Some important American holidays

Independence Day: A long time ago, a large part of North America used to belong to Great Britain. Then, in 1776, the people in North America decided that they didn't want to be part of Great Britain anymore, and they fought against the British. The United States became independent on July 4th. This is a day that Americans celebrate every year. Most people take the day off, and there are big parades in every American city.

Veterans Day: This is on November 11th. It's a day when Americans remember the soldiers and other people who have fought for their country. Sometimes old soldiers visit schools at this time of year to talk to students about their experiences.

Thanksgiving Day: On this day, families come together to enjoy a big meal and to say "thank you". Thanksgiving Day is always on a Thursday, at the end of November. Most people don't like to be by themselves at this time of year – they want to be with their families. Some people give gifts to each other, and many people decorate their homes with flowers.
