you something isn't quite right – rather like intuition but used by both sexes

3 Read through each text carefully.

4 Look through the texts again in order to find the words and describe which part of speech they are.

speak out (phrasal verb) outspoken anonymity (noun) anonymous, anonymously disturbing (adjective) disturb, disturbance, undisturbed, disturbed, disturbingly conscious (adjective) unconscious, unconsciously, subconscious, consciousness impression (noun) impress, impressive, unimpressive, impressively, impressionable dismissed (past participle) dismiss, dismissive, dismissal

5

- a outspoken b dismissive c anonymous d disturbance
e impressionable f subconscious

Suggested areas for improvement

- 1 The answer is too short – slightly over length answers are not penalised, but answers that are too short are.
- 2 The answer uses abbreviations (etc., e.g.) rather than words (and so on, for example).
- 3 For each text, only one point is mentioned but there are always two.
- 4 There is a lack of paraphrase i.e. the student has copied what is in the text – e.g. ring up, embarrassed.
- 5 The language used is very simple – more complexity is needed.
- 6 There is no adequate conclusion and the student seems to have ended in the middle of a paragraph.

Suggested improved answer

The two texts discuss the arguments supporting and refuting the idea of coincidence, whether they are evidence of the paranormal or can be explained on a purely rational level. Text 1 puts forward the idea that people react to coincidence in one of two ways. At worst, they are extremely uncomfortable at the thought of being stigmatised as an idiot, or, at best, they are troubled by a worrying occurrence.

Personally, I see myself in the latter category. I heartily agree with the writer that it is important to find out the truth behind a worrying occurrence or coincidence. I think that most people have experienced a feeling of déjà vu, and it can be unnerving, especially if they see themselves as quite sensible, level-headed types. It's hard to know where these feelings spring from, but I tend to think they are past memories of possibly a similar place or occurrence coming to the fore.

Text 2 mentions that people are first of all alerted through their senses to something not being 'quite right'. These feelings are generally thought to be ludicrous, especially given that time has shown that science can explain things which were previously thought to be mysterious.

I'm in two minds about how much science can explain. While I am by no means a gullible person, I still believe there may be room for the unexplained. I have never actually narrowly avoided a plane crash, but I do know people who have escaped serious injury through pure chance. Many coincidences can be easily explained away and the scientific theory of probability has gone a long way to disabusing people of how often some coincidences happen. However, I still believe that there are some things which are not easily explained. (292 words)

Reading

- 2 Scan the text to find out what impression Bill Bryson gives of life in the USA.

Possible answer

He gives the impression of someone who is fairly happy to be back in his own country, but with reservations. He is enjoying playing with new toys.

Background information

Bill Bryson was born in Des Moines, Iowa in 1951. From 1977, he lived for many years in England with his English wife and family. He then moved back to the States, but has returned to live in England again with his family. His best-selling books include The Lost Continent (about America), Mother Tongue (about the English language), Neither Here nor There (about travelling in Europe), Notes from a Small Island (about Great Britain) and Down Under (about Australia).

- 1 D is correct because he talks about her enjoying simple pleasures like iced water and she thinks the waitress is just being nice to her, not everybody she meets. A is wrong because although he mentions food he doesn't say anything about it. B is wrong because she does get things for nothing, but nothing suggests that she might not be happy if she didn't. C is wrong because he says she is 'slavishly uncritical'.
- 2 A is correct because he thinks a National Health Service is more important. B is wrong because he doesn't mention money. C is wrong because he doesn't criticise the way things are done. D is wrong because he doesn't imply that it is a waste of time, just rather pointless.
- 3 A is correct because it does everything it is supposed to do. B is wrong because he doesn't mention anything about free time. C is wrong because there is no comparison made between what he thought it would be like and what it is like. D is wrong because there is a bit of a fuss when you put in chopsticks and coffee grounds.
- 4 C is correct because he talks about only attempting this when his wife is out of the house. A is wrong because he isn't irritated so much as horrified. B is wrong because he isn't mending the machine for his wife, but because he himself has been playing with it. D is wrong because, although he tries a wider variety of garbage, he doesn't say it should take it.
- 5 A is correct because they make children feel intimidated. B is wrong because the incidents do not actually happen. C is wrong because there is no competition. D is wrong because there is no mention of real arguments.
- 6 B is correct because effusive means enthusiastic. A is wrong because he isn't critical of his home. C is wrong because nostalgic means thinking fondly about the past and he is talking about the present. D is wrong because he isn't angry about anything.

4 Some of these phrases are put in for humorous effect.

- a I don't want to start being too serious here

Uses of have, get and go

1 Cartoons which play on words are popular in English.

The words tow and toe have the same pronunciation – it's a play on words.

To give someone a tow means to tow their car for them, i.e. pull it using a rope or chain.

A toe is what you have on your foot. A chiropodist is someone who looks after feet.

The first driver doesn't want to mend the vehicle himself.

2 You should be familiar with the construction have/get something done, so this should be revision.

a have b get c got d had e has/gets f get

3 Go is often tested in Paper 1.

a down with b in for c on d over/through e for f out g off h with i without j off be spent on = go on

ebb = go out

fetch = go for enter (a competition) = go in for become ill with = go down with explode = go off

match = go with go sour = go off examine = go over/through manage without = go without

4 Remember to count the number of words you write. It must be between three and eight words.

1 promotion has gone to Penny Stone's

Recording script 2.16

Terry: Dr Morris, thanks for lending me that book on eccentricity. I really enjoyed it – especially that bit about Oscar Wilde taking a lobster on a lead for walks and that American-Indian guy who spends his life walking backwards. Oh, and, of course, we all know nowadays from new research that this sort of behaviour has nothing in common with what used to be called lunacy. But it was a bit of an eye-opener that eccentrics are renowned for their longevity. The book reckons that eccentrics don't repress their inner nature and therefore suffer less stress!

Dr Morris: That's right, Terry. They are happier as a result and their immune systems work more efficiently. Anyway, what I've always believed is that human behaviour ranges from absolute conformity, at the normal end of the spectrum, to utterly bizarre non-conformity at the opposite end. Though exactly how much deviation from the norm it takes to qualify as a true eccentric is a bit of a vexed point.

Terry: So, actually we are all eccentrics to a greater or lesser extent?

Dr Morris: That seems to be right. The question of what is normality is pretty personal. We have all had the experience of talking with a friend who tells us that he has just met someone with the most bizarre or risqué habit – only to hear described something which we ourselves routinely do or might wish to do.

Terry: I enjoyed the chapter on innovation in the book. Eccentrics seem to be able to see problems from new and unexpected angles and they can then make imaginative leaps. So, does the man in the street always react negatively to eccentricity?

Dr Morris: Well, we all love eccentrics and yet we are profoundly ambivalent about them. Our collective imagination is piqued by the bizarre behaviour of someone like, for example, Howard Hughes, once the richest man in the world, who lived the last days of his life like a mystical hermit. Eccentrics have thrown off the constraints of normal life to let themselves do exactly as they please – and anyone who doesn't like it can get on with it.

Terry: The book said only about one person in every 5-10,000 is a classic full-time eccentric and most exhibit traits from an early age. They seem to share five traits: being non-conforming; creative; strongly motivated by curiosity; idealistic; and obsessed by one or more hobbyhorses. Non-conformity seems to be the principal characteristic.

Dr Morris: True, though hobbyhorses also feature highly. There was an eighteenth-century aristocrat with a love of animals called Jack Myers. One time havoc broke loose at one of his dinner parties, when he appeared in full hunting costume, mounted on his bear. In the ensuing panic, while his friends jumped out of windows or clambered behind chairs, Myers called out ‘Tally-ho’ and spurred his mount, which turned impatient and ate part of his leg.

Terry: Amazing! I think I’ll have to go into this in more detail now.

Dr Morris: You should. I came across some new findings recently that participants in a study of eccentrics were more likely to endorse what for a better expression we call ‘magical thinking’ – dreams that portend the future, déjà vu, things like that. They tend to focus their attention on their inner universe at the expense of social or even self-care needs.

Terry: Could you lend me that research, do you think?

- 5 Read the information in your book. Hesitating, as long as it is in English, is acceptable, as long as it isn’t for too long! Time yourself when you do the activity. You have two minutes each on your subject.

Possible answer – Task A

Personally speaking, I think it is better to conform, as this will help your life go more smoothly. I really admire people who try to be different, who maybe don’t get married, but live together, who wear weird clothes or have strange hobbies, but in general you have fewer problems if you conform. If you want to be different, then it’s better to live in a large city, like London or San Francisco. There, people don’t seem to mind so much that your behaviour may be a little eccentric. If you live in a small village, then everyone will comment on what you do and what you wear and you might end up ostracised by the villagers. This is no way to live your life as you need as many friends as you can get. Having a strange hobby is probably not so much of a problem as not getting married or wearing funny clothes. As long, that is, as you haven’t got an anti-social hobby like keeping rats or twenty killer dogs!

Sample answer

A strange being stood stock still in the middle of the road. There was mist swirling around and it was impossible to make out who or what it was, but I swear I could see horns on its head and a pair of evil, red eyes. As I rammed on the brakes, the radio crackled and went dead. I sat there for a moment, staring in the gloom, trying to work out what was ahead. Then, steeling myself, I sounded the car horn repeatedly and drove towards the ghostly creature, which thankfully bounded off across the moorland as I approached. (100 words)
